Striking Scorekeeper Knows the Ups and Downs of Judo

SASKATOON (CP) — Looking at Monica Fisher, you'd have a sneaking suspicion something was different but you wouldn't be able to say what.

Twenty-two, she tips the scales at 150 pounds, is a sleek five feet, 6½ inches tall and measures 40-26-38. And she exudes a subtle feeling of great strength.

She has a black belt in judo.

An attractive redhead in her third year of physical education at the University of Saskatchewan, she has had her first-degree in the black belt for about a month and is one of 11 women in Canada to attain this rank.

"Well, I saw all the guys doing it and, being me, thought that if they could do it, why couldn't I?"

She was helping with the scorekeeping of the Canada Winter Games judo tournament, one more involvement in a sport she has been in for four years.

"It has done tremendous things for me," she said in an interview. "I' m unafraid to venture out at night by myself and there's the added benefit of the conditioning provided by judo.

"It's not like swimming. That develops the shoulders more than anything. Judo develops all the muscles. I know if I didn't go in for athletics I'd be a fat blob."

Judo for women is a far cry from judo for men, she said, primarily because of physiological differences.

"Women have a lower centre of gravity, our hips are wider, we have less arm strength and we tend to bruise more easily.

"You'll see a lot of foot sweeping in the men's competition but it's discouraged for women. It's not very attractive for a woman to walk around with black-and-blue legs."

Like most women, said Monica, she first became interested in judo because of the self-defence aspect. And, like most women, she did not realize the intense, almost religious, dedication required for high development.

Now she's capable of teaching judo, she doesn't take her students far until they have learned what will be demanded of them.

"Until they've discovered this, I don't even bother with the basic break-falls."

Monica said she would like to visit Japan, the homeland of judo, but "I really can't afford it."

"How far would I like to go? Well I'd like to go as high as I could, perhaps even to the point of forming a women's judo organization. But it doesn't look too hopeful at the moment."

Fighters in Centre Of Canada Games Ring

SASKATOON (CP) — It was the turn of the fighters to take over the Canada Winter Games Monday, led by judo champion Doug Rogers and a featherweight boxer who takes a teddy bear mascot to the ring with him.

Rogers, 30, of Vancouver, an Olympic silver medallist, easily won the heavyweight gold, beating unknown Glen Manion of Ardoch, Ont., making his first appearance in a national competition.

Featherweight Don Wilson of Edmonton, 18, who says he would quit boxing if he ever lost his mascot, advanced to the final of his division by scoring a first-round win over Harold Hussey of St. John's, Nfld.

Boxing, judo and fencing were the only medal-producing events Monday in the 10-day sports spectacle which brings together more than 2,100 athletes from the 10 provinces and two territories. The Games end Sunday.

Ontario still leads the medal standings after four days of competition with 20 golds, 14 silvers and 12 bronzes. British Columbia is second with nine golds, seven silvers and 12 bronzes while Manitoba holds down third with a 5-5-7 collection.

The judo events ended Monday, leaving only 11 sports on the Games' calendar. Figure-skating, synchronized swimming, speedskating and weightlifting finished Sunday.

Boxing, fencing and men's curling events conclude today, but hockey will get under way in the 3,500-seat Saskatoon arena where the figure skaters performed before packed houses.

In fencing, Ontario needs only to win in the epee today to make a clean sweep. Ontario had already won the men's and women's foils. Brian King of Ottawa won the individual gold in the sabre competition while leading Ontario to the team gold.

Quebec won the fencing team silver with a 6-1 won-lost record, while Manitoba was third with 5-2. Quebec's only loss came in a key match against Ontario. The turning point was when King beat Montreal's Imre Nagy.

The Montrealer became so enraged when King rallied to win, he kicked his mask across the gym.

Rogers was making his first appearance after a four-year layoff and admitted he "wasn't in my best shape."

"My opposition here was mostly on the defensive. I've always had this trouble with Canadians. Guess my reputation has preceded me."

Andy Hart of Toronto threw Ron Lappage of Edmonton to win the gold in the open class. Lappage suffered a rib separation and was taken to hospital for treatment and released.

Two other Alberta fighters reached the finals in boxing, the only Games' sport that awards medals to losers. At the semi-final stage, automatic bronze medals go to losers in all bouts. Boxing also awards a gold and silver medal in each weight division.

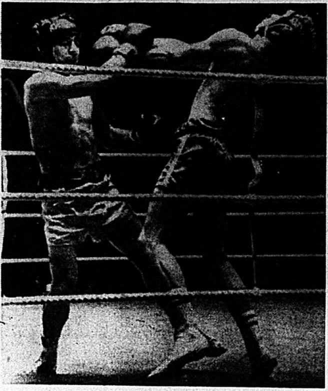
Bill Titley, 27, of Winterburn, Alta., beat lightweight Harrison Rees of Kitchener, Ont., while Dennis Belair of Edmonton defeated Leo Pelletier of Dalhousie, N.B., in a welterweight bout.

Meanwhile, the first contingent of skiers arrived Monday for the skiing events at man-made Blackstrap Mountain which get underway Wednesday.

They were to get their first taste of the 300-foot mountain 25 miles south of here during practice runs today.

Fears that mild weather of the last few days would work against officials trying to prepare the slopes for the five-day competition were somewhat eased when snow began falling in the area late Monday night.

A base of four to five feet of snow has been maintained with snow-making equipment and Blackstrap ski pro Ken Coupe says the events will be staged "no matter what happens."



Fight Finisher

Games Athletes 'Secure'

SASKATOON (CP) — Paul Machibroda, the young engineer who built a mountain for the Canada Winter Games, admitted Monday he may have built only a hill.

"In true terms, I suppose it could probably be called hill." Machibroda said of his creation, 300-foot Blackstrap Mountain, site of the skiing events which start Wednesday 25 miles south of here.

"But the elevation is 2,080 at the top, so maybe that qualifies as a mountain."

Since the mountain, or hill, was completed at a cost of $400,000 last year, it has been the butt of many jokes, mostly by easterners at the expense of westerners. One Eastern Canada observer described it as a prairie molehill with all the impact of a wart.

But none of this bothers Machibroda, a muscular 35, who says simply:

"It's there. It's a fact. I can only smile."

Standing at the foot of Blackstrap, which overlooks Blackstrap Lake, also man-made, Machibroda said.

"They don't teach you how to build a mountain in college."

But they did teach him the principles of road building and fill construction and that's all he needed, plus a little imagination.

Blackstrap, a small valley made by a glacier cut, had one important advantage: It already had a hill—not a mountain—which rose 150 feet.

"All we did was add another 150 feet to it, and we had our mountain," Machibroda said.

It took two years, and tons of soil scooped from nearby fields, to pile on the extra height. The mountain had to be shaped, and the fill packed and hardened, so it wouldn't someday slump or split apart.

Machibroda, who graduated in 1960 from the University of Saskatchewan, said the man-made hilltop rests on glacial clay fill, a solid mixture that will keep the mountain in one place.

To cap the hill and make a mountain required between 700,000 and 800,000 cubic yards of soil. The base covers almost seven acres and the average slope of the main ski area is 26 degrees. There are two ski tows and a 50-metre jump.

The dictionary may have the last say on whether Blackstrap is a mounain or a hill. "Natural elevation of the earth's surface, large or high, and a steep hill," is one dictionary definition.

Says Machibroda:

"Whether it's a mountain or a hill—to me, it was a challenge."

Vezina Race Two Team Goalie Affair

MONTREAL (CP) — The race for the Vezina Trophy, symbolic of goaltending supremacy in the National Hockey League, currently is a contest between Chicago Black Hawks and New York Rangers.

Statistics released today by the NHL show that both the Hawks and Rangers have allowed 134 goals in 57 games, an average of 2.35 per game.

Tony Esposito, the Black Hawks' No. 1 netminder, leads the league in shutouts with five while Ed Giacomin and Gilles Villemure of the Rangers each have four shutouts. Gerry Desjardins, Chicago's other goaltender, has not posted a shutout so far this season.

Third spot in the goaltender's race belongs to Boston Bruins goalies Ed Johnston and Gerry Cheevers, who have allowed 143 goals between them in 55 outings. Their average is 2.60

St. Louis Blues are fourth in the Vezina Trophy race with a 2.61 average. Glenn Hall and Ernie Wakely have allowed 144 goals in 55 games.

The worst team average belongs to Los Angeles Kings, currently in sixth spot in the West Division. The Kings goaltenders —Jack Norris and Denis DeJordy—have let in a total of 205 goals in 54 games for an average of 3.79.

The best individual average belongs to Jacques Plante, the veteran goaltender of Toronto Maple Leafs.

Plante, 42, has appeared in 33 games with the Leafs, allowing 64 goals for an average of 1.99. Plante has recorded three shutouts and shared a shutout with Bruce Gamble Jan. 2 when the Leafs crushed Detroit Red Wings 13-0.

Villemure of the Rangers has the next best individual mark followed by Esposito. Villemure has allowed 59 goals in the 27 games he has played for a 2.18 mark. Esposito, the former Michigan Tech standout, has an average of 2.28. He has been beaten for 88 goals in 39 appearances.

Meanwhile, in the scoring race, Phil Esposito stretched his first-place lead to 18 points over team-mate Bobby Orr. Esposito has 48 goals and 61 assists for 109 points while Orr's mark is 26 goals and 65 assists for 91. Ken Hodge of the Bruins is third with 82 points on 34 goals and 48 assists while team-mate John Bucyk is five points back with 35 goals and 42 assists.

Chicago's Bobby Hull rounds out the top five with 38 goals and 37 assists for 73 points.

The Bruins swing into action tonight at Vancouver against the Canucks in one of two games scheduled. In other action, California Golden Seals are in St. Louis to meet the Blues.

Gentle Giant Easily Captures Judo Medal

SASKATOON (CP) — Doug Rogers, the gentle giant from Vancouver, had no serious opposition Monday en route to a gold medal in heavyweight judo at the Canada Winter Games.

He waded through three other heavyweights who really had no chance against the 1964 Olympic silver medallist, one of the few North Americans ever to attain high ranking in the black belt.

Rogers, a burly 252-pound CP Air pilot who learned his judo in Japan, took the gold with a hold-down on Glen Manion of Ardoch, Ont., formerly unknown on the national scene.

Manion then lost to Dick Wilson of Winnipeg, and had to settle for a bronze medal.

"I wasn't in my best shape today," said Rogers, 30. "I haven't fought for four years.

"My opposition here was mostly on the defensive." This, he admitted, was because his outstanding reputation might have preceded him.

"I was at my best in 1965 at the Japan student championships when I weighed 245."

Next on Rogers' schedule is the Canadian championships at Montreal May 22 and he said he is going to start some serious weight-lifting to get back in shape.

In the only other competition Monday, Andy Hart of Toronto took the gold for open judo, beating Ron Lappage of Edmonton. There was a protest on the decision, made on a throw, but it was overruled by Frank Hatashita, head referee and president of the Canadian Kodokan Black Belt Association.

Lappage suffered a rib separation, however, and had to forfeit the silver, medal to Khalid Benabdallah of Montreal.

Ontario took three golds, two silvers and a bronze; British Columbia three golds, one silver and a bronze; Quebec two silvers and two bronze; Manitoba a silver and Alberta two bronze.

In points standings, Ontario had 68 points to B.C.'s second-place 65, Quebec was third with 57, Alberta fourth with 53 and Manitoba fifth with 50. The other teams, in order, were Saskatchewan, New Brunswick, Newfoundland and Nova Scotia with a tie, the Yukon and Prince Edward Island.

No Mole Hill

SASKATOON (CP) — The athletes' village at the Canada Winter Games bulged to overflowing Monday night with more than 1,000 competitors, but security chief Bob Ferguson took it in stride.

He made room for 96 male athletes on the main floor of the empty three-storey department store, where the athletes are billeted in tents and trailer, breaking a house rule that allows only girls on the first floor.

But Ferguson strung up ceiling-high cloth partitions for the newcomers and tightened security.

"This is our crunch period, when we have the most athletes to accommodate at one time," he said. "If we pass this hurdle we're home free."

For Ferguson and his 28-man security staff, the job of being watch-guard to all these athletes is a question of philosophy.

"If you understand kids, there's no problem."

When some athletes complained about the after-midnight noise level—made by players celebrating victories with loud talk and sing-songs—Ferguson set up a recreation room in the basement that remained open until everybody was in bed, sometimes until 5 a.m. in the morning.

Ferguson, a private investigator whose firm was hired to look after security at the village, has been amazed at the operation.

"With this kind of a setup, you would expect some kind of trouble, right? But we've nad no fights, not even what you would call a disagreement among the kids."

A few basic rules are imposed. A notice to athletes warns that there will be no liquor, no smoking and "no loitering on the main floor"—that's where the female athletes sleep in trailers.

Sport Briefs

MONTREAL (CP) — Jean Beliveau, Montreal Canadiens' veteran centre who scored the 500th goal of his National Hockey League career last Thursday, is to be honored at the Forum Wednesday, March 24, during a game with Philadelphia Flyers. In making the announcement Monday the club said Beliveau has the distinction of being the Canadien with the most points — 1,196 — in the Montreal team's history.

* * *

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Mack Lee Hill, whose brief but brilliant stint with Kansas City Chiefs ended with his death in 1935, was named to the professional football team's Hall of Fame Monday night. A bust of the fullback, unveiled at a dinner of the Chief's 101 Club, will be placed in the Hall of Fame section at the Harry S. Truman Sports Complex, which is still under construction.

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — The victory famine is finished and Arnold Palmer now has his sights set on the one big one that has eluded him in his fantastic career — the Professional Golfers Association national championship. "It's pretty obvious that that's what I'm pointing for, what I've been building my season for," said Palmer, who snapped a 14-month victory drought, longest of his 16-year pro career, with a sudden-death victory over Ray Floyd in the Bob Hope Classic Sunday. It was his 56th tour victory. He has won almost everything there is to win — except the FGA. "I've been working very, very hard on my game this year, and I'm going to work even harder," said Palmer, who gave up drinking and smoking early this year. The 41-year-old millionaire, son of a Latrobe, Pa., greenskeeper, has finished second in the PGA three times, including last year when he couldn't get a charge going and lost to Dave Stockton.

MIAMI BEACH (AP) — Muhammed Ali says he will request that 15 referees be assigned to work his championship fight with Joe Frazier because "there ain't no one man who can keep up with the pace I'm gonna set, except me." Ali, training here for the March 8 battle in New York, said: "I want a fresh referee for every round. Besides, this fight is going all the way. I'm training for 15 rounds." Ali's prediction that the fight will go the distance surprised many of his followers who are accustomed to his forecasts of a knockout. "I am going to punish Joe Frazier for 15 rounds because he needs punishing," said the 29-year-old former champion. "He ain't got no respect. I told him the day we signed for the fight I would punish him for calling me Clay. I'm going to punish him for calling himself the champion, too."

Villemure Bids for Calder

Ranger Rookie Could Fulfill Hopes

NEW YORK (AP) — Two years ago New York Rangers figured they had the National Hockey League's best rookie in defenceman Brad Park. But that was the year Minnesota freshman Danny Grant set a rookie record with 34 goals.

Last year the Rangers figured they had the best NHL rookie in right winger Bill Fairbairn, who scored 23 goals and totalled 56 points. But that was the year Tony Esposito, Chicago's first-year goaltender, set a modern NHL record with 15 shutouts and won the Vezina Trophy when the Black Hawks allowed fewer goals than any other team in the league.

Now the Rangers' candidate is Gilles Villemure, whose clutch goaltending has been a major factor in New York's success this season. But Buffalo's Gilbert Perreault, the No. 1 amateur pick last summer, has 29 goals, 53 points and that could mean the Rangers' rookie will again be overlooked.

"I think it will boil down to two guys—Perreault and Villemure," says Emile Francis, general manager-coach of the Rangers. "And I'm a homer. I like Villemure."

He had plenty of reason Sunday after Villemure backstopped the Rangers to a 2-1 decision over St. Louis Blues. It was the sixth straight game for the 30-year-old rookie who carried the Rangers' netminding load alone while Ed Giacomin battled the flu bug for two weeks.

"He's been very instrumental in everything we've done this season," Francis said.

"You know, breaking in at goal is the toughest position of all."

The rookie award crosses Villemure's mind now and then.

"I'm trying to win it," he says. "It would mean a lot to me."

A year ago, while tending goal for Buffalo, he won the Hap Holmes Trophy as the American Hockey League's outstanding netminder for the second straight year. Official presentation of the Trophy was made at the New York Hockey Writers luncheon Monday.

Francis, criticized in the past for overworking Giacomin during the regular season, has studiously avoided doing that this time around. Sunday's game against St. Louis was Villemure's 27th. Giacomin has played 31 games.

Villemure's goals-against average is 2.18 and Giacomin's is 2.36.

Ontario Teams Appear Strong At Quebec Peewee Tournament

QUEBEC (CP) — The annual Quebec international peewee hockey tournament enters its fifth day today with Ontario teams placed strongly in the AA class and Quebec numerically strongest in the other classes.

Of 12 contenders still in running for the AA title, Ontario claims six while Quebec teams dominate in the other three divisions.

In AA play Monday Toronto Don Valley defeated Toronto Christie 3-2, Toronto Red Wings blanked Toronto Leaside 5-0, Ottawa dump Montreal Ahuntsic 4-2, Boston beat Montreal Hochelaga 7-3, Quebec Citadelles down Burnaby, B.C., 6-3 and Montreal Rosemount nip Quebec Les Saules 4-3 in overtime.

In group A, Verdun, Que., edged Barrie 2-1, Pointe Claire, Que., beat Hull, Que., 4-3, St. Hyacinthe, Que., whipped Charlesbourg, Que., 8-1, Gloucester, Ont., hammered Valleyfield, Que., 8-2 and Peterborough scored a 4-2 win over LaSalle, Que.

Edmundston, N.B., downed Pointe Gatineau, Que., 3-2, Dorval, Que., whipped Hershey, Pa., 5-1 and Richmond Hill, Ont., eliminated Oromocto, N.B., from further contention with a 4-1 win over the New Brunswick team in class B play.

The only European entry in this year's tournament, the Canadian Forces team from Baden-Soellingen, West Germany, opened its visit with a 3-1 victory over Labrador City, Nfld, in class C action Monday.

In other group C play, Quebec Indians edged Waterloo, Ont., 4-3, Buckingham, Que., beat Richmond, Que., 5-1, Camp Borden, Ont., scored a 3-1 win over Caughnawaga, Que., Indians and Thornhill, Ont., whipped Kentville, N.S., 5-1.

After Monday's action, only eight of the 53 teams still in contention for the tournament's grand championship were from outside Quebec and Ontario.

Boston in group AA was the only American entry still in action while British Columbia, with two teams left, New Brunswick with three, and the Northwest Territories with one were also well behind the leading provinces.

Marc Ouellet scored three goals and Daniel Bouchard added a pair for the Citadelles in their victory over Burnaby. John Swan, Don Fraser and Derek Wicklund were the scorers for the British Columbia team.

Rosemount got an overtime goal from Richard Mainville to claim its victory against Les Saules.

Danny Brushett and Alain McElligott scored for Verdun in its win over Barrie which got its only goal from Bob Coulson.

Pointe Claire scorers against Hull were Don Boyd, Bob Davies, Gary Corcoran and Ian Wilkinson, Jacques Brisebois, Alain Prud'homme and Robert Sarrasin were the Hull marksmen.

Paul Lacey, Larry Byers, Tom Cerolamy and Blair Larock were the Peterborough marksmen against LaSalle which got its only goal from Sylvain Guimond.

In Edmundston's win over Pointe Gatineau, Yves Grandmaison, Pierre Violette and Jean Ringuette fired a goal apiece and Yves Dauray and James Bridges replied for Pointe Gatineau.

Two goals by David Forbes led Richmond Hill to victory over Oromocto. Mike Gallaugher and Dan Jones contributed a goal each with George Wood providing the only Oromocto score.

Theodore Fontaine, with a pair of goals, Real Leblanc and Armand Petiguay powered Quebec Indians to their triumph over Waterloo which got single goals from Marc Alarie, Pierre Belanger and Hugh Norris.

Reg Pitts scored twice to lead Baden-Soellingen while Bob Cooper added a single goal as the Canadian Forces team from Germany downed Labrador City. Bruce Bullen counted the only goal for the Newfoundland team.

Goals by Rose Gotdon, Paul Ralph, Matthew Halpin and Brian Anderson gave Thornhill its win over Kentville. Wayne Comeau scored a single in a losing cause.

Hull Changed Hockey Style Himself

CHICAGO (AP) — To hear Bobby Hull talk, he's just getting the hang of the game.

The 32-year-old Golden Jet, a recognized National Hockey League star since he joined Chicago Black Hawks as a teenager, picked up two goals in a 3-1 victory over Vancouver Canucks in Chicago Stadium Sunday night.

BOBBY HULL

He now has a career total of 546, moving him ahead of the retired Maurice (Rocket) Richard and into second place in all-time goal production.

Gordie Howe, who will be 43 next month, is No. 1 with 782 career goals and is still scoring for Detroit Red Wings.

"I don't expect to live long enough to score as many goals as Gordie," said Bobby. "But my approach to hockey has changed."

"I just don't run all over the ice on those rink-length dashes," explains Bobby. "Now I skate my wing, check my man and let the offensive opportunities come where they may."

The change came, Bobby says about midway last season when the Hawks were on their unprecedented move from last to first place in a single NHL season.

"Bobby made the statement then that he felt he wanted to contribute more to the team's over-all effort," says coach Billy Reay. "It's not true that we suggested that he concentrate on two-way play and make a style change because he missed the season's first 12 games.

"People made a lot out of it because we had made such a complete switch as far as giving up goals was concerned. Better defensive play by Bobby and the other forwards was part of that, but the biggest difference was that we had Tony Esposito in goal and Keith Magnuson and Bill White on defence."

Bobby says he discovered games were easier when he concentrated on staying in position.

Lancers Lifted

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Mark O'Hara and Vic Herbert scored third-period goals Monday night to lift the University of Windsor Lancers to a 3-3 tie with the University of Waterloo Warriors in an Ontario-Quebec Athletic Association hockey game.

The tie prevented Warriors from clinching at least a tie for first place in the O-QAA's Western Division.

Pay Ducharme got the other Lancers goal with Roger Kropf scoring twice and John Hall once for Waterloo. Lancers moved into fourth place tie with McMaster Marauders.

Helmet No Help

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Bill Goldsworthy refuses to credit his new helmet for a recent National Hockey League scoring spree that has given him 13 goals in 13 games for Minnesota North Stars.

"It's too hot," Goldsworthy says of his new plastic hat.

"But I'll probably keep wearing it. I've been knocked out three times now and that's enough."

Goldsworthy started wearing the helmet Jan. 21 against St. Louis Blues and took off on his scoring streak.

The helmet, long disdained by some NHL teams, seems to be accepted by the North Stars.

With Goldsworthy's conversion, the North Stars are dressing six players with helmets for the unofficial league lead in that department.

Other helmeted players are Charlie Burns, Bobby Rousseau, Murray Oliver, Barry Gibbs and Danny Lawson.

The long-standing argument against headgear in a game of high-velocity pucks and jarring collisions has been that helmeted players lose crowd appeal.

"I don't see how you can lose your identity by wearing a helmet," said Burns. "The fans get to know you by the way you make your moves. I wear a helmet because I have to."

Burns has a metal plate in his head as the result of a skull fracture in 1954 that nearly cost him his life.

The case for the helmet has grown since Bill Masterson of the North Stars died in 1968 after he fell during a game. Some have said a helmet might have saved his life.

Happy Motoring

TORONTO (CP) — The British Empire Motor Club confirmed Monday results of its weekend Canadian international winter rally, won by Bruce and Betty Schmidt of Tavistock, On.

The long delay in making the results official was due to numerous protests from competitors who were hampered by a snowstorm that made some roads impassible on the rally route from here to Ottawa and back.

SYDNEY, Australia (Reuter) — The fate of the Ashes was still in the balance here today after the initiative swung rapidly between Australia and England on an eventful fourth day in the seventh and final cricket test.

Australia, needing 223 runs for a victory which would enable it to draw the series at 1-1 and retain the Ashes, mythical symbol of world cricket supremacy, was 123 for five at the close with two days remaining.

England saw its hopes apparently fade earlier today when their last six batsmen added only 73 before the side was all out for 302. Its prospects suffered a further blow when fast bowler John Snow was taken to hospital with a multiple dislocation of the little finger.

Snow crashed into the fence after dismissing Australian opener Ken Eastwood before Australia scored.

But the England attack subsequently took command of the situation and romped through half the Australian batting order before close.

Snow, the spearhead of the England pace attack, appeared unlikely to bowl again in the match after England manager David Clark said the bowler would have an operation on his finger.

But despite the loss of Snow, splendid spin bowling by England captain Ray Illingworth, with able suport from pacemen Peter Lever and Bob Willis, left Australia struggling at close.

Australia's plight would have been worse but for a stumping effort by the normally dependable Alan Knott who missed fellow wicket-keeper Rodney Marsh in the final half-hour.

RCA FreeForma: stereo for freedom-loving

Shouldn't you say how your new stereo should look? RCA's FreeForma is four 19½" cubes you can arrange any way you want. Change your room around, FreeForma changes with you. Try four cubes in the middle of the room, like a coffee table. Or maybe, you'd like wall-to-wall stereo this week? FreeForma's for freedom-lovers. Feel free. RCA's Quant/Aural Sound: the optimum relationship between form and function. Sound no longer depends on the shape of the cabinet. Two of the four FreeForma cubes hold Quantaire speakers — air-suspended in sealed enclosures to bring out the deepest, richest bass notes. Balanced sound, with bass that won't fade away. Another Forma cube houses an RCA Quantum chassis — 60 watts of power plus FM/AM/FM Stereo radio. Cube number 4 is optional. Pick a Garrard turntable. Or choose a Stereo 8 player or a Stereo cassette recorder/player cube. And go for liberated colors, like Pumpkin and Snow.

DCA Transfer Breaks Losing Streak, While Hotelmen Keep Rolling

DCA Transfer gained a moral victory at least despite the 1-1 score in the Quinte Hockey League contest with Central Taxi last night. The tie represented the first time in 16 league and play-off games this season that DCA has not been beaten.

Jim Drummond's unassist-goal at the 42 minute mark gave the last place finishers a 1-0 lead in the series second game.

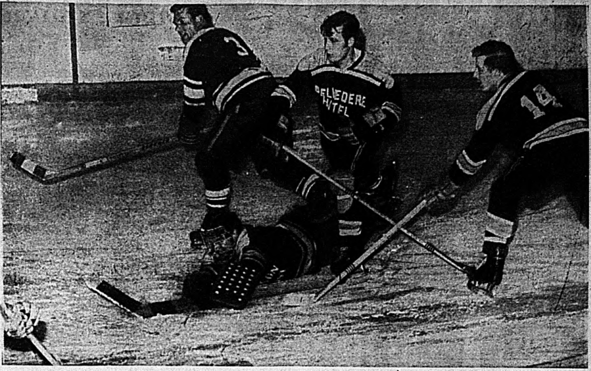
Central's Ted Schwager prevented the Taximen from absorbing an upset loss by scoring with six minutes remaining to play in the game.

DCA collected five of the six penalties assessed.

If the Transfer team stepped out of a pattern last night, Belvedere Hotel stayed in one as they took a 4-2 decision from Stinsons to lead their best-of-seven series two games to none.

A pair of goals by Bill Goodfellow and one by Jack Francis gave the winners a 3-0 lead before Stinsons was able to put the puck behind goalie Dave Hicks.

Defenceman Paul Stinson cut the lead to 3-1 and Jo[illegible] added another tally before Gene Francis put the game out of reach for Belvedere.



Even the Acrobatics of Quinte MVP Winner Larry Di Pietio Couldn't Stop Belvedere's Jack and Gene Francis

Merchant Goalie 'Zeroes In'

Merchant goalie Bob Harrison continued to be the "Mr. Zero" of the Gas House league semi-finals, recording his fourth consecutive shutout against Marysville in his team's 7-0 win last night.

The Merchants now lead the series three games to none, with the other contest resulting in a 0-0 tie.

Seven different players provided support for Harrison in the victory. Goal scorers were Frank Wiles, Don Putnam, Jeff Conway, Carl Boomhower, Perry Soules, Paul Williams and Ralph Boomhower.

Each team collected two penalties.

The powerful Mostang pennant winners galloped to their fourth straight victory over semi-final series.

Bob Mulvihill led the way with three goals and an assist, while Tom Woodley had a goal and two helpers. Fred McAdam had the other tally for the winners.

Jerry Lhcas was the lone Marysville scorer.

The losers drew four penalties against two for the Mustangs.

Fairway Individuals Bid to Improve

While the weekend games with Trenton and Cobourg had no bearing on the Belleville Fairway fortunes as a team, a number of individuals were able to make significant gains.

Scoring leader Danny Lupenette was blanked in Friday's 5-2 loss to the Golden Hawks but bounced back with a goal and four assists in the Fairways 9-1 win over Cobourg.

Lupenette now has 19 goals and 23 assists and is virtually assured of a spot in the top ten league scorers. His 23 helpers have moved in one ahead of defenceman John Mulvihill in the team lead for that category.

First year defenceman Peter Ackerman has been the only Belleville Fairway to appear in all 29 games that the team has played. The only playing time missed by the outstanding defender was when he was taken to hospital in Peterborough for examination after catching a stray shot on the forehead.

Penalty-wise Brian O'Coin and Dave Horwood are at the opposite ends of the Belleville spectrum. O'Coin has passed the century mark for penalty minutes, while Horwood has not drawn a single minute when he has seen action as a utility player.

Belleville's semi-final play-off opponents, the Peterborough Lions open play today in the Canada Games at Saskatoon.

Peterborough is aligned in the "A" section of the competition along with Alberta, Manitoba, New Brunswick, Newfoundland and the Yukon.

The first two teams in each division will meet in the playoffs beginning next week-end.

Peterborough, who open their schedule against Manitoba will meet Alberta at 3.30 p.m. Saturday in a contest televised by the CBC network.

RCA's designers threw away the old stereotyped ideas of how stereo should look; came up with a look you'll like. NeoForma's shape is cool and contemporary. The colours are bright and dashing — deep blue/white and avocado green. NeoForma is built to fit your budget. And your room — it's 28½" high, 28¾" wide. The speakers can fit right in the cabinet or stand apart for further stereo separation. NeoForma's sound is what you would expect from RCA, the people who invented Quant/Aural Sound. NeoForma has a BSR turntable, and an FM/AM/FM Stereo tuner/amplifier. NeoForma — the latest addition to the RCA Forma collection.

Which Day Is Best?

☐ MONDAY ☐ THURSDAY
☐ TUESDAY ☐ FRIDAY
☐ WEDNES. ☐ SATURDAY

Advertisers frequently ask this question. Fortunately, there is no best day to advertise. Each day new wants arise, bringing new readers as old ones satisfy their wants. We recommend that you start your ad tomorrow and cancel it when you get results. After many years of experience with millions of want ads, we know tomorrow is the best day to start your ad and every day is the best day to advertise in The Intelligencer want ad leader.

TENDERS

ADVERTISEMENT AND CONDITIONS OF SALE BY TENDER

JUDICIAL SALE OF West Half of Lot 17, Concession 10, Township of Hungerford.
IN THE SUPREME COURT OF ONTARIO BETWEEN:
THE PREMIER TRUST COMPANY
Plaintiff
— AND —
LYLE STEVENSON, CHISHOLM'S (ROSLIN) LIMITED, FOXBORO DISTRICT CO-OPERATIVE ASSOCIATION and BANK OF MONTREAL (Made a party in the Master's Chambers).
Defendants

PURSUANT to the judgment and final order for sale in this cause and to the direction of the undersigned Local Master sealed tenders addressed to he undersigned and endorsed "Tender for Supreme Court Action 67/70" in accordance with the conditions of sale hereunder will be received by the undersigned up to March 1, 1971 at his chambers, Court House, Belleville, for the purchase in one parcel of the captioned property; subject to a reserve bid fixed by the Local Master

The lands comprising ninety acres are located at R.R. 3, Tweed, and on the property are said to be a 1½ storey brick house, a barn, a garage and a storage building.

CONDITIONS OF SALE:

1. The vendors shall not be required to produce any abstract of title, deed or evidence of title, other than those in their possession. The purchaser shall examine the title at his own expense and any objection thereto shall be made in writing within 15 days from the acceptance of the tender. Should no sufficient objection in writing be made within that time, the vendor's title shall be held to have been accepted. Should any sufficient objection in writing be made within that time which the vendors are unable or unwilling to remove the vendors shall be at liberty to rescind the sael in which case the purchaser shall be entitled only to a return of the deposit money, without interest.

2. All parties to the action shall be at liberty to tender.

3. Each tender shall be accompanied by an accepted cheque, payable to the accountant of the Supreme Court of Ontario, for at least ten percent. of the amount of such tender, as a deposit, and the Purchaser shall pay the remainder of the purchase price into Court to the credit of this cause on or before April 1, 1971, without interest, and upon payment the purchaser shall be entitled to a vesting order, to be obtained by the purchaser at his own expense, instead of a conveyance, and to be given possession of the property, subject to the existing tenancies.

4. The tender and acceptance and these conditions of sale, which shall be deemed to form part of such tender, shall constitute the agreement for sale.

5. Subject to a reserve bid fixed by the said Master, the highest tenderer shall be the purchaser.

6. All adjustments will be made as of April 1, 1971, the date of closing.

For further particulars apply to J. D. Templeman, Barrister and Solicitor, 17 Campbell St., Belleville, Ontario, Solicitor for the Defendant, Chisholm's (Roslin) Limited.

On the Rise

Led by increasing food prices, the consumer price index jumped by 0.4 per cent last month to 130.3, the largest month-to-month rise since July last year. All major components recorded increases between December and January with the exception of clothing and health and personal care. The index, based n 1961 consumer prices equalling 100, was 129.8 in December and 128.2 in January of last year. (CP Newsmap)

Britain Faces Showdown Over What Man's Worth

LONDON (Reuter) — Britain is in the grip of a nationa. showdown over just how much the working man is worth.

For years the symptoms of chronic strike fever and inflationary wage rises have been diagnosed abroad as "the English disease." There were 3,838 strikes last year, 95 per cent of them without official union backing, and the stoppages cost the country 11 million working days.

This month a warning that Britain will have more strikes in the first four months of 1971 than in the whole of last year was sounded by Victor Feather, general secretary of the Trades Union Congress (TUC), the British union federation.

At least a part of the current industrial unrest is brought about by the Conservative government's plan to remedy the strike situation.

It is trying to push through Parliament a bill which it hopes will give wildcat strikers pause before they quit their jobs. The main provision of the industrial relations bill is to make workers responsible in law for any damages that might arise from breaking a contract with an employer.

The bill has aroused intense opposition from militant trade unionists, who have called for a series of one-day protest strikes against it in different industries.

But there seems little doubt the law will go into force in the first half of this year.

The TUC has forecast that on Feb. 21 at least 25,000 people will take part in a mass protest in central London against the bill.

The Amalgamated Union of Engineering Workers, one of the nation's biggest with 1.4 million members, has threatened a series of 24-hour stoppages in the next few months amounting to the biggest official political strike since 1926.

Vending Machines Swindled in Britain

LONDON (CP) — Hundreds of shopkeepers complained today that the public is swindling vending machines with Britain's new decimal coins. Consumers replied that many stores have raised prices under cover of the new money.

The accusations made newspaper headlines but most Britons seemed pleased at the smoothness with which the country switched Monday from its ancient 12-penny shillings to a system similar to other decimal currencies.

In Southampton, town clerk Gordon Guest said new decimal pennies—2.4 cents—were showing up in parking meters designed to take non-decimal sixpence—six cents—of the same size.

Operators of coin laundries and tea and soda machines in several cities said they were finding decimal halfpennies—1.2 cents—in sixpence slots.

"There are probably a million coin-operated machines in the country and about 1,000 can be fooled due to age or lack of maintenance," said a spokesman for the Automatic Vending Association of Great Britain.

Workers at London airport complained that canteen coffee went up Monday from four old pence—four cents—to 2½ new pence—six cents.

The Sun newspaper, calling it "the big D—Day diddle," said there were scores of similar price increases in sandwich shops, pubs and restaurants.

There was confusion on the buses, which don't go decimal in most communities until next week. London Transport apologized to Anthony Brockwitz, 12, who was put off a bus when he offered decimal money. He had to walk three miles home.

An 80-year-old woman was turned off a bus in the Midlands city of Coventry because she did not have the correct decimal fare. She had to walk a half mile.

The Royal Mint expects about £2 million worth of old pennies to be kept as souvenirs. Another £7 million will return to banks and be melted down for their copper content.

Texas Thief Slays Three

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — A widespread alarm was out today for a 33-year-old ex-convict accused of fatally shooting three of five kidnapped deputy sheriffs. One of the surviving deputies was wounded.

The deputies, seized while investigating a burglary, were taken to a river bottom where one of their captors opened fire.

Charged with murder, the fugitive was identified as Rene Adolpho Guzman. Authorities said he had a police record for burglary and assault.

Sheriff Clarence Jones of Dallas County described the triple slaying Monday night as "no[illegible]less killing" and "an ex[illegible]tion."

Four other men were being questioned, but Jones said: "The trigger man is the one we want."

A. D. McCurley, 50, the only one of the kidnapped deputies who escaped death or wounding, said the incident began when three deputies went to a West Dallas home to question some men about a burglary.

They telephoned the Dallas County sheriff's office, asking for a blank form to be used in connection with a search for the stolen property.

Two more deputies answered the call.

McCurley said they entered the house and found the three other officers tied up in chairs with two men holding guns on them. McCurley and his companion also were tied up.

The five officers were ord[illegible] into a squad car by the two men, who put a deputy at the wheel and forced him to drive to the Trinity River bottoms.

Once they reached the river bottoms Deputy Sam Infante said in English to his fellow officers: "This is it. They're going to kill us now."

Everyone piled out of the car and Deputy Dennie Reese's bonds came loose.

McCurley said Reese told the gunmen: "There is no reason to kill us now, you have our guns."

But one man answered: "No, you can identify us."

With that, McCurley said Reese took a swing at one of the gunmen who held two pistols. Reese missed and the gunmen began firing.

Reese was cut down. McCurley dived over a bank that sloped some 20 feet to the [illegible] of the river. He stumbled [illegible] scrambled away with bullets whizzing by.

McCurley found his way to a highway and flagged down a motorist who took him to a service station. A squad car pulled up and took McCurley back to the scene of the shootings.

They found Deputy Wendell Dover in a daze and took him to hospital. Other deputies arrived and found the bodies of the other three officers.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Drinkers Require Check on Liver

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Isn't it true that some people can be heavy drinkers for years and never get cirrhosis of the liver? I have just reached 50 years and have been friends with the bottle for over 30 years.

Yet, I consider myself in good physical condition. Except for being a little tired and losing some weight, I'm okay. Would there be any sense in quitting alcohol now? — Mr. V.

COMMENT: Parting is such sweet sorrow for friends with the bottle, or with the pack of cigarettes, or any other habit that holds potential threat to health. Would there be any sense in quitting? It's often helpful to longtime smokers, it may likewise be a good resolution for longtime drinkers.

You speak of age 50 as having reached a distant goal. Remember that for many this is less than two-thirds of the distance. When the last long years of life are filled with the misery of illness (like cirrhosis for instance) which might have been prevented, then regret for what might have been intensifies the discomfort.

Now, it's true that every one who drinks doesn't get cirrhosis. It's also true that some who have never touched a drop may get it, too. One of the reasons why heavy drinkers get cirrhosis is that they do not eat properly. They get their calories from liquor and not from foodstuffs. Loss of necessary proteins and other essential ingredients in the diet at last damage the liver cells.

I believe, Mr. V., that any longtime drinker like yourself should submit to intensive liver investigation by laboratory tests and other examinations.

You say you are all right except for tiredness and recent loss of weight. You should know that cirrhosis doesn't always begin abruptly with such complaints as feeling tired, loss of appetite and weight, and sallow complexion. Early in the disease, jaundice (yellow eyes and skin) is not invariably present.

If I have been building up a frightful picture for you, Mr. V., I'm sorry — and yet I'm not. For if I can get you to your doctor for early tests, and convince you to become enemy to the bottle instead of friend, perhaps we can forestall or prevent cirrhosis in your case.

Like the heavy smoker who thinks he will "get away" without getting lung cancer, don't gamble you'll get away without cirrhosis.

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: When I go for my yearly checkup a blood test is never made. How can one get a clean bill of health without having a blood test? Sometimes even my urine isn't examined. This has puzzled me quite a bit. — Mrs. N.

Comment: It would puzzle me too. Simply ask your doctor why he omits these two of many important examinations. If you're still in doubt, ask him to refer you to a doctor who is interested in preventive medicine checkups.

Engineers Want Action On Pollution Standards

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada should not wait for global anti-pollution standards before setting its own, a group of engineers and administrators decided Monday.

But any such standards must be looked at in the face of economic reality.

Some 300 engineers, administrators and "users of water," attempting to come to grips with the problems surrounding the management of Canada's water resources, agreed that quality standards for water should be related to economics "in the broadest possible sense, but not exclusively."

Standards should be set regionally with minimum federal guides. But they should be fitted under a comprehensive umbrella such as the Canada Water Act.

The act, which provides for the establishment of water quality management areas throughout Canada, is the focus of much of the discussion at the two-day conference.

Delegates decided that standards for managing Canada's water should be established under a national code, similar to the national building code.

The objective of the standards should be translated into economic terms and incorporated into law. There should be provisions to review them as conditions change.

Earlier Monday, the environment minister of Quebec, Dr. V. C. Goldbloom, said his province would overlook political boundaries to help combat pollution.

Quebec would do its part in a national program, co-ordinated by the federal government, to protect the environment.

But the province would establish flexible clean-up timetables for industries to protect jobs that depended on the "exploitation of the environment".

Quebec, like other provinces, was faced with a "complexity and inadequacy" of legislation to control pollution, Dr. Goldbloom said.

The province would support "every effort of the federal government" to step up actions to abate pollution. "We are not willing to be a pollution haven."

Anthony O'Donohue, a Toronto alderman, said environment problems at the municipal level are much more complicated because municipalities have little control of the water flowing into their jurisdiction.

"Since our area of jurisdiction is very limited we often find ourselves in conflict with other bordering jurisdictions and with industry and outside our boundaries."

But water resources do not adhere to artificial boundaries, Mr. O'Donohue said.

Water resources must be considered on a regional basis.

Fisheries Minister Jack Davis told the delegates—mainly engineers—the time has come to take a hard line against polluters.

"I am going to take a hard line. I am going to ask you to also take a hard line. I am going to ask you to be tough on industry. I am going to ask you to help draw up tough specifications and see that they are adhered to coast to coast."

Mr. Davis said Canada will take a "disciplined approach to pollution setting high effluent standards for factories.

And the cost of anti-pollution machinery that would create such high standards will be borne by industry.

Cadmium Level High

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal scientists have discovered that the amount of cadmium, a heavy toxic metal similar to mercury, contained in foodstuffs in Canada, is higher than expected.

The smelting centre of Trail, B.C., is one of the worst areas for cadmium concentration in food discovered in an initial survey, the study says.

Of food items purchased in Montreal, Toronto and Vancouver for the study, 71 contained cadmium below .51 parts per million. Forty-four were tested at levels between .51 and one part per million, 25 were between 1.01 and two parts per million, and seven showed more than two parts per million.

Fifty-five of the 76 products containing more than .5 parts per million of cadmium were tested in the Vancouver labs and the majority of these were from the Trail area.

Sydney J. Harris Says

Artist Smaller Than Work

My column on Beethoven's birthday brought a lot of flak from readers — some of whom disagreed with my thesis that "culture" as such does nothing to improve a person's character, while others took umbrage at my estimate of Beethoven's own personal character.

Not to pursue the argument into tedium, let me simply state what I think is true about the relationship between art and character, based not only on study but also on the many writers and artists (including even a few geniuses) I have known over a long period.

In the field of the arts, a man's work represents what he would like to be; his personal life represents what he has to be. That is, the best part of every creative man goes into his work; the dross remains in his personal life. This is why so many persons are disappointed when they meet a great artist in person: he is smaller than his work.

I yield to no man in my adoration of Beethoven's genius. His last symphonies, sonatas and quartets are among the noblest productions of mankind. And he was not merely a musical genius in a technical sense -- he also deeply understood the spiritual roots of mankind. (This explains why so fine a virtuoso as Horowitz refused to play the late Beethoven sonatas, saying modestly, "I am not a philosopher.")

Bt Beethoven as a man was quite another thing. While he had his moments of goodness and graciousness, he was for the most part in the grip of a neurosis that stunted and perverted the whole spectrum of his relationships with the world. In his life he did not possess the free will that he possessed in his music; he was a victim of his own psychic past, and only in his music was he able to escape from this slavery.

As for the influence of great music, painting and literature on their audience, there is absolutely no evidence, in history or psychology, that men who are moved by these creations are made in any way "better" in their personal lives or in their careers. Most often, they use art as a "release" from reality rather than as a deeper entrance into it.

And even those who perceive the profound spiritual implications of works of art may be too physically crippled to transform this knowledge into positive acts of love; indeed, if the creator cannot do it himself, how can we expect the recipient to do so. We change only by the power of personal example, as Socrates and Jesus and St. Francis so fully understood. We do not change by preachments, ideas or symbols.

Tolstoi tried more desperately than any other genius to live up to his works, and failed. In the end, he recognized that art can point the way, but is powerless to lead us there.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For February 17

Your Birthday Today: You now switch directions, adopt new goals, and encounter unsuspected subtle barriers. Today's natives are receptive to occult influences.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Your mission in life today is to cheer yourself and people around you, or get away from those you can't help. Financial matters, even the most trivial, require checking.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Cater to your own feelings and welfare even though it may mean taking a day off to cach up. The evening is for quiet study.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Proceed with care; consider details. In passing, you'll likely hear unfounded criticism intended to upset you. Foster peace.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Do simple routines, enjoy watching the way the world turns. Avoid getting involved in a squabble. A petty item turns out to be expensive.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Stick with a set schedule regardless of all kinds of appeals. There's no rush. Let others help with heavy tasks, or put them off until another day.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): People and their doings run in course; avoid duplications. Your own judgment on money matters now is best.

SCOPRIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Keep career and personal affairs separate. Items lent today may just as well be written off. Travel is much better if you go it alone.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Whatever errors you have made lately now come back. Resolve to follow a different course as soon as you get present matters settled. Personal differneces are not lasting.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Let others come to you, even important people. Disputes seem almost automatic — unless you have the serenity to abstain.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): You can very easily talk faster than you think. Petitions projects which you submitted need no immediate follow-up; let things ride.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Everybody has his own troubles today. Try to resolve yours without help. Take a practical course, as frills merely cause complexities. Give straightforward answers to questions.

Announce New Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids...and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

Among these case histories were a variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. Relief even occurred in cases of long standing, and most important of all, results were so thorough that this improvement was maintained over a period of many months.

This was accomplished with a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a principal cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

Federal Government to Help Small Farms Become Big Farms

OTTAWA (CP) — The government is working on a plan to help small farms become big farms, Agriculture Minister H. A. Olson told the Commons Monday.

Modern technology has left the traditional small farm unable to deal with modern costs and marketing methods, reducing rural communities to poverty, Mr. Olson said.

The solution was consolidation—enabling small farms to merge—and helping farmers to make better use of the land and equipment they have.

Prime Minister Trudeau has sketched the outlines of the proposed consolidation program to provincial premiers, and provincial agriculture ministers have been invited to a meeting on the idea, Mr. Olson said.

The plan also would help aging farmers to retire with a "high degree of dignity and security, something that has not been available to them in the past."

Mr. Olson was speaking in a one-day debate on a Conservative motion asking the Commons to condemn the government's "lack of leadership which has humiliated the disadvantaged, dislocated the finances of provinces and municipalities, and caused injury and decline to our rural communities which are already seriously damaged by the government's failure to provide adequate agricultural policies."

Under House rules, the motion did not come to a vote.

Today, the House returns to committee study of the government's reorganization bill, which would authorize the establishment of an environment department and five new ministries of state.

In debate on the Conservative motion, Mr. Olson said the cabinet had authorized the consolidation plan to help farmers who "find it impossible to compete, to pay their expenses and enjoy a decent standard of living as a result of their labors."

In current government spending estimates, $10 million has been allotted to start the plan.

The minister said he intended to avoid duplication or conflict with provincial plans. But the federal program would be applied uniformly in every province and every sector of agriculture would be open to benefits.

He said he hoped to introduce details of the program in the House soon, after discussions with the provinces.

Cardinal Wants No Troops in Catholic Areas

ARMAGH, Northern Ireland (CP) — William Cardinal Conway believes British troops should halt their searches of Roman Catholic homes and withdraw from the centre of Catholic neighborhoods.

The Roman Catholic primate of all Ireland, in his first press interview since the current wave of violence began, said that "for what it is worth, I feel troops and heavy armor should not be visible except when needed on the spot."

Archbishop George Simms, Anglican primate and head of the Church of Ireland, is more inclined to leave the direction of military operations to military commanders.

"That is a security matter on which I cannot have an expert opinion," he says speaking in his grey-stone palace on a rising hill some distance from the Roman Catholic centre. "It is up to the military to make decisions."

The cardinal and archbishop work together, along with Ireland's Presbyterian moderator, to condemn the use of violence and to urge social solutions for Ulster's troubles. Both agree there is no hope of quick removal of deep-rooted animosity and cleavage within the Ulster population.

Cardinal Conway argues that "this is not a religious war—not a war about the Bible and theology." It is a conflict, he says, because of political, social, economic and cultural problems.

Asked whether priests are doing enough to avoid clashes by keeping persons off the streets, the cardinal grows impatient.

"The church is doing everything she can and a lot more than she gets credit for," he says. "Catholic church activity is intense at the grassroots and practically in every case where a riot occurs, a priest is on the ground urging people to get off the streets.

"In a great many cases they are successful. The trouble is that when not much happens, the situation is not photographed for newspapers."

Priests also are on a large number of peacekeeping committees, working with Protestant ministers who are engaged in the same task.

"Catholic bishops have time and again condemned violence in strongly-worded statements," he says.

"I myself have spoken against violence in fully-reported statements 23 times in the past two years. I have joined the heads of Protestant churches in joint television appears four times in the recent period."

The problem, as the cardinal sees it, is that troops, searching for arms, move into the small terraced houses and temperatures of the Catholic occupants rise.

"Imagine the effect on a woman in a small house if five or six soldiers, armed to the teeth, stand occupying a small kitchen," the cardinal says.

The effect is in a sense irrational and deeply emotional. Added to this frustration and sense of invasion are bad housing and heavy unemployment in the Catholic districts.

"All these factors produce a state of tension and it requires only a spark to make this tension boil over into a riot.

"After that, you have a kind of chain reaction. The riot produces increased military action and this in turn builds further resentment."

The cardinal suggests that it may take months of continuous peace to eliminate the virus of violence from Northern Ireland. He suggests, also, that authorities push ahead with a continuous program of civil rights reform "carried out with sincerity and momentum."

While "a good deal of reform legislation" has been enacted, "one must remember that there is always a time interval between enactment and visible effects of that legislation in the form of houses, jobs and new electoral boundaries."

Archbishop Simms says Ulster needs social reform rather than a political settlement. The two major groups, Protestants and Catholics, cannot be expected to see alike politically.

Bail Granted FLQ Suspects

MONTREAL (CP) — Two key figures in the Montreal terrorist trials were granted property bail Monday while a third person was sentenced to 10 months in jail for advocating the aims of the outlawed Front de Liberation du Quebec.

Mr. Justice Roger Ouimet granted bail in Court of Queens Bench to lawyer Robert Lemieux and labor leader Michel Chartrand.

In another proceeding, he sentenced Come Leblanc, a 22-year-old unemployed laborer who was found guilty Jan. 28 of advocating the aims of the FLQ. Leblanc was acquitted on two other counts: being a member of the FLQ and communicating statement on its behalf.

For Lemieux, bail meant freedom for the first time since his arrest Oct. 16 when the War Measures Act was invoked. He still faces charges of membership in the FLQ.

But the fiery Chartrand was retained in custody because he must appear today before Court of Appeal on an application for further bail in connection with a contempt of court conviction against him for an outburst earlier in the proceedings.

He also faces charges of being a member of the FLQ.

Mr. Justice Ouimet last Friday quashed charges of seditious conspiracy against Chartrand, Lemieux and three other Quebecers.

Trial on the FLQ membership charges has been postponed until the opening of the spring assizes March 1.

The five had been arrested in connection with last October's kidnapping crisis and only one—broadcasting producer Jacques Larue-Langlois—had been granted bail before Monday's rulings.

Mr. Justice Ouimet said he will hand down his decision Friday on the bail applications of author Pierre Vallieres and former teacher Charles Gagnon, who also appeared before him Monday.

He set property bail at $2,500 for Lemieux and $1,000 for Chartrand.

Paul Rose Trial Will Start Today

MONTREAL (CP) — The first witness in the kidnap-murder trial of Paul Rose was expected to take the stand today.

Rose, 27, is charged with non-capital murder in the Oct. 17 strangulation of Pierre Laporte, kidnapped Quebec labor minister.

The selection of the last three jurors for the trial was completed quickly Monday after lawyer Claude Boisvert, 34, was introduced as an observer with the right to intercede on behalf of the accused, who had been banished from the court and is not represented by counsel.

Mr. Boisvert was presented by Charles Gelinas and Marcel Cinq-Mars, presidents respectively of the Montreal and Quebec bar association.

Mr. Cinq-Mars said the observer had been given "all necessary independence of action."

Mr. Boisvert is relatively unknown in city legal circles.

He is a graduate of University of Montreal and has been practising law since 1964. He has handled a few legal-aid cases before the Court of Queen's Bench, but little else seems to be known of him.

"Because my position is sensitive and so complex, I would rather not answer any questions," he told reporters Monday. "I would prefer the information came from somewhere else."

After the jury selection was completed, Mr. Justice Marcel Nichols ordered jurors held "incommunicado" for the duration of the trial.

"Because of the original circumstances and because the accused has no representation, I want to avoid all danger of external influence," Mr. Justice Nichols said in his instructions to the jury.

"It is not an agreeable decision, but I think it is necessary.

The order means that the 12 men in the Rose jury will spend the next few weeks living in a hotel under the supervision of an officer of the court.

Before the jury selection resumed, Rose was summoned to court once again and Mr. Justice Nichols repeated his offer to readmit the former teacher if he apologized for his previous insulting behavior and promised to behave.

Rose, who had been acting as his own lawyer when banished from the court a week ago, spurned the offer for a third time.

"I gave you a clear enough answer last time," he said.

Mr. Justice Nichols told the accused he would not be called to court again but could send word if he changed his mind.

Teachers' Walkouts Continue in Montreal

MONTREAL (CP) — Rotating walkouts by French-speaking Roman Catholic school teachers were to continue in Montreal today while talks between the Quebec Teachers Corporation and the education department were to resume in Quebec City.

Five thousand members of the Alliance des Professeurs de Montreal met Monday and rejected by an "overwhelming majority" the idea of a general strike on the job reclassification issue which caused them to begin their walkouts Jan. 25.

However, they announced that 1,600 teachers would withdraw their services from 55 schools run by the Montreal Catholic school commission.

The 9,500-member alliance also said that the talks in Quebec City during the weekend were "inconclusive and generally unsatisfactory." They did not comment on today's resumption of the talks.

No Increase Detected In Red Moves to South

SAIGON (AP) — The United States has stepped up its reconnaissance flights over North Vietnam slightly, but has not detected any significant increase in North Vietnamese supply movements southward military sources said today.

Meanwhile, the U.S. command announced attacks on anti-aircraft missile sites inside North Vietnam for the third successive day with unknown results.

Other sources said one additional reconnaissance flight a day is being flown over North Vietnam.

The sources said U.S. reconnaissance planes have been flying 25 to 40 missions a day over South and North Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos. But they would not say how many are flying over the north daily.

The additional flight over North Vietnam was added about the time U.S. and South Vietnamese troops started massing in the northwest corner of South Vietnam for the South Vietnamese push into Laos Feb. 8.

"We just wanted to take a good hard look and see if there was any increase in their logistics effort or whether they were southward. They're still in the said one source. "We wanted to make sure our information was more up-to-date all the time.

"On their logistics, we don't see any big significant change. They haven't moved any MiGs levels not below those of May Hanoi and Haiphong areas."

Fighting increased in the 10-day-old operation in Laos South Vietnamese forces fought three battles before dawn today and withstood a 100-round mortar barrage and ground assault on one of their bases.

North Vietnamese forces also shelled two positions of U.S. troops acting as a blocking force northeast of Khe Sanh on the South Vietnamese side of the border.

South Vietnamese headquarters said the spearhead of its 11,000-man force in Laos had advanced another mile westward and now is 15 miles from the South Vietnamese border. Some reconnaissance elements have been reported 25 miles inside Laos, around Sepone.

Nixon May Freeze Construction Costs

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Nixon is reported to be seriously considering clamping a wage-and-price freeze on the construction industry to combat inflation.

Congress granted him the power to impose temporary wage and price controls last year.

The law permits the president to set temporary maximums on wages, prices and rents at any levels not below those of May 25, 1970.

Administration sources said Labor Secretary James Hodgson will propose to Nixon today that a short-term freeze in wage and price increases be imposed on the construction industry.

He will recommend an embargo of less than three months on the basis that a longer freeze would be unfair to sectors in the industry with relatively low price and wage levels, the sources said.

Nixon gave the industry 30 days to come up with a voluntary solution to collective bargaining problems which have resulted in dangerously inflationary wage concessions of 15 per cent a year. The deadline ends today.

Egypt Agrees To UN Scheme

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The authoritative Cairo newspaper Al Ahram says Egypt has informed United Nations envoy Gunnar V. Jarring that it will pledge compliance with the Security Council's 1967 resolution on the Middle East if Israel does likewise

The reply to last week's peace initiative by Jarring urged him to obtain from Israel a pledge to "discharge the obligations contained in the resolution," Al Ahram says. It lists them as Israeli withdrawal from all territory occupied in the 1967 war, "a just solution to the Palestinian problem" and a formal declaration renouncing the use of force, territorial occupation and expansionism.

The note agreed to provide Jarring with a declaration of Egypt's intentions and promised a pledge "to uphold responsibilities stemming from the execution of the resolution" if the promise is obtained from Israel, says the semi-official newspaper.

Jarring's proposals asked for declarations of intent from Israel, Egypt and Jordan, holding indirect peace talks via him at the United Nations in New York, and asked their views on how to bring peace to the region. It also gave the Swedish diplomat's ideas on a satisfactory settlement, which is understood to include Israeli withdrawal from the Suez canal and the Sinai peninsula and stationing of UN soldiers at Sharm el Sheikh, at the foot of the Sinai, to safeguard Israeli shipping in the Gulf of Aqaba and the Strait of Tiran.

The Israelis have made clear that they plan to retain some of the occupied territory and have refused to withdraw at all without a peace treaty. Israel also doesn't want peace guaranteed by outside troops.

Foreign Minister Mahmoud Riad of Egypt pressed the Cairo representatives of the Big Four powers Tuesday on guarantees for peace, including a peacekeeping force. Soviet, U.S., British and French diplomats are to discuss the question in New York Thursday.

One Item Missing

Legislature Key Returned

WINNIPEG (CP) — After a month-long absence, the master key to the Manitoba legislative building has been returned.

Public Works Minister Joe Borowski said Tuesday the missing key arrived in the mail last week, returned by an anonymous person.

Mr. Borowski said manufacturers of the master key assured the government it could not have been duplicated.

The master key disappeared Jan. 14.

Mr. Borowski, who is also highways minister, said only one item has been reported missing from government offices since the master key disappeared "but 't's so important we don't want to discuss it."

The missing item "has something to do with auto insurance" Mr. Borowski said, apparently referring to the proposed government-run insurance plan.

Soviet Objectives Seen as Unchanged

LONDON (CP) — The Conservative government has decided to intensify its work on national defence problems, fearing that the Soviet Union is not genuinely interested in an East-West detente.

"It would be unwise to assume that a willingness to negotiate, though welcome in itself, is an indication of a change in basic Soviet objectives," Defence Secretary Lord Carrington said in a white paper issued today.

"Three apears to be no incompatibility for the Russians in simultaneously negotiating and exerting the kind of pressure which could severely prejudice East-West relations," he said.

While issuing this earning of Soviet intentions and pledging the "highest priority" in improving British military manpower, Carrington gave no indication of any sharp rise in defence expenditure.

He estimated the 1971-72 budget will total about £2,545 million (about $6,363 million), an increase from the £2,387 million (about $5,967 million) estimated last year. If the 1970-71 estimate were converted to current prices, it would have totalled £2,611 million (about $6,527 million).

He estimated that Soviet defence spending has increased by an annual average of six per cent during the last five years.

Carrington said that at Singapore "Commonwealth heads of government affirmed that the security of maritime trade routes in the South Atlantic and Indian oceans was an issue of vital importance for a large number of Commonwealth countries."

An eight-country committee, including Canada and Britain, was established to look into the matter and report back to heads of governments through Arnold Smith, Commonwealth secretary-general. At the same time, Britain reserves the right to take such action as it considers necessary to give effect to Britain's global defence policy.

While Carrington gave no indication when this committee may report, it was learned from other sources the matter is not of great urgency. The first meeting may not take place for another two weeks and the only understanding that the committee has to report back within six months.

Industrial Body Can't Be Sued

LONDON (CP) — In what appears to be a precedent-making case, the Court of Appeal has ruled the New Brunswick Development Corp. to be an arm of that province's government and therefore entitled to sovereign immunity from suit in Britain.

The appeal case followed a lower court decision last December which allowed Rex Mellenger and Louis Levin, two London-based industrial consultants, to serve notice of a writ on the corporation outside the jurisdiction of the British courts.

The writ claimed £250,000 ($625,000) as a reasonable commission payable to Mellenger and Levin for arranging introduction of the corporation to Airscrew-Weyroc Ltd.—a step which resulted in successful negotiations for the establishment of a $12.5 million chipboard plant in New Brunswick.

Mistrial Motion Planned

MONTREAL (CP) — Mr. Justice Marcel Nichols said today he will consider whether to permit a motion for mistrial to be presented on behalf of Paul Rose, charged with the kidnap-murder of Pierre Laporte.

The judge adjourned proceedings until Thursday in the slow-moving trial in which the relationship between Rose and lawyer Robert Lemieux has become a newly-complicating factor.

Another hitch developed today when Rose fired Lemieux as his defence lawyer but left him free to present a motion for mistrial "if he wishes."

Lemieux came to court with a "mandate" written by Rose in his prison cell, in which the accused reiterated that "any lawyer who represents me in my absence will be considered an enemy of the people."

However, he left Lemieux free to present a motion for mistrial and the 29-year-old lawyer immediately sought permission to do so.

Lawrence Warns Against Early Vote

LINDSAY, Ont. (CP) — Mines Minister Allan Lawrence, defeated on the last ballot for leadership of the Ontario Progressive Conservative party, says the PCs will be beaten if they call an early election without first cleaning out the cabinet and reformulating government policies.

"The public has every right to test not only the voice of the new premier but his deeds iin the legislature," Mr. Lawrence said in an interview Tuesday at his cottage near this town 120 miles northeast of Toronto.

Education Minister William Davis, who will succeed retiring Premier John Robarts March 1, defeated Mr. Lawrence by 44 votes at Friday's leadership convention after four other candidates had been eliminated.

Mr. Lawrence, 45, "disappointed but not shattered" by the education minister's victory, said: "I think there's a role for me to play in the government if they want me.

"If they don't, OK.

"I'll get behind Bill (Davis). I'm sure he realizes the problems even if some of the people running his campaign didn't."

Mr. Lawrence said the government has "too many political fences that need mending before we go into an election."

Opposition parties offer no realistic alternatives for pressing problems, he said. "But people nevertheless vote old governments out rather than new ones in."

His own future in the government?

"I have a few things I'd like to talk to Bill about.

"I could go back to practising law tomorrow," he said, adding that one reason he plans to stay is to protect the MPPs who were active in his campaign.

Community for Retarded

Province Will Spend $2.2 Million on Camp Picton

By MARGARET HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON — Local government spokesmen today had a high - spirited response as this community finally learned official details of a provincial project converting Picton's vacant armed forces base into a new-style care centre for the mentally retarded. Announcement was made jointly by Works Minister J. R. Simonett and Health Minister Thomas Wells.

The project will give Ontario a facility considered one of the most progressive of its kind in Ontario.

But, core of the elated local reaction was the future community economic potential of the scheme.

Economic highlights of the project include:

(1) A $2.2 million expenditure by the provincial government in converting the former army base, closing of which three years ago dented the local economy.

(2) Need for a staff of 450 to operate the centre — as many as possible being hired in the Picton area, said Mr. Wells.

Mayor Margaret Ackerman called the official announcement "absolutely marvellous news" which would have long-range benefits for the community.

Prince Edward County warden Allen Anderson said the project was "the best thing we've had around here" since the base closed.

And former mayor Harvey McFarland during whose last year in office the scheme took shape, triumphantly noted his predictions that the centre would be one of the largest of its kind in Ontario, had been vindicated.

The new facility, a community-type residential centre, will be named Prince Edward Heights.

Residents will live in a village setting, using the former base's married quarters which once housed a Canadian Guards battalion.

The centre will be developed over the next three years and will accommodate 600 residents. The first residents will be transferred from Rideau regional hospital school at Smiths Falls this year.

About 300 moderately and mildly-retarded school children will be accommodated in 65 houses. Adults who can be rehabilitated also will live in houses. The severely retarded will live in larger, centralized living quarters.

The village will include full educational and recreational facilities.

Mr. Wells described the facility as "one of the most progressive of its kind in North America.

"The emphasis will be placed on providing a home-like environment for residents, giving them the same opportunities and life experiences enjoyed by people of the larger community."

The centre is part of a provincial plan to move as many as possible of the retarded out of badly overcrowded hospital institutions and put them back in the community.

Mayor Ackerman said she did not foresee immediate economic results for the community. Rather, its benefits will be long range, specifically for work opportunities.

"It means more than employment," she said.

New sales of goods and houses will materialize locally as the centre is developed.

"The merchants are looking forward to its opening," she said.

Mayor Ackerman credited former mayor McFarland with a prominent role in making the project a reality.

"It was because of him that it came through," she said.

Mr. McFarland said he was "very pleased" with the announcement.

"I feel now this is just the start and it will grow. I kept saying that it would be the largest hospital for the retarded in Ontario," he said.

He recalled he had worked "very hard" on the project for nine months and that some of his announcements regarding its final shape were greeted with skepticism.

He said there had been rumors of sales of houses on the base and predictions of "only a few patients" for the centre.

A number of the centre's residents will have parents living in the Picton area, he said.

Warden Anderson said he was "terrifically pleased" with the announcement.

The new centre, he predicted, is the first of a number of economic benefits slated for Prince Edward County.

How About Snow Week?

They're running out of weeks in the year to accommodate all the proclamations requested for the observance of special occasions.

This was the comment this week of Belleville Mayor J. Russell Scott who at Monday's council meeting when asked to proclaim special weeks for education and theatre.

"There are only 52 weeks in the year but there seems to be about 102 requests for proclamations," commented the mayor.

Council went along with the requests for proclamations for both Education Week and for Theatre Week.

Arrests Slow Crime Wave

Following the arrest of 28 persons in connection with a total of 52 petty crimes, city police have reported an abrupt slowdown in cases of break and enter, petty theft and similar offences.

Four youths pleaded guilty to a total of 30 counts of break and enter in provincial court yesterday before Judge George Runciman of Brockville.

To be charged on March 2 are David Wayne Trumpour, 17, of 34 Dunbar Street, David Michael Rolfe, 17, of 236F Pine Street, Brian Campbell Globe, 17, of 27 Highland Avenue and George Duncan Theobald, 16, of 59 Dunbar Street.

Trumpour pleaded guilty to 17 counts of break and enter in Belleville, one count of joyriding, and one count of break-and-enter in Trenton. Rolfe pleaded guilty to seven counts of break and enter, Globe to three counts and Theobold to two counts.

Concerning the rash of recent cases of breakins, a police spokesman informed The Intelligencer that Rolfe and Trumpour had been arrested during the first week of February, questioned and released on bail after they had confessed to break-and-enter. They were arrested less than a week later in the home of A. A. Stevens, 26 Lesley Drive.

The 52 petty crimes included 25 cases of break-and-enter, eight thefts, 19 frauds and one case of wilful damage. Since compiling that total, police have reported an abrupt slowdown in such cases.

Interment was in the Belleville Cemetery vault.

Snow, Then Rain

AMELIASBURG (Special) — Heavy snow and severe drifting here early this morning moved in to cover the Quinte district, including Trenton and Belleville by 11.30 a.m.

In spots along the Rednersville - Carrying Place Rd. along the south shore of the Bay of Quinte visibility was down to 50 feet in spots as the storm closed in over the district just before noon.

Weather was overcast but clear in Belleville until late morning, when the snow spread in from the Toronto-Peterborough area. Gusty south-east winds accompanied the snow.

The duty forecaster at CFB Trenton predicted accumulated precipitation of two to three inches of snow and rain. The storm will taper off towards evening, after changing to freezing rain and then rain, with the temperatures rising to 35 degrees.

J. J. Morch

Prominent Industrialist Is Dead

Prominent industrialist, first commodore of the re-organized Bay of Quinte Yacht Club in 1952, founder of the Reliance Aircraft Company in Belleville, John J. Morch, died this morning in Belleville General Hospital after a lengthy illness.

Born and educated in Denmark, Mr. Morch entered the London Polytechnical Institute, graduating with a degree in aeronautical engineering. He served with the Danish Cavalry for several years, joining the ambulance corps in England between 1916 and 1918 and was manager of the London Aircraft Corporation between 1918 and 1929.

In 1929 he became chief engineer for Massey-Harris in Toronto. During the 1930s, he became engaged in gold mining exploration and development, opening the Reliance Aircraft Co. plant in Belleville in 1939.

During the second world war, he saw service as a Captain with the 9th Anti - tank Regiment.

A devoted lover of sailing, he was a major re-organizer of the Bay of Quinte Yacht Club, serving as the club's first Commodore between 1952 and 1954.

Surviving him are his wife, the former Gladys Catherine Francis: a daughter, Mrs. Colin (Doreen) Ramplee - Smith: two sons, Ian Morch, founder of the Belleville Marine Yards (Morch Manufacturing), Dr. John Morch of Toronto, and 13 grandchildren.

Funeral service will be held in the chapel of the Pinkston and Luscombe Funeral Home on Friday, Feb. 19 at 11 a.m. with Rev. David Hawkins officiating.

Interment will be in the Belleville Cemetery.

Everett Fairman Heads Committee

Everett Fairman was elected chairman of the Advisory Vocational Committee of Hastings county board of education at its inaugural meeting for this year. It is his third year in the position.

John Forbes of Trenton became vice-chairman.

The AVC committee is one of two required by statute to be set up under county board administration. The other is the advisory committee on schools for trainable retarded children.

The AVC committee advises the board on policy matters pertaining to vocational education in the schools.

Membership includes three trustees: Mr. Fairman, Mr. Forbes and James Spry.

The other two members are appointed to bring experience in industry and commerce into the committee's deliberations. Peter Klein, manager of Bancroft Lumber represents employers and Ronald Lee, safety officer at Canada Cement at Point Anne, represents employees.

The committee's meetings will be held at 7:30 p.m. on the third Monday of each month at the board office.

Control Sought Of Sign Clutter

The accumulation of signs along highway entrances to the city was a topic for discussion at city council this week.

Alderman Robin Jeffrey raised the question and asked if for the sake of appearances they might be grouped together possibly on a single post.

City engineer Wilbur Purcell agreed to look into the matter.

And two large billboard signs near the west end of the new Dundas Street bridge drew a mention from Alderman Donald Soutter who asked whether action could be taken to have them removed or possibly prevent other such signs from being erected.

IN MEMORIAM

SCOTT — In loving memory of a dear mother Lillian May Scott, who passed away Feb. 16, 1961.

Your presence is ever near us,
Your love remains with us yet,
You were the kind of mother,
Your children will never forget.

—Lovingly remembered by daughters Marie and Marjorie.

HALEY — In loving memory of a dear father and grandfather who passed away Feb. 17, 1964.

Not dead to us who loved him,
Not lost but gone before,
He lives with us in memory,
And will forever more.

—Always remembered by son Douglas, Catharine and family.

HOLLAND — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Ward Holland who passed away Feb. 17, 1969.

The rolling stream of life rolls on,
But still the vacant chair,
Recalls the love, the voice, the smile,
Of the one who once sat there.

—Sadly missed and ever remembered by wife Annie, daughter Ruby and son Kenneth of Madoc.

CARDS OF THANKS

We would like to express our sincere thanks to relatives, neighbors and friends who attended our sixty-fifth wedding anniversary. Nation Within Nation Discussed

Col. Henry Taschereau, left, Corby's public relations officer from Montreal, addressed the monthly meeting of the Belleville Sales and Ad Club, which met at the Knights of Columbus Hall last night. Quebec as a nation surviving within the Canadian nation was the basis of his talk. Club president Bruce Lynch expressed appreciation for Col. Taschereau's lengthy address.

Part-time Police Possible

Belleville some day could have part-time auxiliary police officers and even a few women on the force.

That the above two innovations were not outside the realm of possibility was indicated by Mayor J. Russell Scott at Monday's council meeting.

The mayor said that provincial regulations allow the use of auxiliary police who may number up to two for one over the regular force.

Such auxiliary officers, according to the mayor, work without pay, but wear uniforms and are sworn in, the same as regular officers. Auxiliary police are used for traffic control during parades and for other special events.

Better public relations existed between the police and the public where auxiliary police are used, was the claim.

And, according to Mayor Scott, the local police commission is prepared to consider the hiring of one or two policewomen if conditions warrant them.

Arena Canteen Shows Profit

The canteen at the Belleville Arena showed a net profit of $4,801 during its first seven months operation as a recreation - arena committee concession.

In an unaudited report submitted to city council this week, gross sales at the canteen from June to December totalled $16,528 with cost of merchandise sold amounting to $8,677, leaving gross profit of $9,650.

From this is deducted wage costs of $2,368, another $1,560 in other merchandise and $860 in capital equipment, leaving a net profit of $4,801.

Alderman Enos David said the report was commendable, but Alderman Ben Corke asked if management costs had been considered as would be the case in any normal business.

In reply Alderman Donald Soutter said the committee estimated that 20 per cent of the arena manager's time would be taken up in canteen direction. He said that for the period covered in the report, his time for canteen management would have amounted to approximately $700.

Tax Bill Reprieve

City taxpayers who this week received their interim tax bills can disregard that Feb. 26 due date for the first instalment.

The deadline for payment of the first instalment is now March 6.

According to regulations, tax bills must be in the mails 14 days before the first instalment is due, but due to a delay in receiving the bills from computer services in Ottawa mailing was delayed.

At the request of the city treasurer council Monday extended the due date for the first instalment from Feb. 26 to March 6.

Schools Closed By Broken Main

A broken water main closed down both the elementary and secondary schools in Madoc yesterday.

A break in the main line to the schools and the eastern end of the vilage deprived the area of water from 9 a.m. until 3 p.m. Tuesday. The schools closed down for the day about 11 a.m.

A spokesman at Centre Hastings Secondary School said this morning that ground frost was the probable cause of the break.

He said that under the plowed roads the ground is frozen to a depth of two feet. But the ground is unfrozen wherever the deep snow cover is undisturbed.

Yesterday's water main break was the second of the season.

These Women Have Tried And Are Pleased With The CANADIAN WOMEN'S FIGURE & REDUCING CLINIC

READ WHAT THEY SAY ABOUT IT!

I've been a member of Canadian Women's Clinic for only 1 week and already have lost over 6 pounds and I can feel the big difference. The staff is always ready and willing to encourage and help me. I'm really confident that I will reach my goal that I have set for myself.

Ruth Perrin.

I lost 7½ pounds in 7 days. I feel 100% better since I started a week ago! At first I felt a little leary of going in to see about it, but once I got there I felt at ease and welcomed. I can hardly wait till the end of 12 weeks to see the new me! Get started right away before time runs out.

Belleville Nurse.

I find the atmosphere very pleasant. We receive personal supervision, rather than group attention. I've lost 8 lbs. in 6 days and I have already noticed a difference in my clothing, plus have energy to spare.

With the encouragement from the staff, at the clinic, and my husband's encouragement at home, I'm sure I'll obtain my goal.

Signed: "A Belleville Housewife."

I have tried everything except the Canadian Women's Clinic. I feel the goal is in sight because it is a personally supervised short term reducing program. In only 1 week I have lost 9½ pounds and feel more energetic and ready to tackle a new day. Don't make excuses for yourself. Let's beautify Belleville, girls. Come and give it a try!

Joan K. Jukosky.

On my first visit to the Canadian Women's Clinic, I was nervous but desperate. The staff soon put me at ease, because they were friendly and understanding. During my first week under their supervision I lost 7¾-lbs. I'm confident that in no time at all I will please my husband and family by improving my figure and self confidence.

Signed: "Belleville School Teacher."

The exercise and equipment stimulated my blood circulation to give me a vibrant but relaxed feeling. I've lost 8½ pounds in 6 days. I find the atmosphere very pleasant and enjoyable and highly recommend the Clinic.

Loyalist Teacher.

Hearts and Exercise

When it comes to exercise, how much is enough? One thinks of the amount of shovelling of snow in recent weeks and the all too frequent reports of persons suffering heart attacks.

Such occurrences seem to be no respecter of age either, although if a person is in good physical condition and exercises in moderation he should come to no harm. In any event, moderation is again recommended and shovelling snow in this manner can be beneficial for the fit person in strengthening heart action and capability. Caution then should be the key to the exercise thing, particularly by the sedentary, by the person whose work induces tension or involves him consistently in over-work situations, as well as by the person who indulges too much in fattening foods, as well as alcohol and tobacco.

The Toronto Globe and Mail reported one death from snow shovelling during the weekend storm — a man in his sixties and he had just completed his task and sat down in his home when he collapsed.

Our medical columnist, Dr. Steincrohn, was asked recently if his seeming stance against exercise were really "tongue-in-cheek," to get a "rise" out of readers. He replied in part: "I have never been more serious. I believe that over-exertion kills more than it helps . . ." He went on to refer to his book, 'How To Be Lazy, Healthy and Fit," and to quote a Maryland physical therapist as saying, "For many years I have been appalled by the large number of totally unqualified — as well as qualified — individuals who advocate exercise as the remedy for everything from fallen arches to facial wrinkling. . . The medical profession has an obligation to the public and make it aware of the subtle danger of exercise."

At the other extreme, consider a superbly trained athlete like New Zealand's Peter Snell, the former (in 1964) world mile champion. Like many of his countrymen Snell had benefited from the then relatively new practice of jogging pioneered by his countryman, trainer Arthur Lydiard. Thanks to his training, we recall reading, Snell's aorta (the main artery of the body) was so highly developed, and his heart action consequently slowed to perform more efficiently and with less effort, that it would be impossible for him to suffer a heart attack.

But remember, Snell and his kind are trained athletes which the vast majority of us are not. And he showed himself to be human in other ways, as with his career in decline (after reaching his peak at the Tokyo Olympics) he undertook a North American tour and fared badly in a race at Vancouver. He had entered the race handicapped by a stomach infection.

It is difficult, then, if not impossible, to be conclusive on this subject. Dr. Steincrohn advised one of his readers, a former coronary victim to accept the decision of his own doctor as to how much exercise he should undertake. Furthermore. this is all very relevant to Ontario Heart Foundation Week which begins Feb. 26, here. During this period the foundation will be seeking public support for continuing research into heart disease and circulatory problems which claim 77,000 deaths in Canada every year.

"The heart problem," a Canadian Heart Fund spokesman has observed, " is no abstraction . . . it is a painful and costly reality . . ."

Latin Tradition

Peterborough Rotary Club recently had two young women guests — students from Japan and Bolivia.

The Bolivian lass goes by the unlikely name of Marilyn Boland, but then if she is of Irish background it is a reminder that Irish (as well as English, Scots and Welsh) names abound in the sub-continent and that people from the British Isles, as well as Spain and other European countries, have had much to do with the development of Latin America.

A former Mexican ambassador to Britain, if we recollect accurately, was one Jimenez O'Farrell, and the founder of the Argentine navy, again if memory cerves us properly, was a Scot called Brown. But apart from such notables, there are large numbers of Latin American families with roots in Britain and Europe, in the same traditon as the French Canadians of mixed ancestry in the Eastern townships and along the border with New England.

They are generally bilingual (English and Spanish)and their English often has an attractive lilt. One recalls also in this context the descendants of the Welsh families who settled in Patagonia and who preserve both their language and customs to this day.

Western Consumers Will Pay More

Middle East Oil Barons Will Get Another $10 Billion

1By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The Western oil companies' decision to yield to suppliers' demands for huge price increases shows the grip the Middle East has on the economies of many industrialized countries.

Oil is the lifeblood of industry and though new sources are being developed in Northern Canada, Alaska and other areas, by far the world's largest supplies are in the Middle East and North Africa.

The power of the big oil companies to engage in secret bargaining with individual suppliers has been largely succeeded by the strength of the supplying countries negotiating through a single entity—the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

The outcome of the prolonged Tehran bargaining can be seen as a major victory for OPEC as well as for the shah of Iran, who held his first press conference in 12 years to warn the West that the oil flow would be stopped if negotiations broke down.

If consumer countries tried to support the oil companys' reticence to pay, he said there might be an open challenge between "economic imperialists or neo-colonialists" and the developing countries.

The shah probably was well aware that in that embarrassing context, many Western countries would shy away from appearing to wield the big club over the "have-nots," especially when there is much world talk that wealthy countries are not doing enough to assist impoverished and underdeveloped regions.

A question may arise as to whether, in agreeing to pay an extra $10 billion to Persian Gulf states over the next five years, the oil companies are contributing to the welfare of the local people or to the pockets of the ruling families.

Another aspect is the use Western countries make of oil to produce huge tax revenues. As one Tehran newspaper pointed out, while many oil countries get no more than 31 cents for each barrel of crude, "the European consumer is often paying as much as $14 for the same."

"The gap is wide enough to make any reasonable person think that something, somewhere is wrong with the international oil structure."

Whatever may be wrong, it is certain that the oil consumer will pay. Price increases are to be passed along to the consumer in many Western countries through higher charges for fuel oil and gasoline.

Citizen Seeks Answers To Activities of the YMCA And The Chamber of Commerce

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

I was delighted to read Mr. Clements' letter in your columns. I had missed his down-to-earth letters on local events for some time and was beginning to think that the Citizens Committee had folded.

Last year about this time, Mr. Clements' committee was instrumental in bringing to the notice of the people of Belleville and the members of city council , the concern felt by many of our citizens at the yearly handover of large sums to the YMCA and the Chamber of Commerce, in the form of grants.

As a result of their opposition, the YMCA was told to "pull up its socks" by city council, and they announced a 10-point Action plan, which, along with a "strong board of directors," was supposed to make them financially solvent and lift them out of the category of city welfare recipients to a self-supporting body showing leadership.

I am afraid they appear to have made little progress as it seems they once again will be before city council at budget time demanding another handout, again for "services rendered".

How many of these services were asked for or authorized by our city council? If they were not requested we, the taxpayers ought not to be asked to pay for them. It is as simple as that.

Another point I would like to make is this. How is it that members of council who are either members of either or both organizations can vote on any motion concerning these bodies? Doesn't this amount to a conflict of interest? I feel the city solicitor should advise council as to this aspect.

The Chamber of Commerce will probably be in the line at budget time once again. They, too, last year offered a program that just about encompassed every social avenue. They were loud on pollution, and yet when it came down to it,it was the hard work of the president of the Quinte Labor Council that finally got the thing off the ground. The Chamber of Commerce were conspicuous by their absence.

Chamber of Commerce Week was its usual fiasco. Their venture on the air heard membe[illegible] calling in saying they could [illegible] see any reason for continu[illegible] membership as they were unable to distinguish any difference between them and the downtown Businessmens Association. Is there really any?

It is my hope that the Citizens of Belleville Committee will not allow them to get away again this year unchallenged with demands from the taxpayer.

I hope they will be made to publish an itemized account of the spending of money granted them by the city last year ostensibly to promote tourism. Likewise, I hope they will substantiate their claim that their activities in this field do contribute significantly to the city's employment picture. They are able to juggle with figures, it seems, when it suits them. Let us see first hand just how many of our citizens benefit from [illegible]tual employment result[illegible] from the Chamber of Commerce participation on our behalf in the tourist field.

Both the YMCA and the local Chamber of Commerce illustrate each year how an organization should not be run. They are models of mismanagement which if followed by business as a whole would increase , the bankruptcy rate to proportions never seen before. The city council has no business giving our money away to such incompetence and our aldermen who are members of either organization should not be voting at budget time on these issues.

Youth, Permissive Parents, And That Phoney Generation Gap

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

While pseudo-sociologists and self-appointed do-gooders continue to demand costly tax-funded "programs" to entertain, occupy and placate our young people, I charge that much of our so-called youth problem stems from our having "programed" our young people clean out of their creativity, self-reliance and appreciation for things earned.

Fed, clothed, housed, educated, entertained, picked up after and indulged, many have come to believe that the world owes them a living — that they have a "right" to phonograph, tape recorder, bicycle or automobile, weekly allowance and key to the door devoid of responsibility, accountability, or authority. The result? Youth has become arrogant and bored — teenage tyrants seeking new thrills and new powers by way of drugs, riots, four letter-words freaky clothes and a contempt for authority.

In "programing" our children from their first kindergarten "date" and muscling in on their lives as inane 'swinging' pals — afraid to exercise discipline — lest someone recognize the grey beneath their beanie cap. We are not only phoney intruders, but rob youngsters of their individual dreams and aspirations — the green years so necessary to growth, mental development and self - respect.

The time has come to recognize the stupidity of blaming a "generation gap" and to accept the reality of the various levels of development and their accompanying responsibilities and authorities. If we need proof of this, we need only examine the great teachings of the world — Christian, Buddhist, Jewish, Confuscian and Hindu wherein each offer clear guidelines on the "rights" and "responsibilities" of each generation. Only the Western world seems to have lost its perspective and created such phoney issues as a "generation gap".

Some Light Seen Emerging From Quebec's Nightmare

Trois-Rivieres Le Nouvelliste: The October crisis, despite the repugnant acts which it gave rise to, will have without a shadow of a doubt . . . beneficial effects for the Quebec collectivity. . .

Francois Cloutier, cultural affairs minister, has just . . . traced the outlines of the October crisis and suggested remedies which could be considered palliatives to the problems which assail Quebecers at present. . . .

Governments (must) undertake immediately an emergency program to correct deficiencies that have slipped into our judicial system, into our labor and unemployment situations, and finally into the numerous regional disparities.

Added to these problems are poverty and the notorious question of constitutional revision. In this regard Mr. Cloutier comes straight to the point and says the constitution is one of the determinants of the social turmoil of Quebec.

It is therefore not illusory to conclude that we are experiencing at present a political malaise exacerbated by a new nationalist consciousness.

As Mr. Cloutier puts it: "Whether we want it or not, a good number of our citizens do not feel as much at ease as they should within the Confederation agreement.

"They often wonder with anguish about the future of Quebec. They wonder how far Canada, within its present structures, can permit the blooming of our collectivity." . . .

It is to be hoped that the words of the Quebec cultural affairs minister do not fall on deaf ears and that Prime Minister Trudeau will give in once and for all to the evidence that Quebec will feel a little more at ease in the Canadian Confederation the day it plays a full role.

Regional Interests Lead to Hot Debate Over Trade Policy

OTTAWA (CP) — Argument about potentially-explosive government legislation on textiles and trade has started to warm up after getting only tepid attention in Parliament.

The hottest argument features representatives of rival regional interests within the Liberal party. Reaction from the opposition Conservative and New Democrat MPs has been subdued in general and Quebec Creditistes have been quiescent.

In some respects, the argument is as old as Confederation.

It pits the export-reliant, cheap-imports interests of Western Canada against protection-minded manufacturers of Quebec and, less vehemently, Ontario.

But the debate is far from straightforward, as brittle exchanges Tuesday in the Commons finance committee showed.

Complications arise from conflicting interpretations of the legislation and government policy statements behind it.

To some MPs and commercial and consumer interests, Bill C-215 is outrageously protective, designed to prop up uncompetitive textile mills and garment factories—especially in Quebec—at the expense of Canadian consumers and importers and the goodwill of trading partners.

Keith Dixon, executive vice-president of the Canadian Importers Association Inc., compared the legislation with the notoriously-restrictive trade bill that died in the United States Senate late last year amid loud protests from other governments, including Canada.

Others, including some in the clothing and textiles business, have said Bill C-215 would be ineffectual in saving the domestic textile and clothing industries and is really designed as an instrument for the merciful assassination of domestic manufacturers.

Some of those critics detect a motive in the timing of the bill to coincide with recognition of China, another potential Asian supplier of textiles and garments.

Michael N. Steinberg, Toronto management and production consultant to the garment industry, told the committee that the feeling in some quarters of his trade is that the government is willing to sacrifice the domestic industry and its 200,000 employees for the sake of expanding trade with China's vast market of 800 million consumers.

The conflicting interpretations have been generated by the dual-purpose nature of policy statements from Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin beginning last May and in the legislative expression of policy presented as Bill C-215 Jan. 11.

Bill C-215 is legislation "to establish the textile and clothing board and to make certain amendments to other acts in consequence thereof."

In fact, the three-man board was set up by government order last Nov. 5 and has already been assigned to assess the degree of injury or potential injury of certain yarn imports to domestic mills.

The legislation would give the board parliamentary sanction, sketch out its investigative and advisory powers and outline the cabinet's authority to act on the board's advice.

The bill would give the government wide powers to control imports of textiles and clothing by cabinet order.

At the same time, the board would be required to demand and approve plans from domestic companies designed to improve their efficiency and competitiveness.

County Hires Welfare Staff

PICTON (Staff) — Prince Edward County council has appointed a West Lake resident, Lawrence Gatehouse, as its welfare administrator. Mr. Gatehouse, has been hired for a six - month probationary period. His salary will be determined "from time to time by county council" plus mileage as calculated by the county's mileage schedule.

Assistant welfare administrator, Nevaida Lagroix, Ottawa was also appointed yesterday. Mrs. Lagroix was one of six applicants for the job. When one councillor questioned hiring an outsider, it was pointed out by North Marysburg reeve Harold Harrison that Mrs. Lagroix is "top notch." She was one of three out-of-county residents applying for the job.

Ann Landers

Fiance's Father Wins Her Affection

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I used to think you made up letters. I couldn't believe people actually got so messed up. Now I'm in a lulu myself.

ANN LANDERS

I have been dating a great young guy (age 24.) He wants to marry me and I have said yes. Three weeks ago I met his father. The moment our eyes met I felt a strong attraction. Senior has everything my boyfriend has — only more. He's better looking, more polished, more mature, and more exciting. I knew from the moment he looked at me that something clicked. This man is 48 years old, twice divorced and now "at liberty." I am 22 but 'Ive lived a lot.

And now I must tell you the whole truth. Senior and I have been seeing each other, strictly on the Q.T., of course. I think we are in love. The only thing that bothers me is that his last wife was a 21-year-old girl his son had been dating. Junior knows I'm seeing somebody but he doesn't know who. He now seems very juvenile and I'm going to break up with him regardless. What are my chances for happiness with Senior? — FIREFLY.

DEAR FLY: About the same as a snowflake in Tahiti. Remember there's no fool like an old fool — unless it's a young fool, like you. This situation has all the elements of a Peruvian earthquake. My advice is to unwind as fast as possible. And don't schedule any more father-son banquets.

* * *

DEAR ANN: My fiance is 45, three times divorced and living with his mother.

If I'm lucky I see him once or twice a week. The other nights he says he is tired and going to bed. The next day I find out he was in a bar all night getting crocked.

He says he loves me and I believe him. I'm sure he never looks at another woman. He is successful in his work and wonderful company, when I can get him. But so many things don't add up. Please help me understand. What's with him anyhow? — CONFUSED.

DEAR CONFUSED: Never mind what's with him. What's with you? Why are you wasting your time on a three-time loser who lives with his mother yet? Why are you hung up on a clown who would rather get bent out of shape in a bar than spend an evening with you? When you come up with an answer to these questions, you'll know it's time to say good-by.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am engaged to a boy I'll call Milton. I have gone with him to visit his parents three times. (They live in another city.) Each time he has gotten into a terrific fight with his mother. I wouldn't repeat the language he uses when he gets mad at her.

What baffles me, Ann, is that his father just stands there and never says a word. But the most amazing thing is that three minutes after all the screaming and filthy language, they laugh and joke as if it never happened.

My question is this: Will Milton use this language on me after we are married? — DESPERATE.

DEAR DES: What kind of language does Milton use on you now? He will probably use the same language after you are married.

It is shocking that the boy's father "just stands there." But equally shocking is that you don't say something. In my opinion you should let your boyfriend know you will not tolerate filthy language from him — to anybody.

Successful Living

Women Must Work Harder to Attain Success

By DORIS CLARK

"Women are endowed with the same brains as men. Their biggest problem is that they don't use them." Such is the verdict of a successful woman executive.

But she declares that to really get anywhere a woman has to work twice as hard as a man. Also that if she broadens her mind she can become more interesting as a person without kissing femininity goodbye.

I'm for that. Matter of fact, I can think of some pretty narrow minds — not female — which could do with a little broadening.

The thing is that both men and women should be looked on as individual personalities with special gifts and abilities to develop, regardless of sex.

No woman should relax behind the complaint that females don't get a square deal. Far better and more satisfying to do the best you can with what you've got, where you are.

At least, that's the way I see it.

Dear Doris: The enclosed advertisement is convincing, but I've heard there is no quick way of removing excess weight. Is this method effective? — Depending On You.

Dear Depending: I take a dim view of an ad which says you can "eat until you are full" without counting calories or choosing what you eat, and still lose weight. The product simply has to be an appetite depressant — either a chemical or the cellulose type which expands in the stomach and gives you a "full" feeling. (You can find these in your own drug store if you want them, without writing to one 500 miles away).

No such diet aid will do what you need — to develop proper eating habits, reach the right weight and stay healthy.

All too many youthful dieters have lost their health when they lost their weight. You must know what foods are essential for your body's good functioning. You must know how many pounds it is safe to lose a week; and you must have your doctor's approval.

Confidential to Depressed: I don't wonder your Brown Eyed Boy can't figure you out. First you ignore him, then when he looks at other girls you are jealous. Now when he praises your improved appearance, you complain because he is "treating you like a popular girl".

Try the light touch. Your part is to be gracious, to accept compliments and to leave the field free for others. There is no room for moodiness when you want the friendship of the opposite sex. Be glad that Brown Eyes thinks of you as Someone Special.

• • •

Confidential to Golden Wedding: If you want the gift to be gold, you might choose a set of gold-plated teaspoons or a purse of gold coins. But you don't have to. You could choose an oil painting for the living room or an engraved silver tray, which can be mighty useful.

For parents - who - have - everything, perhaps what they would enjoy most is to be taken out for a family dinner with all of you there. My 10-cent leaflet on Fiftieth Wedding Anniversaries is on its way.

• • •

Dear Doris: People think I am 13 or 14, because I have the body of a girl of 12. Yet I am nearly 18. By wearing "helpers" I can look 15.

I dread the coming summer when my problem really shows I want to wear swimsuits and shorts but I am afraid to. And I know I'd look phoney in a bathing suit with a padded bra.

Perhaps what I need is a miracle. Could you suggest exercises for bust development thin hips and skinny legs? — Matchstick

Dear Matchstick: Rounding out the curves seems so much harder to do than trimming them down! It may mean changing eating habits of a lifetime; or abandoning the restless, dashing and up-tight tactics which discourage weight-collecting.

My 10-cent Chart for Curves tells how to go about it. Not easy. It asks for faithful, full commitment, but it can be done.

I can't see the sin in wearing a padded swimsuit, if a good saleslady knows how to choose and fit it. And shorts? If you avoid the very short ones you may find a style and color which can de-emphasize the thin calves — until the new regime works its magic.

Select clothes to flatter your figure: Full skirts, short puffed sleeves, boat-type necklines or fluffy ties. And lots of color.

Stuffed Pork Tenderloin Is Moist

By MARY MOORE

All of my cooking life I have been plagued with doubts about the moisture in stuffed baked tenderloins. Now with the counsel of two Home Economist friends I have overcome it.

This recipe should be clipped and filed carefully in your "Pork — Tenderloin" File.

STUFFED PORK TENDERLOIN (Serves 6 generously)

3 average pork tenderloins (about 2½ lbs.)

STUFFING:

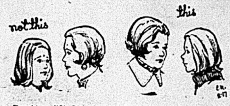
1 small carrot chopped fine
½ small onion chopped fine
1 stalk celery chopped fine
1 cup finely chopped mushroom stems (or whole mushrooms)
2-3 cup boiling water
1 beef or chicken bouillon cube
8 slices white or 60 per cent whole wheat bread, crusts removed, cut into ½" dice
¼ cup butter
1 tsp. salt

Place tenderloins on board, slit each to about ½" depth in three places lengthwise and pound with rolling pin until just a little more than ½" thick. Arrange three 2'-long pieces of string crosswise, 3" apart, in small roasting pan or large oval baking dish. Place two tenderloins over strings, sides slightly overlapping.

Make stuffing by cooking together in the boiling water the carrots, onion, and celery with the chicken or beef bouillon cube 10 min. Drain (Reserve liquid for your soup pot.) Meanwhile in very large frying pan gently saute the diced bread in the butter until all is touched with butter. Stir in salt and drained vegetables and chopped mushrooms. Turn onto the two tenderloins in pan and pat down with palms. Cover stuffing with remaining tenderloin, tucking ends under tenderloins on bottom. Tie snugly with overhanging strings. Cover loosely with foil. Bake at 275 deg. Fahr. 2 hrs. Moist with unsurpassable flavor.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON



Daughter: "Oh Mom, do I have to go to that baby doctor? I'm not a baby anymore and it is embarrassing to go there."

Mother: "But Jennie, you have a bad cold and you need to be checked."

Mother: "I'm sure you'll like your new doctor. He treats patients of all ages, and he's a very good doctor."

Sometimes teen-agers become self-conscious about going to a pediatrician. A mother should recognize when this is bothering her youngsters and take her to a general practitioner or internist.

The New Soft Princess Shape

With this quietly stunning dress in your spring wardrobe, you can go anyplace any hour of the day or evening and be sure of a flattering reception. The lines of Printed Pattern A922 by John Norman are the sleekest — pure princess dramatically etched by bias trim same as dress or contrast around collar, tab and button decorated demi-belt. The Original is an elegant polyester knit with a herringbone-like rib in pure white with black. Make your version in a tender spring pastel double knit wool, tiny checked flannel, tweedy blend or linen.

Printed Pattern A922 is avlaiable in New Misses' Sizes 8, 10, 12, 14, 16. Size 12 (bust 34) requires 3⅛ yards 35-inch.

Congregational Meeting

EMMANUEL CHURCH

FOXBORO — The annual congregational meeting of Emmanuel Church, Foxboro, was held in the church hall recently with the minister Rev. A. Parsons presiding. The officers of the various organizations presented their reports of the year's activities and these were most gratifying.

Reports showed a membership of 369 with 81 of these being non-resident. Regular services of worship were held each Sunday morning, with the exception of August during which combined services were held in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

These various organizations include church school, choir, three women's groups and all boards and committees which are responsible for all activities of the church. These involve many people who give freely of their time and effort to promote Christian education, missions, fellowship and concern for others.

The Sunday School had an average attendance of 100 pupils on the 43 Sundays when it was held. Bus service was provided early in the year to bring pupils from a distance.

The United Church Women are divided into three groups with 86 members. These groups or units meet monthly and four general meetings were held during the year. A canvass for the heart fund was organized after the need was stressed by a representative of that organization. Cartons of used clothing have been sent for overseas relief as well as supplies for a special Angola project.

There are both senior and junior choirs who are led by faithful leaders and these contribute much to the regular services. There are two organized couples' clubs and one teen club which meet regularly and enjoy social evenings with guest speakers for several occasions.

Members of the congregation feel that the past year has been most successful under the leadership of Rev. A. Parsons, Mrs. Parsons and son and daughter. Each contribute of their talents whenever called upon to do so. It is anticipated by the members that 1971 will be equally successful.

Officers of the church are: 5-year term, Gerald Dafoe, Carl Sine, Robert Jeffrey, William Slavin; 4-year term, Maurice Dafoe, Fred Wellman, William McMechan, Ralph Sills; 3-year term, Ivan Clare, Ronald Denyes, Irvine Badgley, Ed Emerson; 2-year term, E. M. Dafoe, Edison Sine, D. Hollinger, Ivan May; 1-year term, M. Waller, Allyn Finkle, C. Townsend, John Ewing.

Honorary elders and stewards were also appointed.

Trustees are: A. Wickett, F. Wellman, F. Lindenfield, E. C. Dafoe, J. S. Hayton; nominating committee, M. Waller, A. Finkle and J. S. Hayton and auditors, E. M. Dafoe and M. Waller.

Parents Without Partners Hold Meet

The Belle-Trent Chapter 423 Parents Without Partners completed plans for the Eastern Ontario regional conference to be held March 6 and 7, with a number of confirmations to attend, from other chapters.

Four prospective members were welcomed by the Amigo committee.

A number of items of correspondence was read by secretary after which the chapter president was presented with a certificate by the Santa Claus parade committee for the chapter's float in the parade.

The election of officers will take place at a meeting to be held in King Street United Church, Trenton, on Feb. 18. All members are requested to attend this special meeting.

Refreshments were served and a social half hour enjoyed.

Prince Edward-Belleville Club Marks 28th Anniversary

Prince Edward - Belleville Ladies' Club marked the occasion of its 28th anniversary at a meeting held in the Recreation Centre last Wednesday evening with 24 members and four visitors present.

President Mrs. F. Henderson welcomed the gathering and expressed pleasure at seeing as many out despite the adverse weather conditions. Secretarial report was read by Mrs. A. Mitchell and the treasurer's report which showed a favorable bank balance was given by Mrs. L. Fox. Correspondence was read by Mrs. O. White.

Mrs. F. Bedell was in charge of the program when Mrs. P. Parliament gave the history of the club since its origin in 1943 when Mrs. M. B. Weese invited several women who had been born in Prince Edward County to an afternoon tea. From this first get - together the idea of the club was formed with a membership fee of 25 cents per person. In its earlier years the club held successful bazaars and home bake sales. The membership fee has been now raised to $1.25 to help defray expenses of renting the room for the meetings.

The aim of the club has never been to make money but to try to make others happy.

Mrs. C. Hegewald, a former secondary teacher was introduced, and gave an interesting talk and showed slides of Mexico. She described the landscape of Mexico which she said is mostly desert around the fringe encircling a plateau. Much of the land is covered by cactus of 400 varieties from which a number of drinks are made. Fences are also formed by the growth of the cactus. Most of the transportation duties are carried on by mules and the women carry numerous items on their heads. A number of the people make black pottery vases to be shipped to the United States.

Other slides were shown of Mexicans constructing their homes as well as making hats and shoes (the soles of which are made of old tires). Laundry day is a social event of the week and the soap used is made from the yucca cactus. The speaker also showed slides of Morrocco in North Africa.

Mrs. Hegewald was thanked by the program convener and presented with a gift, after which the group in charge served lunch which included the special anniversary cake.

The Experts Say

Boots Are Now More Fashionable Than Ever

MONTREAL (CP) — Never before have boots been as fashionable as they are this year, and a little pampering will go a long way to protect them against the current winter slush and salted streets, the Leather Bureau of Canada says.

The bureau has several hints for taking care of leather boots, but their success rests on the premise that boots will e given the same treatment as shoes: regular cleaning and polishing, rest periods during which they're not worn and maintenance of shape with shoe or special boot trees.

Manufacturers this winter produced an unusual number of tan suede boots which many women tended to shy away from, believing they'd be ruined by their first snow.

Not so, says the bureau. With a little extra care, their softness and suppleness may be retained even after considerable wear.

Dirt should be removed from extremely fine suedes with a sponge or foam rubber brush. Brass brushes can be used on coarser leathers.

Application of a silicone spray also helps, although, as manufacturers warn, the spray will not leave the boots absolutely waterproof. It does, however, make the suede water-repellent and helps to prevent it from being spotted by rain or snow.

If the boots do get wet, allow them to dry and then brush to bring up the nap.

Special suede cleaners available on the market in spray or liquid form can be effective, says the bureau, but it emphasizes that they should be used with caution and only on leather of good quality.

Leather boots, although some have already been given a water-repellent treatment by the manufacturer, also require further protection against winter elements.

Smooth leathers need several applications of silicone, each layer being allowed to dry thoroughly before the next is applied.

But avoid putting the silicone on crepe rubber soles as they may be discolored by the chemical.

Once the boots have dried for the final time, apply a good wax or paste shoe polish. After each wearing, wipe away dirt and calcium with a damp cloth and dry boots in shoe trees at room temperature.

Additional polish may be added occasionally to maintain the soft gloss of the leather.

Stains which don't brush off easily may be removed with a half-and-half mixture of water and vinegar.

The best care in the world, however, cannot make leather boots waterproof. The bureau recommends that waterproof boots of leather-look vinyl be substituted when the wearer has to wade through extremely wet snow or puddles of slush.

A NO! NO!

Never put items such as turpentine or rat poison into a used-food container.

REAL ESTATE

WHAT IS A REALTOR ?

ED McKINNEY
J. E. McKinney
Realty Ltd.

Every Realtor is a real estate broker but every broker isn't a Realtor. What is the difference?

While both a broker and Realtor are licensed to transact real estate, for instance, only the Realtor is a member of a local real estate board which governs its members with a strict code rules and ethics.

A Realtor can be expelled for failure to obey the board's code and must answer to the board if a complaint is made against him.

A standard broker is bound only by government real estate laws. These laws, which govern the Realtor as well, of course, are less strict and more difficult to enforce than the board's code.

Through his real estate board a Realtor has access to educational courses, seminars, informative current publications, a library, a multiple listing service as well as statistical data on past sales in his area. This last service is a valuable aid in making accurate appraisals.

The term Realtor means a STANDARD OF SERVICE which a buyer or seller can rely on — a very important reliance in any property transactions.

Trudeau Denies PC Allegation He Mouthed Silent Obscenity

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons erupted Tuesday when two Conservative MPs accused Prime Minister Trudeau of using an unparliamentary four-letter word in the House.

Outside the House, Mr. Trudeau told reporters that he had only "moved my lips and moved my hands in a gesture of derision."

Lincoln Alexander (PC—Hamilton West) said outside the House that Mr. Trudeau had silently mouthed two words, the first beginning with "f," the second with "o." He declined to spell out the expression.

"Are these guys lip-readers or something?" the prime minister countered.

Asked whether he had mouthed the words attributed by Mr. Alexander, Mr. Trudeau replied: "No."

The incident started in the Commons after fiery Newfoundland back-bencher John Lundrigan (PC—Gander-Twillingate) accused the prime minister of using the expression.

Mr. Trudeau said that the accusation was an "absolute distruth."

Asked by reporters outside the House whether he was "sick of the oppositon," Mr. Trudeau replied that they were a "nice change from the press."

He said the opposition had accused the government of juggling unemployment figures and secretly changing the statistical system. "Now they're reading my lips."

The prime minister ended the encounter with reporters demanding to know "what is the nature of your thoughts, gentlemen, when you say fuddle-duddle or something?"

In the House, Mr. Alexander said that no MP should have to accept the alleged abusive language from the prime minister.

The prime minister then challenged members and the Commons Hansard reporter to say that he had "uttered a single sound." From the galleries the words appeared to be mouthed only.

There's Got to Be Better Way to Fight Inflation - - Mackasey

VANCOUVER (CP) — The provinces could have shown more co-operation with Ottawa in fighting inflation, Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey said Tuesday.

But he said he agrees there has got to be a better method of combating inflation "than putting people out of work."

In an interview, Mr. Mackasey said the provinces and organized labor have been responsible for inflationary wage settlements leading to unemployment.

"Last year, our federal settlements averaged 6.8 per cent," he said. "Some of the provinces settled for up to 11 per cent."

He said rents are "much too high" in some provinces. But this is an area over which the federal govermnment has no jurisdiction, even on a temporary basis.

Mr. Mackasey said the federal government has taken all the steps it can to boost the national economy and "it is a matter of waiting for things to jell."

"There is ample money at the banks and interest rates are extremely low."

Price and wage controls are quite effective, but the government was faced with such serious inflation that it could not be stopped with "any of the conventional tools at our disposal."

Mr. Mackasey said economists are working on the problem but added "a word of caution—there are a lot of economists and many schools of thought."

Mr. Mackasey said labor also could have shown more restraint. However, there is more labor unrest in countries with restrictive labor legislation than in countries with a more liberal approach.

Davis Meets Robarts, Then Ponders Cabinet

TORONTO (CP) — Education Minister William Davis went into retreat Tuesday to contemplate membership of the cabinet he will take into the government of Ontario March 1.

Mr. Davis, after a two-hour meeting with Premier John Robarts, said the changeover in government will take place March 1, after he and the premier have cleaned up the business remaining on their desks.

He said a new session of the legislature is "likely" to be called some time in March, but warned reporters that "in this business one has to be careful not to speculate."

He brushed aside questions as to when a provincial election might be called.

Mr. Davis said he and Mr. Robarts had "discussed a number of things," and had agreed they could have their office business cleaned up by March 1.

Then the education minister will accompany the premier to the legislature office of Lt.-Gov. W. Ross Macdonald where Mr. Robarts will tender his resignation and recommend Mr. Davis as leader of a new government.

Other cabinet ministers then will resign from their offices, after which Mr. Macdonald will summon those recommended by Mr. Davis for office in the new cabinet.

Mr. Davis said that although the legislature is likely to meet in March the date is still uncertain. However, "things are moving ahead faster than I had thought."

He would not speculate on names for his cabinet, and he said he has not had talks yet with any other members of the existing cabinet.

Mr. Davis, 41, was elected leader of the provincial Conservatives to succeed Mr. Robarts who had been nine years in office, at a party convention that ended early Saturday morning.

Nixon Sees Fall Vote

HAMILTON (CP) — Provincial Liberal Leader Robert Nixon predicts an Ontario election June 10—or next fall.

"I expect, at least I wish the elections will be June 10," he said in an interview Tuesday. "But I suspect (Conservative leader) William Davis will postpone them until the fall."

The Liberal leader was in Hamilton to address the Ontario Association of Real Estate Boards.

True Davidson Will Run

TORONTO (CP) — East York Mayor True Davidson said Tuesday she will seek the provincial Liberal nomination for East York in the next provincial election.

Miss Davidson, 70, said she will seek nomination March 10 and if she succeeds it will be a victory over redneck male chauvinism and a triumph for the wisdom of the aged.

She said the Liberals sought her, not the other way around.

Mayor Davidson, who has been in municipal politics for 23 years, said if she is elected she will have no trouble handling both jobs.

Thatcher to Aid Industries

REGINA (CP) — Premier Ross Thatcher said Tuesday announcements soon wil be made on new industries for the province.

The premier said in an interview following the speech to open the fifth session of the 16th legislature that the government will announce new industries which will "take substantial sums of public money but will create jobs."

The government has proposals for 200 new public works projects, "some big, some small."

Marble Slabs Insecure

HAMILTON (CP) — City architect Alex German told a judicial inquiry Tuesday that none of the marble slabs decorating the walls of the city hall could be trusted to remain secure.

He said he had reached this conclusion after his department had examined the 450-pound slabs last October and found that even some of those that appeared secure were attached to the wall with broken fastenings.

Mr. German told the inquiry when it opened Monday to investigate the falling marble slabs that the problem stemmed from the insecurity of the fastenings—manganese-bronze hangars or anchors—which were designed to hold the marble in place.

He said Tuesday his department ran two series of tests. The first showed that in some wall areas as many as one-third of the anchors were broken.

In the second series, carried out as a check on the reliability of the first, his men had removed slabs thought to be secure.

"We thought that in some cases even then there were broken anchors. The reason the original tests didn't show this was that the marble was wedged in tight by the weight of the adjacent marble slabs."

The hearing before Judge Theo McCombs is expected to last until the end of the week.

NEW CAREER

BRIVE France (AP) — After 35 years as a dentist, Maurice Filliol was not pleased with the prospect of retirement. So he took up the law studies he had abandoned for dentistry, made top marks at the University of Toulouse and at 73 soon will plead his first case as a lawyer.

"And to what set of statistics are you making your contribution today . . . strikes, redundancy, absenteeism, sickness or demonstration?"

Sydney J. Harris Says

Organized Sentiment Distasteful

I was walking around with kind of a glum face during the recent holidays and somebody asked me if anything was wrong. "No," I said, "It's just that determined cheerfulness always makes me a little sour."

There is a perverse streak in my nature that reacts against the extremes of jollity and gloom. The relentless merriment of Christmas often gives me a sense of sadness, while the unrelieved melancholy of funerals makes me want to be flip or frivolous.

If this were just a personal neurosis, I wouldn't even mention it — but I suspect a great many people feel the way I do, only they manage to conceal it more successfully.

And "organized" sentiment strikes me as factitious and a little sterile. Funeral services are the worst, and if I had my way, the whole business would be abandoned — the casket, the pall-bearers, the oleaginous lies about the deceased, the conventional trappings of grief. Mourning should be private, not a public competition or a display.

And the "merriment" of Christmas, certainly is just as contrived in most cases, providing a temporary exchange of hearty sentiments so that people can feel good about going back to their mean old selves as soon as the official "spirit" has been declared dead.

The regulation of emotions reminds me of those "spontaneous demonstrations" that are held in places like Russia; where the people are prodded and stimulated to scream and applaud and march for some despotic hooligan's birthday; only in the U.S. the regulation of emotions is commercially rather than politically exploited.

The funeral racket is certainly among the worst here, and I have not been to two funerals out of a hundred that showed a modicum of dignity, taste, honesty, or a truly pious appreciation of the equilibrium between the precious gift of life and the inexorable demand of death. Even when one sincerely cared for the deceased, there is an uneasy air of hypocrisy about such proceedings.

In my view, the best way to be memorialized is to donate one's body for medical research and transplant use; in this way, one is being of some value to society, present and future, and even achieves a kind of immortality by providing the organs for someone else to enjoy God's gift of life longer than he otherwise might.

It is mere vanity that prompts our current funeral and burial practices, and a barbaric kind of vanity at that. Just as it is mostly vanity that propels us into the fierce exchange of Christmas gifts as a substitute for the year-round caring that Jesus stood for.

Norway Vital NATO Link

KOLSAS, Norway (CP) — "Thank you for coming to see us," said Maj.-Gen. A. E. Younger.

Gen. Younger, a Briton, is chief of staff of Allied Forces North European Command with headquarters in this small town near Oslo.

He had just finished briefing a small group of Canadian correspondents who accompanied Defence Minister Donald Macdonald on his five-day tour of Norway last week.

Their warm welcome underlined that popular awareness of NATO's "northern flank" is remarkably low.

Canadians and most other Western peoples are apt to think of NATO almost exclusively in terms of Western Europe and the East-West border in Germany.

In Norway exists an entirely new dimension, considered vitally important in the over-all Allied defence picture.

Canada has been showing an increased interest here, exemplified by Macdonald's visit. The first Canadian staff officer to arrive some months ago at northern command headquarters was Maj. Jack Frazer of Vancouver, an air reconnaissance and training officer. A half dozen or more Canadian staff officers are expected to follow.

Canada is actively considering assigning a squadron of fighter-bombers to Norway on an emergency standby basis. This would augment the 5,000-man brigade Canada already is committed to send on request, subject to its approval.

An increasingly troublesome element in the northern defence equation, say Allied officers, is the Soviet naval buildup in northern waters, part of a general Soviet maritime growth.

Intelligence assessments put the number of Soviet submarines and surface vessels based at Leningrad and Murmansk at 900 to 980. The surface vessels include missile-firing cruisers and destroyers. The fleet is supported by several hundred auxiliary ships.

Liberal Suggests Finance Firms Should Be Denied Access to Courts

OTTAWA (CP) — The government should give time for second thoughts to householders bamboozled by fast-talking door-to-door salesmen, the Commons was told Tuesday.

David Orlikow (NDP—Winnipeg North) made the suggestion in debate on his bill to give customers three days after they sign a contract to cancel a bill of exchange or promissory note.

Steve Otto (L—York East) said he favored the bill but it only touched the tip of the iceberg of the credit-buying problem.

He said the government should eliminate all laws that allow finance companies to use the courts to force repayment of the money they lend.

Finance companies, which spent so much to promote credit buying, should "use the same promotion to get it back."

That would force them to take care whom they lend money to, saving victimization of those who cannot afford purchases.

A Doll Is Born

This is the pregnant doll that can turn anybody's 8-year-old into an obstetrician. The child just pulls down on a zipper running along the blue and white trousers of the "future mama doll," and out pops a baby. The doll, described by its manufacturers as the first of its kind in the world, was unveiled at the Paris Toy Show Monday. (AP Photo)

Bill to Be Presented Soon

ment bill proposing changes in the Unemployment Insurance Act will be presented soon, Prime Minister Trudeau said Tuesday.

Mr. Trudeau told Lincoln Alexander (PC—Hamilton West) in the Commons that he would see then whether representations made by Quebec on some of the government proposals had been answered.

Mr. Alexander said Quebec had expressed concern about some of the proposals in the government's unemployment insurance policy paper.

Among other things, the policy paper proposed to increase maximum insurance payments to $100 weekly and extend coverage of thousands of Canadians who do not pay the weekly premiums.

Divorce Ruling Reserved

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Court of Appeal reserved judgement Tuesday on whether the province's 94 county court judges have the right to hear divorce cases.

At present divorce cases can be dealt with only by the 27-member trial branch of the Supreme Court of Ontario.

At issue is an amendment to the Judicature Act, passed by the Ontario legislature last October, which empowers county court judges to relieve the Supreme Court trial judges of divorce cases.

The provincial and federal justice departments are seeking an appellate court ruling in advance so higher courts cannot later declare county court divorces invalid.

The province, represented by Marshall Pollock and supported by federal representative Norman Chalmers, argued that county court judges could have the authority to deal with divorce cases because they are federally appointed as local judges.

Willard Estey, a lawyer appointed by the Court of Appeal to oppose the change, argued that divorce cases are not within the jurisdiction of the county court.

Hearing the arguments Monday and Tuesday were Chief Justice G. A. Gale and Mr. Justices Arthur Kelly, A. R. Jessup, J. W. Brooke and J. D. Arnup.

Walkouts Continue

MONTREAL (CP) — Rotating walkouts were to continue in Montreal today and spread to outlying areas of the Montreal region despite a plea Tuesday by Protestant teachers that their French-Catholic counterparts return to work to hasten negotiations with the government.

The Alliance des Professeurs said late Tuesday that 2,200 of its 9,500 members will continue the walkouts, now in their third week.

Insulation Can Be Made Out of Wheat

TORONTO (CP) — Three professors at the University of Toronto have developed a process to manufacture a cheap, lightweight, fire-proof and water-resistant building material out of puffed wheat.

Under the process, wheat kernels are puffed to slightly smaller than breakfast-cereal size, then burned to pure carbon to obtain a product which its developers say can be used as insulation in building blocks and panels, wallboards and for highway- pipeline and building foundations.

Victory Riley, one of the engineers who developed the process, said in an interview this week that many uses are foreseen for the product "but where we're really excited is in terms of light-weight, low-cost houses."

Mr. Riley, 30, Eli Robinsky, 45, and John Timusk, 36, discovered the qualities of carbonized puffed wheat in experiments done in their homes.

Mr. Riley estimated it would cost about eight cents a cubic foot to produce, compared with 28 cents for polystyrene beads—a synthetic insulator.

Mr. Riley estimated 1,000 pounds of wheat would be needed to put up an average-size bungalow, using the product in foundation and walls.

Questions and Answers On Highway Travel

Eastern Ontario Club

QUESTION: We emigrated to Canada three years ago from Britain and haven't got our Canadian citizenship papers yet. We want to drive to Florida in March but have been told by friends that we can't go to the U.S. as tourists. Is this true?

ANSWER: No, it is not true. You can go for a visit to the United States. All the U.S. immigration demands is that you are able to prove you are a landed immigrant. It's a good idea to take your British passport, even if expired for identification

QUESTION: What was the name of Canada's first gas station and where and when was it built?

ANSWER: Not only was it the first gas station in Canada, but its owners, Imperial Oil Ltd., believe it may also have been the first in North America. Imperial Oil opened it in June, 1908, at the corner of Smith and Cambie Streets in Vancouver, B.C.

QUESTION: What date is the Mardi Gras in New Orleans this year and what are the main events? Also give me mileage from Belleville, a fast route down and interesting things to see in New Orleans while I'm there.

ANSWER: The Mardi Gras is celebrated this year on Feb. 23. This is a day of merry-making, dancing, parades, masked costume balls and feasts. At midnight the bells will toll the end of Fat Tuesday and the Advent of Lent. New Orleans is an exciting, romantic city, rich in French and Spanish heritage and decor. The city of the Creoles is a five-mile-wide strip squeezed between the Mississippi and Lake Pontchartrain. This is the setting for Mardi Gras, a three-day spree of wild, worldly living, before the Austerity of Lent. It's called "the greatest free show on earth". There are succession of lavish parades, with bands playing, thousands of Louisianians and visitors in masks and costumes, all celebrating a joyous festival that dates back to the old Roman times.

For sight-seeing: Bourbon Street, famed for its night life, filled with historic buildings of the early 1800s; the French Market on Decatur Street, with its profusion of fish, vegetables and fruit from the tropics as well as local farm products; Jackson Square, the hub of the old city; historic Canal Street, with its antique shops and sites of historical interest. And for a feeling of today, relax at the Top of the Mart at the foot of Canal Street. Located at the top of the International Trade Mart, it gives you a panoramic view of the city and the river, storeys below.

Fast route down: Take Highway 401 to Detroit; interstate 75 south to Lexington, Kentucky; Blue Grass Parkway to Elizabethtown, Kentucky; interstate 65 to Birmingham, Alabama; interstate 59 to New Orleans. Mileage from Belleville — 1005.

QUESTION: We are driving to Florida for three weeks. How much duty-free goods can we bring back to Canada?

ANSWER: After a 12-day absence from Canada may bring back $100 worth of goods duty free. You are allowed four $25 exemptions after being out of the country for at least 48 hours. However you can't claim a $25 exemption during the same quarter as you claim the $100 exemption. If your purchases are under $5 you don't have to declare them with one exception and that is liquor. You do have to declare liquor even if it is your only purchase.

Unionists Wooing Teachers

TORONTO (CP) — Secondary school teachers "could be one of the most powerful organizations for economic good in the country," an official of the Canadian Union of Public Employees said Tuesday.

"But you're one of the most disorganized groups around," Arthur Risely told North York teachers at a professional development seminar.

Mr. Risely, Ontario regional director for the union, and John MacMillan, its national director of organization, are conducting an organizing drive.

Diary of A Rescue

Old-timers and Alert Crews Form Search Team

By KENNETH SMITH
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — Airliner of the 40s and prime military transport of World War Two—the Dakota still serves a useful role with 424 Squadron here.

Looking like something out of the distant past, it is still very much part of the Canadian Armed Forces, although its days are numbered.

Budget strains have deterred replacement of the Daks over the years but a replacement for them is expected later this year.

The Government announced reduction of Air Transport Command's Dakota fleet September 19, 1969, along with replacement of Training Command Dakotas by ATC's Cosmopolitans (to serve as new navigational trainers).

That the Daks, two of them with 424 Squadron, are old, does not mean they are not serving well. Despite their long history — one, at least, with over 10,000 hours of flying time — they are virtually free from mechanical problems.

"We have had good serviceability rates with them. They have been around a long time and everybody is used to them," says 424's operations officer, Maj. J. B. Locke of Trenton.

The DC-3s at Trenton and a Voyageur helicopter with 450 Squadron in Ottawa are the only aircraft in the Forces permanently assigned to search and rescue operations in the Central Canada region, stretching from Thunder Bay, Ont. to Sept Isles, Que. and north to Ungava Bay.

However, other aircraft, particularly Otters from Toronto and Montreal may be requisitioned for searches. Commercial ships and planes may also be called upon to give assistance.

All search activity in this region, one of four in the country, is directed from the Search and Rescue Co-ordination Centre deep within CFB Trenton's No. 1 Administration Building. In the last five years, more than 230 lives have been saved by searches co-ordinated from these points.

SAR (Search and Rescue) capabilities at Trenton are not on a 9 to 5 basis — someone is always on hand to receive an emergency phone call or telex message at any hour of the day and 424 Squadron is always ready to put the Daks in the air.

The SAR Dakota has three primary means of finding people in distress, visual spotting, the monitoring of radio calls from missing boats and planes and the receiving of signals from emergency homing devices fitted to all military and some civilian aircraft.

On a search in northern Quebec, the Daks were out to find a white aircraft that had put down on a lake in a snowstorm. When weather conditions forced the plane down, they also disrupted visual search possibilities.

As two spotters aboard the Dak scanned the search area Friday, nothing was visible except a sheet of low-lying cloud cover beyond the dull siver wings of the aircraft.

When conditions improved Saturday, large squares of terrain were combed by the search planes. As the DC-3 criss-crossed the area at one mile intervals, the spotters watched the desolate landscape below for any sign of the missing individual.

Four spotters are commonly along on searches, each taking 20-minute shifts at the two bubble windows on either side of the aircraft. Eyes must be keen as the Dak buzzes across the search block at 500 or 1,000 feet.

Watching for glimpses of a downed plane, broken tree limbs, footprints or traces of smoke from a makeshift fire demands it.

"It is difficult to establish hard and fast rules for searching because people who get lost don't usually get a chance to play by the rules," said Cpl. Philip Blank of Frankford in a break from his spotting.

It was not the trained spotter's eye but a radio signal that brought Saturday's search to a successful conclusion.

As the Dak swept in over the vast expanse of lake and mountain, the radio operator, Capt. Earl Dolter of Trenton reported that he was picking up a "May Day" call from the lost aircraft.

The search plane's job was over. A helicopter moved in to rescue the man as the DC-3 banked, returning to Trenton.

If the man had been injured, the Dakota would have made a pass over the downed aircraft, dropping two pararescuers to administer medical aid until a chopper could reach the scene.

In such circumstances, one parachutist carries a radio set, the other a medical kit. If additional medicines or gear necessary for an overland evacuation are needed, these are thrown out on supply drop chutes.

One winter drop pack carried on the Dakota for this purpose contains a toboggan, sleeping bags, axes, a camp stove and food stuffs. A variety of other goods may be dropped in one of six metal storage containers stored aboard.

Another parachute package carried in searches for boats and planes missing over water includes Mae Wests and two 20-man dinghys.

When missing boats and planes are found, 424 Squadron knows how to rescue their occupants but to find them is often a problem.

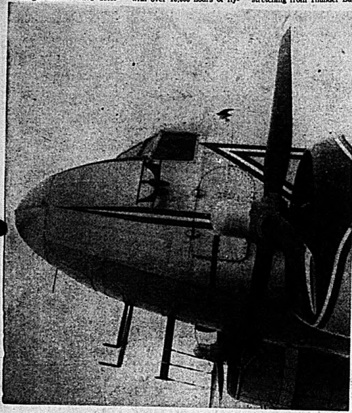
In distress, a boat owner is at a disadvantage if his boat is blue, as is a pilot flying a white plane in winter—they cut down the chance of being spotted.

If radios are defective or those aboard are injured and cannot operate them, the prospects of a successful search are reduced further.

However, if automatically-operated emergency homing devices are carried, being found is a virtual certainty. The Dakotas are equipped with receivers to monitor signals from distress beacons.

The vast majority of searches are successful, yet 31 of 182 planes missing across Canada in the last five years are still unaccounted for.

If the pilots had been able to keep to flight planned courses, carrying distress beacons in planes with fluorescent markings, their chances are good of being found by 424 Squadron and others like it committed to saving lives.



Old Reliable

Flying since World War Two, the Dakotas are among the oldest Canadian military aircraft in service. Two of the "old reliables" are comitted to search and rescue operations with Trenton's 424 Squadron.

Intense Concentration

Cpl. J. C. Gallant of Trenton scans the landscape for signs of a downed aircraft. Two spotters are on the job throughout a search, stationed at bubble windows along the sides of the Dakota.

Off on Search

Dakota radio officer, Capt. Earl Dolter of Trenton (left) gives a hand to Cpl. Bob Innis of Belleville as he loads up the search plane for mission in northern Quebec last week.

Mission Successfully Completed

With a successful search over and the DC-3 making its way back to Trenton, Cpls. Bob Innis of Belleville, Don Lane of Trenton and Butch Bellefeuille of RR 1, Belleville, recount the day's events in the aircraft cabin. On Saturday, the Dak from 424 Squadron participated in the mission to find a lost plane that had put down on a frozen lake to sit out a storm.

Last-minute Winner

Canucks' Paiement Leads Upset of Bruins

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Rosaire Paiement, who scored only four National Hockey League goals during three previous seasons, is suddenly making a name for himself with his scoring outbursts.

The 25-year-old forward from Halleybury, Ont., scored three goals Tuesday night, including the winner in the last minute of play, for a 5-4 Vancouver Canucks upset of the powerful Boston Bruins.

One week ago, Paiement scored four goals in a 6-3 win over Buffalo Sabres, and he now has a season total of 20.

In the only other game Tuesday, St. Louis Blues defeated California Golden Seals 5-1.

The Canucks' victory moved them out of the East Division cellar, one point ahead of Detroit Red Wings and one behind fifth-place Buffalo.

The loss for the Bruins ended an undefeated string of 12 games. It was only the ninth defeat in 56 games for the East Division leaders.

The line of Paiement, Andre Boudrias and Wayne Maki accounted for all five goals as the Canucks outshot the Bruins 43-33 in coming back from a 2-0 deficit midway through the first period.

Paiement and Boudrias set up Maki for the first Canucks goal to make it 2-1 before the end of the period. Paiement came back with two more in the second 20 minutes and the Canucks never fell behind.

A goal by Boudrias early in the final period put Vancouver in front 4-3 but Boston's Bobby Orr, who earlier set up goals by Johnny Bucyk and Ed Westfall, tied it at 4-4 with less than four minutes remaining.

ROSAIRE PAIEMENT

Paiement, who served his three-year apprenticeship with Philadelphia Flyers and their Quebec farm team, picked up a Maki rebound in the final minute and fired over goalie Gerry Cheevers' shoulder for the winner.

Ken Hodge beat Canucks goalie Charlie Hodge for the other Boston goal late in the second period.

At St. Louis, the Blues easily handled the Seals, taking a 4-0 lead before the visitors managed their only goal early in the third period on a shot by Gary Jarrett.

Bill McCreary, Noel Picard and Frank St. Marseille scored in the first four minutes of play. Bill Sutherland and Fran Huck each got a goal for the Blues who moved to within 17 points of Chicago Black Hawks, the West Division leaders.

The Seals remain in the West cellar with only 16 wins in 57 games.

In games tonight, New York Rangers visit Montreal Canadiens, Pittsburgh Penguins meet the Maple Leafs in Toronto, California takes on the North Stars at Minnesota, Philadelphia Flyers play the Kings in Los Angeles and Buffalo is at Chicago.

Bruins Gain

Leaders Phil Esposito, Bobby Orr, Ken Hodge and Johnny Bucyk all gained ground in the National Hockey League point scoring list Tuesday night despite Boston Bruins 5-4 loss to Vancouver Canucks.

Orr led the Bruins, picking up a goal and two assists. He remains 16 points behind Esposito, who leads the league with 48 goals and 62 assists. The big centre collected only one assist Tuesday.

Bombers Line Up Coaches

WINNIPEG (CP) — Winnipeg Blue Bombers announced Tuesday they have signed one assistant coach and are negotiating for a second.

Signed to assist head coach Jim Spavital in the 1971 Western Football Conference season is Jim Stanley, a Texas A and M graduate who last year was defensive coach at the U.S. Naval Academy, Annapolis.

Negotiations are continuing with Dave Smith, who also played with Texas A and M and has been coach at Southern Mehtodist University since 1963.

Argos Land Prize Lineman

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Argonauts have signed Jim Stillwagon, a virtualy unanimous choice as United States college lineman of the year, and are still pursuing Joe Theismann, the No. 2 college quarterback, coach Leo Cahil told a news conference Tuesday.

Stillwagon, a six - foot, 225-pound member of two Ohio State Rose Bowl teams, said he signed a two-year contract with the Canadian Football League club because he felt he had a better chance to crack the Argonaut lineup than that of Green Bay Packers, who made him their No. 5 choice in the National Footbal League draft.

The 22-year-old defensive tackle and linebacker, named lineman of the year by U.S. college coaches at their recent meeting in Houston, Tex., was a Big Ten all-star for the past two years as well as a Consensus All-American—named to at least five All-America teams.

Cahill, who called Stillwagon "the most heralded lineman ever to come to Canada," said he expects to use him as a defensive tackle.

Stillwagon said he accepted the Toronto offer because the Argonauts appeared more interested than the Packers and because the CFL offered him a chance to establish himself in a career while he is still playing football.

England Passes Cricket Test

SYDNEY, Australia (Reuter) — England regained the Ashes, traditional symbol of cricket supremacy, when it beat Australia in the seventh cricket test here today to win the series 2-0.

Victory came 25 minutes before lunch on the fifth day when Derek Underwood dismissed Terry Jenner and Australia was all out for 160.

The win gave England a 2-0 final edge in the series and ended Australia's 12-year-long hold on the fictional Ashes. Four other matches in the series were drawn and one was abandoned due to bad weather.

Jubilant England players carried their captain Ray Illingworth shoulder high from the field.

Australia resumed today 123 for five in its second innings, needing 100 runs to win. But it lost its last five wickets for only 37 runs in 20.6 overs.

Australia's hopes of winning rested with overnight batsmen Greg Chappell and Rodney Marsh, who came together Tuesday with Australia 96 for five.

Flyers Good For 46

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Niagara Falls Flyers may be dead last in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series, but for 46 minutes Tuesday night they had the tough St. Catharines Black Hawks on the ropes.

High-scoring Marcel Dionne finally broke up a goaltenders' battle at the 6.22 mark of the third period, then clinched a 2-0 victory with his 39th goal of the year in the last two minutes of play.

In Tuesday's other games, Hamilton Red Wings took a firmer grip on sixth place by hammering London Knights 8-1 and Montreal Junior Canadiens came from behind to humble Kitchener Rangers 9-3.

All three victories were on home ice.

At Niagara Falls, Black Hawk goalie George Hulme made 29 stops on his way to his first shutout of the year, as St. Catharines extended its unbeaten streak to five games.

Keith Pallett, making his first appearance against his former team-mates since joining the Flyers, made 30 saves.

A crowd of 1,550 saw the Wings move three points in front of the seventh-place Knights and four ahead of the eighth-place Rangers. London had one game in hand and Kitchener three.

Linemates Rick Kehoe and Eddie Gilbert led the Hamilton attack with two goals and two assists each. Tommy Williams, Pat Hickey, Terry Ryan and Jerry Butler scored one goal each for the Wings.

Spiro Dangerous Sport Partner

HOUSTON (AP) — Call Him Spiro the Spoiler.

Last April, Vice-President Agnew was playing tennis in Washington and hit his doubles partner, Peace Corps Director Joseph H. Blanchard, on the head with a serve.

During last year's Bob Hope Golf Classic at Palm Springs, Calif., he conked partner Doug Sanders on the head with a ball.

In this year's Hope tournament, the vice-president struck three spectators with his first two tee shots.

Sanders, a glutton for punishment, tried playing tennis with Mr. Agnew at Palm Springs last Sunday and wound up in a wheelchair.

"The vice-president had nothing to do with this injury," Mrs. Sanders told reporters, adding that it was her idea to have him use the chair on their arrival from Palm Springs.

She said the golfer fell and bruised his knee when he went back to hit a ball.

"We had so much baggage and Doug was limping so I suggested a wheelchair," she said. "He is fine now. Just a slight limp."

Hot Pants Should Swell Galleries

NEW YORK (AP) — The women's pro golf tour, which has been struggling for attention, may have found the answer—hot pants.

"I am sure one of the girls will turn up on the tour with hot pants one of these days," Shirley Englehorn, the 1970 Professional Golfers Association champion, said Tuesday.

"The skirts are getting shorter than the putts," agreed Donna Caponi, the United States Open champion. "I wouldn't be a bit surprised if hot pants made their appearance on the tour.

"But not for me, I don't have the legs for them."

Shirley said the girl golfers were becoming very style conscious.

"We have an unwritten rule now that skirts and shorts should not be shorter than three inches above the kneecap," she added.

"Of course, this is not strictly observed."

Hot pants are the latest style craze of the mods. They are midi shorts-skin-tight apparel that covers little more than a bathing suit.

There is one inherent danger in post-retirement hockey Ivan Irwin hadn't considered.

"We're in danger of getting in shape," quipped the 43-year-old Irwin, one of the charter members of the Toronto-based National Hockey League Oldtimers.

The Oldtimers, due in Belleville for a Friday, Feb. 26 exhibition, began as a one-shot effort a few winters ago, but demand for their services have forced them into a schedule as tough as many of the members faced in their NHL playing days.

"We played Friday night, Sunday afternoon, and now tonight," Irwin puffed Monday. The former New York Ranger defenceman, who at one time had the distinction of being the only native American in the NHL, described the team's formation.

"I've forgotten the occasion, but a bunch of us got together for a charity game in Scarborough several years ago and we had so much fun we decided to keep it up."

The "bunch" includes former NHL players like Sid Smith, Bob Goldham, Harry Watson, Cal Gardner, and Danny Lewicki who make their homes in the Toronto area.

OLDTIMER IRWIN

"It caught on so well we played 35 games the next year," recalls Irwin. "That was overdoing it, so we've cut down to 25, tops. And we don't bother practising!"

Manager Art Smith, brother to famous ex-Leaf Sid, is responsible for booking games as far away as Canadian Forces bases in Germany.

"We go anywhere for expenses and anything above that goes to whatever charity the game's in aid of," Smith explains. That's all our organization amounts to. It's just a group of guys getting together to enjoy themselves.

"If they can help out some worthy cause, like minor hockey, then so much the better."

The Toronto team has raised an estimated $250,000 for various worthy causes.

OMHA "all-star" teams and the Junior "B" Fairways will be Belleville beneficiaries of net proceeds of the 9 p.m. Feb. 26 Oldtimers' visit.

Local opposition will be provided by such former senior hockey luminaries as Floyd Crawford, J. P. Lamirande, Eddie Marineau, and as many former McFarlands as can be mustered from their scattered whereabouts.

Advance adult tickets may be purchased for $1 at McKnight's or Ed Thomas Front St. Variety outlets. All children will be admitted for 50c.

Belleville sport lost one of its most familiar and best-liked oldtimers Monday afternoon with the passing of Allan Meagher, Sr.

A second-baseman for the popular Grand Trunks of the old Central Ontario Baseball League, Mr. Meagher was prominent in sport promotion in the city during the first half of this century.

He managed and coached senior girls' softball teams, and while city arena manager during the World War II era, he introduced locally such sport attractions as professional wrestling, and entertainment names like Guy Lombardo.

A 47-year CNR employee ,Mr. Meagher was one of the prime movers behind the organization of the railway employees' Club Canara recreation centre.

Two of nine children, Allan, Jr. and Bernie, were among the city's more promising junior and senior hockey performers of the Forties.

And several of 25 surviving grandchildren are carrying on the Meagher family sporting tradition in Belleville.

Kingston Council Approves New Track

KINGSTON (CP) — City council gave formal approval Tuesday night to plans for the construction of a $400,000 harness racing track to be called Frontenac Downs on a 64-acre Kingston Township site.

J. W. Sinclair, secretary-treasurer of Frontenac Downs Holdings Ltd., submitted the plans calling for a three-level grandstand, a track five-eighths of a mile in distance and parking for 3,700 cars.

Sinclair said the track will accommodate 4,200 fans, and will feature a restaurant, club rooms, offices and two glass-enclosed lounges which will receive closed-circuit television of the races.

He said Frontenac Downs has been granted 69 racing days during its first year of operation.

The track, being built by Glen Lawrence Construction Ltd. of Kingston, is expected to open either May 24 or July 1.

Jesse After Double

Earl Jesse's Trenton rink will be looking to make a second consecutive appearance in the Dominion finals when play gets under way tomorrow in the annual Royal Canadian Legion Provincial Curling Bonspiel.

CFB Trenton will be host to nine rinks from across the province that will be on hand for the four-day event.

Jesse's foursome made it all the way to the Dominion Final in British Columbia last year, before losing a sudden death playoff game. The competition this year will be held at Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island.

Extra seating will be provided at the CFB Trenton curling rink for interested spectators.

The finals of the provincial bonspiel will be held Sunday.

Garrison Deserted in Winter

Is the Garrison deserting shuttlecocks for ski slopes?

An unusual aspect of the Belleville Garrison Badminton Club is that attendance seems to be much higher during the fall months than in the winter, despite the fact that badminton is an indoor game.

"We were almost to the point of being over-crowded during the fall months, but many of the paid up members don't turn out later on in the year," says executive member Carol Wilson. "Possibly one of the reasons is that many of the members are taking up skiing, which seems to consume most of their time and energy.

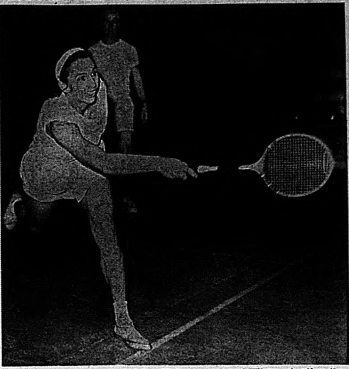
Total membership in the club is 55, including 20 junior age players and 19 women competitors. The average turnout on the Tuesday and Saturday night sessions of late has been only about 12-15 people, leaving considerable open space on the nine courts available at the Bellevile Armories.

While in the early years of operation the club served as a major social gathering and members took part in many tournaments, the prime objective now is to provide recreation rather than competition.

The Belleville badminton branch will not be holding any competitions this season, with the exception of the traditional Garrison final tournament in late March.

The executive consists of president Dave Bell, vice-president Norm Wilson, games captain Carol Wilson, secretary Judy Woodley and treasurer Richard Woodley.

Cost of a senior membership in the club is $15 annually or $25 per family, while junior memberships are less expensive. The juniors have the courts from 7-8 p.m. Tuesdays and Saturdays, with their senior counterparts taking over from 8 - 11 p.m.



Belleville Garrison Badminton Club member Carol Wilson gets off on the right foot returning a smash in a Tuesday night session of the local club. A total of about 55 members, including junior players are registered with the Garrison Club, but attendance seems to fall off sharply during the winter months.

Lions Maul Manitoba

SASKATOON (CP) — Ontario and Quebec led an eastern assault Tuesday as hockey competition got under way at the Canada Winter Games with six matches at two locations.

However, the two highly-rated squads didn't have an easy time over their opponents, as Ontario managed only a 5-2 win over Manitoba and Quebec edged Saskatchewan 4-2.

In other games, Prince Edward Island surprised British Columbia 6-3, Nova Scotia defeated the Northwest Territories 5-3, New Brunswick whipped the Yukon 12-3 and a scrappy Newfoundland team held Alberta to a 4-4 tie.

Hockey, which concludes Sunday afternoon, is being held as a two section, single round-robin tournament. Ontario, Manitoba, N.B., the Yukon, Newfoundland and Alberta are in A section, while P.E.I., B.C., N.S., N.W.T., Saskatchewan and Quebec comprise the B section.

At the end of round-robin play, the top two teams in each section will compete in a semi-final series, with the winner of A taking on the runnerup in B and the winner of B meeting the second-place finisher in A division.

The winners will play off for the gold and silver medals and the losers for the bronze.

Ontario's team — Peterborough Lions — scored two goals within three minutes in the third period to break open a rugged game with Manitoba.

Ontario held a 3-2 lead midway through the final period before Doug Murray beat Manitoba goalie Jim Foubister on a deflection from a blueline shot. Rick Kemp put the game out of reach with a powerplay goal at 13:57.

Bob Gainey, Rick Nobes and Davey Jenish also scored for Ontario, who had 21 shots in the third period.

Games' Spotlight Turns to Mountain

SASKATOON (CP) — Blackstrap Mountain, the 300-foot pride and joy of Saskatchewan —give or take a foot or two to allow for snowfall or settling— gets the supreme test today as Canada Winter Games skiers invade the man-made slopes.

There have been reports of not enough snow, not enough hard-packed base—but at least one authority says there should be no problems.

Nancy Green-Raine, retired world ski queen, tested the course Tuesday and reported:

"It's great, beautiful. You couldn't find better conditions anywhere. The snow is beautifully packed.

"If the weather stays like this, it will be ideal and it will hold up under competition."

However, just in case, the snow-making machinery was howling late into the night to put as much snow as possible on the slopes before the men's and women's slalom specialists rip down it today.

The nights have been cold, but temperatures have been soaring into the 40s during the day.

Boxing, men's curling and fencing wound up Tuesday, a day of action which saw 13 gold and silver and 16 bronze medals dispensed.

Defending champion Ontario kept a strong lead in the medal standings—23 golds, 18 silvers and 13 bronze compared with 14 gold, nine silvers and 14 bronze by runner-up British Columbia.

However, in the province-by-province standing—which takes into account the performance by every athlete in the field—the margin was much more narrow.

Ontario was still in the lead, but by a scant two points—98 to 96—over B.C.

In Tuesday's action, boxing held the spotlight.

Not only were there nine gold, nine silver and eight bronze medals decided, but the first real drama of the games erupted.

Bob Proulx of Kitchener, Ont., was a certain bronze-medal winner in light-welter boxing as a loser in the semi-final. Boxing gives twin bronzes in every division.

However, he went out on a disqualification, warned once for a low blow, once for pushing and once for holding, and boxing executives deprived him of the medal.

Walter Henry, bantam boxer from Barrie, Ont., suffered a broken nose early in the games. Tuesday he won his way into the finals with blood streaming from his nose and took his problem to the medical corps.

The ruling was "not fit to continue," so he took the silver medal automatically and Joe Cooke of Vancouver won the gold by default.

CANADIAN ANNUAL REVIEW FOR 1969 by John Saywell, ed. and Donald Forster, (asst. ed.).

To anyone who is required to deliver an address, write a paper, make a submission or review the development of one of the phases of Canadian life with which it deals, this volume will be of inestimable value. It contains reports on the events of the year in Parliament and politics, external affairs and defence, the national economy and Canadian life and leisure activities.

THE FLQ: SEVEN YEARS OF TERRORISM .Text by James Stewart, A special report by the Montreal 'Star'.

"An explanation of terrorism, not a justification for it". "It is also a warning". A carefully drawn picture of the growth of protest in Quebec from first demonstrations and the 1963 "Notice to the population of the State of Quebec" to the details of the Cross and LaPorte Kidnappings.

McGRAW - HILL ENCYCLOPEDIA OF SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY. 3rd ed.

This new 1971 edition is in fact more than a thorough updating. It is meant to serve the 1970's as earlier editions served the 60's, and this has greatly expanded its contents, adding almost 1000 new articles. More than 2500 contributors have pooled knowledge, bringing together information from all the sciences, discussing the burst of research development in the 1960's and the dark picture of degeneration of the earth's environment. Life, physical and earth sciences, as well as engineering, are well represented.

FRASER'S CANADIAN TRADE DIRECTORY 57th edition. 1970.

A guide to Canadian business and industry containing product classifications, trade names, and lists of manufacturers. If you in the course of your business, want the name and address of Canadian manufacturers or wholesalers, foreign companies, Canadian agents and distributors — when you want to find the representatives of a foreign company, or a list of steamship companies, railways or airlines — Fraser's Trade Directory can help provide the answer.

FINANCIAL POST DIRECTORY OF DIRECTORS 1970

Section one of the Directory is an alphabetical listing of key Canadian directors and executives resident in Canada, with their directorships, official positions and their business and home addresses. If, on the other hand, it is the company, not the man, whom you want to know about, then section two with its alphabetical listing of key Canadian companies will help. With the compnay name are given addresses and names and positions of their executive officers and directors.

.INTER - CORPORATE OWNSHIP — Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

The Dominion Statician collects financial and other information on the affairs of corporations and labor unions carrying on activities in Canada. From these reports this volume has been produced. It indicates the linkage between corporations — listing holding and reporting corporations.

CRTC: OWNERSHIP COMMUNITY ANTENNA TELEVISION —Contains lists showing the ownership of community antenna television systems licensed by the Canadian Radio-Television commission. Company name and address, directors and shareholders are given, and if the company is U.S. controlled, this is also stated.

Men Get Hearing After 22 Delays

GUELPH, Ont. (CP) — After 22 remands, two Toronto men face preliminary hearing Friday in provincial court on charges of attempted murder of a Guelph policeman.

Ronald Van Bree, 27, and Richard Sale, 26, made their first court appearance on the charge Thursday, Sept. 24, 1970, and have appeared in court and been remanded on every Tuesday since.

Van Bree and Sale were remanded again Tuesday, but this time to a special sitting of provincial court, where they also face a charge of break and enter.

The two men were arrested in Guelph Sept. 22 after Constable Calvin Muma, 22, was shot in the face while investigating a break-in at a service station. Constable Muma has since recovered and returned to duty.

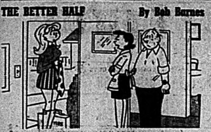
THE BETTER HALF By Bob Barnes



"The man of the house gets all the neckwear he needs from my mother."

Ottawa Will Help Clean Up Lower Great Lakes

OTTAWA (CP) — For Ontario residents concerned about the environment Tuesday was a fine day in the Commons. Fisheries Minister Jack Davis said the government is considering giving special assistance to the province to help clean up the lower Great Lakes.

Mr. Davis said during committee-of-the-whole debate on the government's re-organization bill that he has asked Ontario Resources Minister George Kerr to estimate how much financing municipalities and industries on Lake Erie and Lake Ontario might need to treat sewage to the satisfaction of the International Joint Commission.

In a January report the commission said a crash treatment program is needed to curb decay in the lower lakes caused by dumping of phosphates and other nutrients that rob the water of oxygen by promoting algae growth.

In an interview outside the Commons, Mr. Davis said Ontario should be assisted by the federal government, since if the requirements of the IJC are implemented it will be at the direction of the federal government, which was almost certain to accept the report.

Mr. Kerr's findings, he said, would be given "serious consideration" by cabinet in considering a "cheap-loan" program over and above sewage treatment loans available through the Central Mortgage and Housing Corp.

For East Coast MPs expressing fear that the subject of the environment is capturing federal attention to the detriment of the fishing industry, the day was not so fine.

The omnibus reorganization bill would set up a federal environment department, and Mr. Davis has been designated as the minister who will head it—with his current responsibilities of fisheries and forestry becoming more-or-less sub-departments within the new department.

By adjournment, opposition members still were trying to convince the government that the new department should be called the department of fisheries and the environment rather than the department of the environment.

But a motion by James A. McGrath (PC—St. John's East) to that effect didn't get a nibble from the Liberal benches.

Mr. McGrath said he was concerned that with Mr. Davis' new "sexy" portfolio the minister's responsibilities relating to fisheries would be forgotten.

John Lundrigan (PC—Gander-Twillingate) said Mr. Davis would be a stronger voice at international negotiations if his title included the word fisheries.

Basford Defends Package Control

OTTAWA (CP) — Consumer Affairs Minister Ron Basford told the Commons health committee Tuesday the government's proposed legislation to limit undue proliferation of packages could be stronger.

Manufacturers have already objected several times to the committee about the proposed proliferation provisions in the government's proposed consumer packaging and labelling bill. They fear it will inhibit innovation in packaging.

Mr. Basford appeared before the committee to rebut manufacturers' criticisms and present some possible amendments.

He said he cannot "take very seriously" manufacturers' complaints that the bill's move to eradicate undue proliferation of package shapes and sizes likely to confuse or mislead consumers is an unnecessary incursion of the state in the marketplace.

Under existing acts on dairy products, meat and fish there were hosts of regulations setting container sizes.

The minister did introduce a promised amendment on the bill's seizure and detention provisions which some manufacturers had feared would give inspectors sweeping powers which might put some of them out of business.

Mr. Basford said this is not the legislation's intent. His amendments were designed to ensure that an inspector's powers were used with restraint and subject to certain safeguards.

The proposed amendment would also reduce to 60 from 90 days the detention period for goods seized.

Mr. Basford said that in most cases, an inspector who believes the act has been contravened would seize only a product sample sufficient for use as evidence in court.

"But if, say, an inspector finds that a whole car-load of containers state on their labels three pounds when the contents are really only 2½ pounds, surely the only sensible action, if the public is to be spared serious economic harm, is to detain those goods until they are correctly re-labelled," he said.

Alfred Hales (PC—Wellington) said he is concerned about undue restrictions on normal marketing practice and expressed doubts that there would be complete co-ordination among all departments with legislation in the field.

When he complained about possible additional costs to the consumer because manufacturers' might incur expenses meeting the bill's provisions, Mr. Basford held up two containers for a skin cleaner which appeared to be the same size.

He said one contained seven ounces and cost 43 cents. The newer one contained five ounces and cost 57 cents.

"But they look exactly the same don't they? So don't blame the government for such costs to the consumer."

Price War Suspicious Says PC

OTTAWA (CP) — The Consumer Affairs department was asked Tuesday in the Commons by Wallace Nesbitt (PC—Oxford) to speed its investigation because of "suspicious activity" in what he described as the price war among big grocery chains.

Consumer Affairs Minister Ron Basford said the matter is being looked at to see whether there have been any offences under the Combines Investigation Act, or any misleading advertisements. He said he would follow normal practice in not announcing results of the investigation until it is completed.

Barnstorming Is Theatre Hour Company's Life

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — They travel an estimated 8,000 miles in a season, touring more than 125 Ontario schools in places as remote as Sioux Lookout and Red Lake in Northern Ontario, and as populated as London where they performed Tuesday.

Playing in everything from makeshift auditoriums in the backwoods to the sleekest city school gymnasiums, they've picked up a few clues on what makes high school audiences tick.

It's all reflected in this year's material, a grab bag of poems by a few Ontario students, songs by Gordon Lightfoot and Gilles Vigneault, scenes from a play by London author James Reaney and a selection from a blunt drama about an Indian girl's attempt to adapt to white society.

For the first time since the Theatre Hour Company was developed in 1962, the six-member cast of five men and one woman is touring Ontario high schools with an all-Canadian review.

It's also the first time the company, sponsored by the department of education and administered by Toronto's St. Lawrence Centre for the Arts, has gone out of its way to play in rural high schools before teen-age audiences not used to theatre presentations.

According to Toronto actor, Tom Bentley Fisher, there's a vast difference between tastes of a rural high school audience and their city counterparts.

Playing before teen-age audiences also poses a bigger challenge than performing in front of adult audiences he says.

In an hour presentation that includes scenes from Vancouver playwright George Ryga's "The Ecstasy of Rita Joe" and James Reaney's "Colors in the Dark," he claims "Colors" appears to be the favorite with high school audiences.

Ryga's "Rita Joe" however drew heavy criticism from Indian students during the company's tour of Thunder Bay, he said.

"Some of the Indians didn't like the idea of a white man playing an Indian. We found the reactions to the play very extreme. Other Indians came to us and told us it was the first thing they saw that reflected the problems of the Indian."

The six-month tour can be gruelling for the actors, Mr. Fisher says.

"In one case we travelled 1,200 miles in eight days."

In addition to actor Fisher, the cast includes Gregson Winkfield, Angela Fusco and Don Le Gros of Toronto, Robert Haley formerly of Alberta and Richard Partington, a native of Kingston, Ontario. All are professionals and members of Actors' Equity.

The six-month tour is supported by an annual $85,000 grant from the department of education.

Midget Irish Bounce Back

Nicholson midgets showed that they had more bounce than the basketball last night, rebounding from a 24-7 half time deficit to record a 32-30 Bay of Quinte COSSA win over Picton.

In the other games of the tripleheader, Nicholson slammed the visitors 72-42, while Picton seniors responded with a 75-56 retaliation.

Steve Culhane was top point-getter for the Nicholson with 11 points while Steve Tripp collected 16 for the losers.

John Garvin pumped in 16 points and Fred Lynch added 11 more in Nicholson's junior victory. For Picton it was Hedderman with 14 points and Culmer with ten.

The league - leading Picton seniors continued their winning ways against the Nicholson counterparts. Doug Dersnah paced the 75-point Prince Edward attack by notching 19. Teammate Bill Barrett added another 16.

For the losers, Tim Culhane collected 20 points and Steve Brown eight.

Loyalist Left Short

Loyalist College hockey team, which has had its troubles on the ice this season, didn't make it even that far Saturday night. The snow storm in the Belleville area left the Lancers with only five players for their scheduled game with St. Lawrence College Big Blue.

A meeting of the Ontario College Athletic Association board will decide whether or not the game is to be replayed.

In basketball action, St. Lawrence overpowered the Lancers 93-22. Blair Culham was high scorer for Loyalist with eight points followed by Terry Tomkins with five.

Ted Batchelor paced the winners with 26 points.

Point Midgets Do Their Part

Point Anne met with mixed success in their OMHA "C" playdown series with Colborne over the weekend.

Point Anne bantams dropped a 6-1 decision that eliminated them from further play, while the midgets came up with a 9-3 victory in their best of five series.

Chris Evans led the midgets with five goals, with the others going to Kevin Reid, Jim Richardson (2) and Calvin Bourgenu.

Grills had the lone tally for the Point Anne midgets.

Funds in Good Hands

Funds of the Belleville and district fish and game club are in more experienced hands than those in some banks with the re-election of Fred Clarke as treasurer, the fifteenth year that he has held this office.

Other executives elected for the upcoming year were president, George Hammett; vice-president, Tom Helm and secretary Gary Anderson.

The club will hold its monthly meeting tonight at the Canadian Legion Hall, Pinnacle Street beginning at 8 p.m.

Mr. Jack Christie of the Glenora Research Institute at Picton will have a special film on fish as well as answering questions presented by anglers.

Everglades Show Superior Fare

NEW YORK (AP) — The Everglades, NBC's treatment of that imperiled aquatic world, was a nature-lover's and conservationist's dream program Tuesday night.

Much of the program was a leisurely and beautifully filmed inspection of the flora and fauna of the great natural park, from the tiny mosquito larvae to the big blue heron and alligator. It was a vivid way to demonstrate the importance of protecting all the links in the vital food chain by which the creatures survive and multiply.

Hugh Downs's quiet narration insistently pointed to the fragility of the system of survival—how the land must alternately be flooded and dried out and how dependant survival now is on man.

Much of the same material was covered and the same points made in Arthur Godfrey's recent program about the Everglades on ABC. Both emphasized the danger of pollution, from raw sewage, factory wastes, agricultural spraying, and jet ports.

As in other documentaries based on ecology, the program made a point of "death without destruction," this time showing a cottonmouth snake, hunting for food, striking at a squirrel and a hungry alligator snapping up a young raccoon which lost its grip on a branch-unpleasant viewing but essential in presenting a realistic picture of that all-important food chain —

Maybe I'll Come Home in the Spring, ABC's Movie of the Week was a devastating indictment, visually interesting and perhaps was helpful in understanding the unbridgable gap between youth and age. It was the story of a girl, running away from an unsympathetic family, who becomes involved in the hippie world of drugs and irresponsibility. Returning home after a bad experience, she finds her parents' middle-class world still unbearable—and a younger sister on drugs.

There was a particularly lethal portrayal of a boozy adult party, balanced by some grisly scenes of drug-distorted frolics among the hippies.

Fine performances were turned in by Sally Field as the disturbed, searching girl, and Lane Bradbury as her unhappy sister. Jackie Cooper and Eleanor Parker were excellent as the excitable, self-centred parents. It was a story told from one point of view—the girl's. Even if one disagreed with its bias, it made its point and carried a strong punch.

CBS began a two-part series documenting the changing character of the war in Indochina—the shift to Laos and Cambodia at a time when the United States is winding down its involvement in South Vietnam.

Charles Collingwood presided over what was essentially a briefing on the situation. There were interviews with advocates and critics of administration policy. There were maps, aerial film and plenty of film showing the fighting. It was, generally, a calm and fact-filled summary containing little that was new. Part two will pre-empt Jackie Gleason's Honeymooners program next Sunday night.

Which Day
Is Best?

☐ MONDAY ☐ THURSDAY
☐ TUESDAY ☐ FRIDAY
☐ WEDNES. ☐ SATURDAY

Advertisers frequently ask this question. Fortunately, there is no best day to advertise. Each day new wants arise, bringing new readers as old ones satisfy their wants. We recommend that you start your ad tomorrow and cancel it when you get results. After many years of experience with millions of want ads, we know tomorrow is the best day to start your ad and every day is the best day to advertise in The Intelligencer want ad leader.

Home Oil Sale Plans Filed With U.S. Body

TORONTO (CP) — The Star says documents filed with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission show that R. A. Brown of Calgary, president of Home Oil Co., has agreed to sell almost half his controlling interlion to Ashland Oil of Kentucky.

The proposed contract was signed Jan. 18 but a statement by Mr. Brown filed with the commission says the Canadian government is opposed to the sale with Ashland or any other non-Canadian company and there is no assurance the deal will be carried out.

The Star says the documents filed with the commission show that Mr. Brown gambled heavily and lost on the multi-million dollar exploration for oil on Alaska's north slope.

"They show that Brown's controlling interest in Home Oil is pledged with the Bank of Nova Scotia for demand loans totalling more than $24 million.

"Brown also has a demand loan of $1,413,000 with the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, secured by non-voting shares of Home A."

The proposed deal between Ashland and Home, Canada's largest independent oil company, is detailed in a letter of intent from Ashland president Orin Atkins and signed by Mr. Brown.

"It calls for the sale by Brown to Ashland of 665,231 shares of Cygnus Corp. for $10 million, or about $15 a share.

"Brown controls Home Oil through his holding of 50.3 per cent of the voting shares of Cygnus, which in turn holds 43.5 per cent of the voting shares of Home.

"According to the letter of intent, Ashland would buy the remainder of Brown's Cygnus shares for a minimum price of $8 either 10 years from the date of the proposed transaction or within 120 days of Brown's death.

"In neither case would Ashland assume full control of Home before May 1, 1972.

The deal would permit Mr. Brown to name four members to a seven-man board of directors of Home, with Ashland naming the other three.

In 1968, Atlantic Richfield Co. of New York discovered oil in Alaska. Home bought large amounts of Atlantic Richfield stock—as did Mr. Brown personally—and also joined in the Alaskan oil search.

In 1969, Home shares hit $30, only to slump the next year to about $10. Meanwhile, shares of Atlantic Richfield fell from a high of about $140 to $55.

"According to documents filed here," The Star says in its Washington story, "Brown last year sold 145,400 shares of Atlantic Richfield for $8,024,000 U.S. and used the proceeds to buy Class A non-voting shares of Home Oil."

"The proposed deal between Home and Ashland includes a provision for Ashland to make a $16 million loan to Brown, secured by 400,000 shares of Home Oil.

"It would also permit Brown to continue as chief executive officer of Cygnus and Home until Brown's death or retirement."

Home Oil has been the subject of sale rumors for some time and Ashland has been named as the prime buyer since late in 1969.

Energy Minister J. J. Greene has said he is opposed to the takeover of Home by foreign interests and that he would do everything possible to prevent such a deal.

Dominion Stores Has Loss

TORONTO (CP) — Dominion Stores Ltd. reports a loss of $1,786,000 in the third quarter of its fiscal year while sales were up 19.9 per cent.

President Thomas G. McCormack said the company is "pleased to report that consumer acceptance of our new price policy has been widespread and is evidenced by a most encouraging gain in sales volume."

The financial results are for the 13-week period ended Dec. 19. The quarter included seven weeks during which Dominion cut prices to compete with other stores offering price discounting.

The loss for the quarter compared with a profit of $2,579,000 in the comparable period of the previous year. On a per-share basis the loss was 22 cents compared with a profit of 32 cents.

Sales totalled $205,000,000 in the third quarter of the current fiscal year compared with $171,038,000 in the same period of the previous year.

WESTCOAST HITS GAS

Westcoast Production Co. Ltd. announced Tuesday in Calgary it has discovered a new natural gas area near Glendon, Alta., 90 miles east of Edmonton. The company participated in three exploratory wells in the area and all struck gas in cretaceous sands around 1,800 feet. Westcoast has a 25-per-cent interest in 48,000 acres in the area.

STORE SALES UP

Department store sales rose 9.4 per cent last December to $438 million from $401 million in December, 1969, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported Tuesday. Sales increased in 30 departments and fell in five. Sales of major appliances were up 27.6 per cent, and the sharpest decline was in furs, down 21.1 per cent.

INDEX RISES

The general wholesale price index rose fractionally last month but remained below its year-earlier level, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported Tuesday. Based on 1935-39 prices equalling 100, the index rose to 285.6 from 283.9 in December. In January, 1970, it was 287.8. The index measures price changes in a wide variety of raw materials, partly manufactured goods and finished products selling at all levels of trade except retail.

VICTORIA (CP) — Tourists visiting British Columbia can expect plenty of dust if they venture onto gravelled roads in the province this summer. The highways department says it plans to reduce dust control measures on such roads as part of an economy move.

Moderate Meets Hate From Both Sides in Ulster Struggle

BELFAST (CP) — When Maurice Hayes was appointed chairman of Northern Ireland's community relations commission, The Telegraph, organ of the Protestant extremists, described him as "a hideous monster, a political Frankenstein, a papal ogre."

It is in the midst of such attacks that Hayes, a moderate Roman Catholic, attempts to develop a possible new path to end the centuries-old struggle and bloodshed between Roman Catholic and Protestant in the six counties of Ulster. He realizes his work has little hope of great success without major political changes, though he and his staff of 20 have the support of the Stormont government.

Rev. Ian Paisley and his Protestant extremists maintain that when Hayes speaks of solutions through jobs, housing and community spirit, he is uttering "the big lie."

"Ulster now is at a battlefield and one side must win the war," says The Telegraph. "Hayes is endeavoring that the loyalist and Protestant army loses."

Less violent but equally suspicious are some extremists on the Roman Catholic side.

"They don't want to see political and economic reform because that would make most Catholics less concerned about the border with the predominantly-Catholic Irish Republic," Hayes says. "For a Catholic to tell the extremists that he doesn't give a damn about the border is heresy."

Caught in this vice of condemnation, Hayes and others of his kind struggle to convince both sides that reform is the key to Ulster's future.

"Part of the problem is segregation," he says. "We need to find ways of more mixing in the ghetto areas—mixing Protestant and Catholic teachers in the same schools, bringing more people of different religions into tenement organizations so that they can see their common problems and that they must aim for common solutions."

But while the community relations commission has been functioning for almost a year, there is little evidence of peace or harmony.

At another point Hayes adds in an interview: "There are too many guns loose in Northern Ireland. They should be removed. The Irish Republican Army can claim that because of these guns which may threaten Catholic homes, the IRA must be present as Catholic protection."

But Hayes sadly realizes that these guns, mainly in the hands of Protestants through licences, may not disappear. The Ulster government is already under fire from right-wing Protestants. To call for a ban on weapons might prove to be political dynamite.

Thus the Ulster problem goes round in circles with all authorities warning outsiders against over-simplifying issues. The administration has agreed to political reforms, providing measures that might give the Roman Catholics more voting strength. But implementing these reforms is slow. Many Protestants fear that arming the Roman Catholics with more voting power may eventually lead to political decisions to eliminate the Ulster border with the republic to the south. They vow they will die first before allowing Dublin to rule over predominantly-Protestant Ulster.

Though outlawed, factions of the IRA openly operate in Ulster, acknowledging that they are involved in violence in their drive to unite the two Irelands, and they have a great deal of support in the Roman Catholic ghettos.

Friction, contradiction, rivalries—all these and more can be found in these six counties with their total population no larger than that of a major city—about 1.5 million.

The disjointed nature of Ulster's spirit reflects not only the unending problems of those in charge but even those on the attack. Authorities acknowledge that the pressure comes from the IRA which itself is split, though the two main factions say they have their headquarters in Dublin.

The left wing of the IRA is accused by the right of "desertion and betrayal." Left-wingers are charged with selling out to the Communists. In Belfast, the leaders of the two groups occupy different streets and districts. This open friction and rivalry may perhaps lead to a new area of violence, or the use of violence to demonstrate competence in appeal for more members, especially among the young.

"It is easy to oversimplify," says Hayes as he tries to sum up Ireland's blood-splattered history. "Some may think it is a society of nut cases but you must realize there are a lot of nice places where you don't get violence at all."

Prototype Waste Reclamation Plant Is Advocated

TORONTO (CP) — The provincial government should establish prototype facilities for a waste reclamation process and co-ordinate all government activities in the field of solid waste disposal, the Ontario Economic Council recommended in a report released today.

The report suggests that the large capital investment needed in developing new waste disposal systems might best be met through establishing regional treatment or disposal systems.

The council also recommends that the waste management branch of the department of energy and resources management be expanded to encompass the political, legal, financial, industrial and social aspects of the solid waste problem.

These are the main recommendations of the 175-page report prepared for the council, a branch of the department of trade and development, by Drs. R. H. Clark and J. H. Brown of Queen's University, Kingston.

"The solid waste generated in Canada this year would build a four-lane highway three feet deep from Toronto to Vancouver," the report says.

"Such is the magnitude of the solids waste disposal problem and the measure of our extravagance in using the nation's natural resources."

The report provides background information stressing the need for increased activity in the solid waste disposal field; a review of existing methods and those now under development; a preliminary design for a disposal system suitable for a community of a size and location similar to Kingston; and a preliminary evaluation of the market for products obtained from the proposed system.

The report says that while implementation of the Ontario Waste Management Act, 1970, may raise the cost of municipal waste disposal by an annual amount of only $2 or $3 per person, "the capital investment required will be substantial."

"Communities should thus be encouraged to develop a regional treatment or disposal system," it says. "In so doing one not only reduces operating costs but the amalgamation of many small potential systems permits the construction of a more sophisticated and better controlled treatment unit."

The report says sanitary landfill operations probably will prove to be the simplest and least costly of all the processes for those communities which have ready access to a suitable and publicly acceptable land site.

Alternatives which are only marginally more expensive are available, the report adds, and of these "a reclamation system would appear to hold the greatest future promise, not only as a method of treating waste but also as a means of conserving Canada's natural resources."

The report says a reclamation process has a high economic potential and is directly competitive to sanitary landfill operations at capacities of 100,000 tons a year—and even at 50,000 tons a year under certain conditions.

"Costs of a reclamation process decrease so rapidly with increasing capacity that regionally operated units would seem desirable," it says.

The report says no new products had been identified for which any notable market might exist, although there is a recognized market for paper, metals, rags and glass.

"Appropriate prototype facilities for a reclamation process should be established in such a location that the knowledge generated can be readily available to all communities," it says.

The report says the government should ensure the effectiveness of the waste management branch by making available "such resources as are needed to implement the policies established by the Waste Management Act."

The report notes that some forms of waste, including abandoned cars, agricultural wastes, hauled sewage and mine tailings, are exempted from the act although dealt with by other government departments.

But it says there is at present "little contact" among the various branches of government concerned and that "immediate attention should be given to the co-ordination of (these) activities. . . ."

It says the waste management branch should conduct and sponsor research and development programs having specific goals and being preceded by detailed feasibility studies.

These research and development activities should be concentrated so as "to provide for the eventual establishment of a centre for study and research" because "recorded Canadian experience in the field of waste management is minimal."

Commenting on other forms of waste disposal, the report says landfill and incineration "pose the risk of air and water pollution and in many areas may have to be replaced by more sophisticated treatment."

"Much development work will be required, however, to establish clearly the potential of other disposal methods," the report says, adding that "reclamation systems are likely to prove the least costly to install and operate."

It is important that a demonstration unit be established to provide information to all concerned communities, and "government funding of that unit would appear to be essential to guarantee this result."

Among the various methods evaluated are milling or pulverizing incineration, composting, anaerobic digestion, pyrolysis, fibreclaim recovery, hydrolysis and compaction.

"Landfill and incineration pose the risk of air and water pollution and in many areas may have to be replaced by a more sophisticated treatment," the report says.

Pulverizing, the disintegration of waste into small particles, is recommended prior to disposal by a landfill operation but "is not in itself a means of disposal," the report notes.

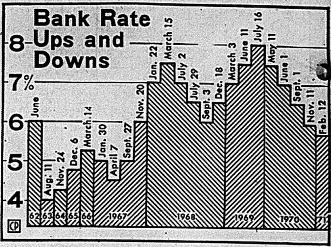
Composting, the conversion of waste into a soil conditioner, does not guarantee a marketable product and has not proved economical partly because of the costs of transporting the product.

Anaerobic digestion and pyrolysis, the decomposition of waste through suspension in water or under high temperatures, are unpractical for rural would be uneconomical, the report says.

Costs and the pollution factor are cited in the report's finding that recovering paper fibre from solid waste would not be feasible, at least for the present.

The conversion of cellulose wastes through hydrolysis using sulphuric acid, to produce sugars which in turn can be fermented to provide alcohol, would be uneconoical, the report says.

Compaction could be of importance in the collection, transportation and disposal of wastes, but the degree of compaction affects the cost of a landfill operation, the report says.



Protection Is Said Needed From Unqualified Newsmen

MONTREAL (CP) — Lawyer Yves Fortier, counsel for the Senate committee on the mass media, said Tuesday there are "inadequate safeguards" to protect the public from unqualified journalists.

Participating in a panel discussion at McGill University, Mr. Fortier said newspaper owners have too much control over what is allowed to be printed in a newspaper.

Other panel members were John Meyer, an editor of the Montreal Gazette, and Paul Zimmerman, president of Readers' Digest Association (Canada) Ltd.

Mr. Meyer, in charge of The Gazette's editorial page and former managing editor, said it was unfair to say that newspaper owners actually control stories which appear in papers on a day-to-day basis.

"Media owners don't have that much time each day actually to supervise or examine each article which appears in a newspaper or is broadcast on radio or television."

The days when everything in a newspaper's policy was either black or white are gone, he said.

Mr. Meyer said that because of big changes in society there is "no longer a polarization" but rather a wider spectrum of interests of which all newspapers must be aware.

The Davey committee report, he said, made no provision to relate a newspaper to its particular environment or to its time and place in society.

"They (the committee) ruled what they thought should be the ideal newspaper . . . it's your readers who make that decision," he said.

Mr. Meyer praised the committee for "accelerating the process of self-examination and self-criticism that we had been doing for some years."

NEW CENTRE

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canadian geologists have pledged $1,400,000 towards a new geological sciences centre at the University of British Columbia. The $3,100,000 centre is needed to replace Second World War army huts that now house the university's geology department.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Tonsils Can Cause Unpleasant Breath

Speak about unpleasant odors and most people feel offended. They'd rather hear about orange blossoms and perfumes. It's a natural human reaction.

Yet, we can't run away from problems that interfere with our normal way of life. TV ads, for example, about remedies for bad breath underline the immensity of the problem. And letters from readers who seek relief.

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I've tried practically everything, but I'm plagued with bad breath that ruins my business and social life. Whenever I speak to someone I avert my head or hold a hand over my mouth. I always act embarrassed. It has made me very self-conscious. Can you give me any information that might help me? — Miss M.

COMMENT: Oh, to have the fresh, sweet, pleasant breath of a young child. There's no superior perfume. Unfortunately, as we grow older, some of us begin to have breath that is less pleasant. In some cases, actually disagreeable.

That seems to be your problem, Miss M. you say you have tried all kinds of remedies. I suppose you refer to mouthwashes, gargles and similar concoctions.

In mild cases, perhaps they help. But when bad breath becomes a major issue, then more detailed study and treatment may be required.

Have you consulted a nose and throat specialist? Anything in the nose that interferes with breathing — and accentuates mouth breathing — may cause bad breath, such as enlarged turbinates or deviated septum.

Do you have large tonsils and adenoids? Decaying food, acted on by bacteria, may be lodged in the crypts of the tonsils. How are your teeth and gums?

And here is an important point often overlooked: the condition of the tongue. It may be badly coated. Especially way back where there are deep grooves that contain decaying particles of food. Many of may patients have found great relief by brushing the tongue vigorously two or three times daily.

After you have taken these steps to overcome your problem, Miss M., then you can turn to a consideration of which mouth wash or tablet or other medication seems to help, too.

* * *

For Mrs. T.: I wish I might give you a specific remedy for your 6-year-old who grinds his teeth practically every night. There is none. Most children get over it in time.

But those who overcome it early are those whose parents realize that the child is less likely to grind his teeth — or have bad dreams and night terrors — if he is relaxed before bedtime.

This takes planning by parents. He shouldn't be too stimulated, or go to bed in a house filled with tension. Review these suggestions and see whether they make a difference. I would try sedatives only as a last resort.

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: This concerns your comment in a recent column on whether throwing a baby in the air and catching him is bad. My conviction is that it is so very bad it has resulted in death. My roommate had left his sick wife and baby son with his parents in Massachusetts. The grandfather would come home from work, pick up the toddler, throw him quickly high above his head. The baby would laugh at this. Grandfather did it once too often. The child died in his arms. The attending physician said that the child laughed so hard the air was suddenly cut off. Can you explain? — Mr. B.

COMMENT : I can't explain because I don't know all the circumstances involved. All I tried to get over in that column is that parents and other grownups should guard against too much horseplay with small children. Sometimes they may be seriously injured if physical play gets out of hand.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For February 18

Your birthday today: Today begins a year of restless drive. Where you have creative ventures underway, expansive progress is feasible. Where you lack well defined goals, the temptation is toward speculative enterprises. Today's natives often cannot resist a risky action or a long shot bet.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Do experiments carefully and discreetly. Changes of routine yield productive results. Friends put in good words for you.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Inconvenient changes seem inevitable. Pull yourself together; at least appear calm. Gadgets that fail are unlikely to be worth repair.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Talking shop clears the air and affords a better view of the realities. Travel is not favored. Socially, you may be with a very different set of people temporarily.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Checking information saves confusion, but may not save you a disappointment. Speculation, gambling attempts now are unwise to an extreme.

LEO (July 23 —Aug. 22): You'll be happy later that you held facts and figures of business in confidence. Meet challenges by not getting provoked over personalities, opinions.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Routine activities make surprising headway as people divert emotional energies into whatever they're working on. There's a premium on good listening now.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Efficiency pays off—think what you're about. If it has to be done in a big hurry it's not the thing to do yet. Seek the more prosperous-looking places and people for any transaction.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 — Nov. 21) An opportunity is present, so leave yourself leeway to take advantage of it. Your intuition is working overtime — respond fluently.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): The special things you know put you at a distinct advantage on the job and in social manoeuvres. Squeeze in time for outdoors activity.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Strangers, friends from considerable distances bring news or comment. Listen and learn now. The evening is for fun, parties.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Your work schedule moves forward at an accelerated pace. Clear off any correspondence backlog. Seek favors indirectly.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): If you must settle for something formally, sign up for your preference now. At work, reach for the oldest projects first. Fill in waiting periods with near-at-hand details.

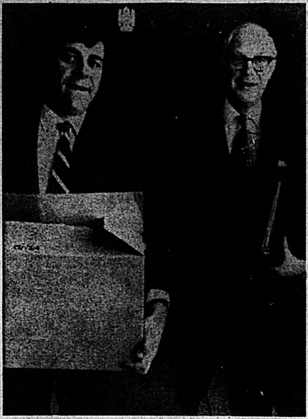
Federal Estimates Up To Enliven Economy



Drury Tables Estimates

Hanoi Warned

Nixon May Resume North Vietnam Raids

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — A tough-talking President Nixon held out today the threat of a resumption of U.S bombing of North Vietnam if Hanoi retaliates against the South Vietnamese thrust into Laos by launching an offensive across the demilitarized zone.

Nixon has made only one limit — he would not use nuclear weapons.

But he does not expect North Vietnam will try to pour troops across the zone separating the two Vietnams, now that its supply lines to the south along the Ho Chi Minh Trail in Laos are under attack.

The president based his warning, issued at an unscheduled news conference Wednesday, on his need to protect reduced American forces withdrawing from Vietnam.

He also left open the possibility that the South Vietnamese might want to launch an offensive against Communist supply lines in North Vietnam itself. But he said any American air support would have to be approved by him.

Pressed repeatedly to discuss any South Vietnamese crossing into North Vietnam, he insisted: "I am not going to speculate on what they will or will not do."

"But any American participation has to be approved here, and any South Vietnamese decision with regard to what they do would depend on American co-operation. . . ."

The president was in a determined mood as he discussed the war, and his refusal to speculate about a possible South Vietnamese push into the North was seen mainly as a further effort to keep Hanoi guessing about his future plans and how far Washington was prepared to go.

Nixon gave an assurance that the current offensive against the Ho Chi Minh Trail in Laos was not a threat to China and should not be interpreted as one in Peking.

"I don't believe the Chinese have any reason to interpret this as a threat against them or any reason to react to it," he said.

South Vietnamese Cut Supply Lines

SAIGON (AP) — South Vietnam forces cut three major North Vietnamese supply routes through southern Laos and drove back two attacks in eastern Cambodia, killing 116 Communist troops, military spokesmen announced today.

Heavy U.S. air strikes along the South Vietnamese-Cambodian border, about midway between the two ground drives, hit at North Vietnamese buildups threatening South Vietnam's central highlands, and other 56 guerrillas were reported killed.

The strikes could presage a new South Vietnamese push into northeast Cambodia. About 2,500 South Vietnamese troops are massed 12 miles from the border.

A spokesman for the South Vietnamese command also announced that 16,000 Saigon troops now are operating in Laos, an increase of 5,000, and 1,600 fresh troops have been committed to the Cambodian campaign.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: Southern Ontario will experience sunny and mild weather today with afternoon temperatures in the low 40s. Tonight much of Ontario will have clear skies and cold air is expected to push as far south as Kingston., Lake Simcoe and southern Georgian Bay by morning. The cold air should halt its southward advance along that line as a new storm develops in the American Midwest and forces it to retreat northward on Friday. The new storm will spread cloud and rain into southern regions Friday. The mild weather will continue near the lower lakes on Friday.

Wheat Pact Flops

GENEVA (CP) — Negotiations to shape a new world wheat pact collapsed mainly because Canada disclosed it intends to revise its entire wheat grading systems, a U.S. delegate to the month-long United Nations conference maintained today.

"We had no choice," said the delegate who asked not to be identified. "With the Canadian grading system being changed we had no way of defining a reference wheat in the new agreement."

A member of the Canadian delegation countered that bargaining broke down because the United States demanded that a new pact be pinned only to one grade—No. 1 Manitoba—based at the Canadian Lakehead.

The current International Grains Arrangement covers floor and ceiling prices for 14 wheat varieties, based at U.S. Gulf ports. The Americans maintained this imposed a rigidity on American marketing. They wanted far greater flexibility by switching the pricing pattern to the Canadian Lakehead as in previous agreements.

These and other differences between Canada and the U.S.—the world's top wheat exporters—are reported by informants to be the major causes of the breakdown in negotiations.

Spending to Go Up

The federal government will spend more than $17.5 billion in the 1971-72 fiscal year starting April 1, according to the spending estimates tabled in the Commons Wednesday. This will be an increase of 6.9 per cent from the previous fiscal year. The graph shows the amount of each dollar the major government departments will spend.

Big Powers Study Mideast Guarantee

UNITED NATIONS (Reuter) — The Big Four powers review today their efforts to agree on guarantees for a Middle East peace as Israel studies Egypt's latest views on a settlement.

The United States, the Soviet Union, France and Britain agreed to begin substantive studies of guarantees they could offer following Egypt's decision earlier this month to extend the Suez canal ceasefire until March 7.

UN sources are encouraged by Egypt's response to questions by Gunnar Jarring, the UN peace envoy. One source remarked: "If the Israeli answer were similarly forthcoming, we could talk of a breakthrough."

The sources, which have had access to the Egyptian document, called it "impressive" and said it went beyond what they had anticipated.

Spending Boost To Create Jobs

OTTAWA (CP) — With the apparent aim of economic stimulation, the government Wednesday eased somewhat its squeeze on the public coffers in 1971-72 spending estimates of $17,523,919,586 tabled in the Commons.

The increase is 6.9 per cent over last year's estimates.

Departmental outlays are up 11.2 per cent over last year's estimates and over-all "controllable expenditures" have risen by 10.2 per cent.

Most departments, but not all, will have more money to spend in the coming fiscal year.

Spending by the finance department will go up to $3,391,160,000 compared with the $3,099,022,198 authorized in the current year; the health and welfare department increase is to $2,628,813,100 from $2,370,879,000; the state secretary's department, in raising its spending on aid to education and the arts, will have its authorized spending increased to $575,058,000 from $465,991,000.

The CBC's share of this departmental estimate rises to $181 million from $161 million.

The budget of the defence department, in the last year of a three-year freeze, moves up only fractionally to $1,822,465,000 from $1,816,252,000. The increase will help stimulate regional expansion.

The defence estimates showed four helicopter-carrying destroyers are going to cost taxpayers about $31 million more than originally estimated when the program was undertaken several years ago for a predicted $220,692,000. The new estimates list the cost at $252 million.

Major departmental increases of $650 million were partially offset by lower estimates for unemployment insurance, manpower, trade and commerce and the Cape Breton Development Corp. The reductions total more than $116 million.

The estimates predict that the gross national product for 1971 is expected to reach $90,000 million, an increase of about seven per cent over last year.

Treasury Board President C. M. Drury, who tabled the estimates, said they are designed to be expansionary.

"The government will be putting more money into the economy than it will be taking out." More jobs would be created, both directly and indirectly, with the increased spending.

Finance Minister E. J. Benson is expected to bring down his budget in April and it will show how the government plans to cover increased spending.

The main estimates tabled Wednesday do not represent the final predictions of government spending for the fiscal year. It

Roads, Sewers, Parks, Parking and Rink Earmarked in Budget

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

Belleville city council, at a special meeting yesterday approved a five-year capital works budget, which if left unchanged could see an expenditure of $11 million in new and other services.

Approved for 1971 is an expenditure of just under $2 million.

The capital budget has still to be approved by the Ontario Municipal Board, but city manager J. R. Reynolds said OMB chairman J. A. Kennedy had already given a verbal OK to the 1971 quota which he said would be approved if it did not exceed $2 million.

This year's figure is just under that amount, at $1,982,400.

Also yesterday council confirmed an expenditure of $2,195,210 in capital works in 1972, although it was noted that priorities of the various items could be subject to change.

Capital works quota totals for the last three years of the five-year budget are: $2,345,000 for 1973; $2,255,000 for 1974 and $2,290,000 for 1975.

This year's capital works budget includes an expenditure of $400,000 for roadways to be paid out of general funds and another $170,000 roads expenditure to be paid for under local improvements.

New roadways scheduled for this year include the reconstruction of Dundas Street East from Front Street to Bleecker Ave. at $180,000 and provision of $220,000 for a possible phase 1 of the proposed north-south traffic corridor, which is now under study.

Mayor J. Russell Scott said this work could either be a new bridge across the Moira in the Pinnacle-Church Street area, or a grade separation at the CN crossing on Cannifton Road.

More than $450,000 worth of storm sewers are planned for this year, the big item under this category being a sewer for the Fahey Street area at an estimated cost of just over $300,000.

Storm sewers are also planned for Sidney Street between Catherine and Moira at $50,000; the Avondale Road area at $65,000 and on University Ave. at $42,000.

An amount of $280,000 is earmarked for general rate sanitary sewers in the city's northeast College - Byron Street area.

Local improvement roads scheduled for this year include Sidney Street from Catherine to College at a cost of $146,000 and a University Ave. extension at $26,000.

Sanitary sewers to be built under local improvements include installations on Moira St. west of Sidney, the Hillcrest area, Valleyview Crescent, and the University Ave. extension.

Local improvement watermains are scheduled for Bell Blvd., College Street from Centre to West Street, McFarlane Drive and University Ave. extension.

New sidewalks to be built under local improvements are on Bridge Street, East, from Farley Ave. to Haig Road and the east side of Sidney Street from Dundas to Bridge.

Construction of this last named section was brought forward from the 1972 works budget in place of a scheduled walk for Leland Drive.

Alderman E. A. Orr suggested the change, stating that the lack of a sidewalk on Sidney Street made it dangerous for children walking to and from school on a much travelled roadway.

This year's capital works budget also calls for an expenditure of $174,000 by the Belleville Public Utilities for new water and elecric services, $22,000 for a new transit bus, and $100,000 for Zwick's Island development.

Also in the budget is an amount of $25,000 earmarked for "downtown development" meaning the possible provision of additional parking space.

(Construction projects scheduled to go ahead this year but charged to the 1970 capital works budget include the initial construction of Bell Blvd., Dundas Street, East, from Bleecker to the divided highway and one stage of the Sidney Street railway overpass.)

Next year, $300,000 is allotted for reconstruction of Dundas St. West, and a similar amount for phase two of the proposed north-south corridor.

But council members drew the line at confiming local improvement road construction in the 1972 program which would see completion of Bell Blvd. to Sidney Street the reconstruction of Bridge St. West, from Sidney to Highland Ave., and reconstruction of Victoria Ave. from Pinnacle to William Street.

Confirmation of next year's road construction program was recommended by the city manager, thus allowing time for the necessary engineering to be done to assure an early start in 1972.

But before confirming road construction under local improvement, council decided to wait until the urban renewal report is received.

City Manager Reynolds suggested there was little likelihood that government grants would be available this year to proceed with any work recommended in the urban renewal report.

However, he said there may be some items the city or private business might decide to proceed with on their own.

Included in the over-all five-year capital works program is provision of more than $500,000 for the construction of a multi-level parking garagge, $160,000 for construction of the proposed ice control dam in the Moira River, and a new rink in the east end of the city, estimated at $350,000.

College Joins Industry

Randy Loewen, president of the Quinte Home Builders' Association, left, and Don Keller, vice-president of the QHBA and a director of Quinte Construction Association, right, met last night with Reg McCurdy, Loyalist College architectural drafing technician instructor, to discuss further plans for an advisory committee being set up to provide close liaison between the building and construction industry and drafting and architectural students and the courses being taught.

Builders to Be on Board

In an effort to allow qualified architectural and drafting graduates from Loyalist College to enter the local construction industry, a special advisory committee is being established with cooperation being offered from the Quinte Home Builders Association.

Reg McCurdy, Loyalist architectural drafting technician instructor, last night met with members of the association to discuss the advisory board, which is being organized by Paul King, Dean of Technology at the college.

During the January meeting of the association, Mr. King tendered his request for suggestions on what the college could offer to the community and took the opportunity of announcing the establishment of the advisory board.

The association agreed with Mr. King that a representative on the proposed board would prove beneficial both to the construction industry and the college.

"It would be a reciprocation," commented Randy Loewen, president of the Quinte Home Builders Association, this morning.

He said that local requirements in the construction industry could be passed on to the college by a representative from the association and the Quinte Construction Association.

Mr. McCurdy discussed further plans for the board and will submit a resume of the duties of board members to the member of the builders association being considered for the position.

"We have a member of the association lined up, but I will have to let him see the resume before he commits himself," said Mr. McCurdy.

Obituaries

ROBERT JOHN FREDERICK (FRED) ELLIS

Robert John Frederick (Fred) Ellis, of 52 Baldwin St., Belleville, died in the Kingston General Hospital Wednesday, Feb. 17 after a lengthy illness.

Mr. Ellis, who was in his 60th year and born in Marmora, was the son of John Ellis and the late Mrs Ellis.

He lived in the Belleville area most of his life and is survived by his wife, the former Florence Ainsworth.

Also surviving him are his children Mrs. Gary (Joan) Sine, Robert Ellis and his brother William A. Ellis of Sudbury and his sister Mrs. Robert (Rita) Holland of Belleville.

He was a member of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen and worked as yard foreman for the CNR in Belleville for 25 years.

Service will be held in the chapel of the Pinkston and Luscombe Funeral Home on Firday, Feb. 19 at 2 p.m.

The service will be conducted by Canon R. D. B. Wright and interment will be in the Belleville Cemetery.

THOMAS McCOY

Thomas McCoy, of L'Amable and formerly of Belleville, died in the Kingston General Hospital on Wednesday, Feb. 17 after a short illness.

Mr. McCoy, who was in his 63rd year, was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Robert McCoy.

He is survived by his wife, the former Olive Blue, and only son Robert.

He was employed by the Ontario Hydro as an inspector and worked for Hibbard Electric before that.

He was an active member in the St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church as well as being active in organizations including the Rameses Shrine, Eureka Lodge, The Zabud Council, and past president of the Legion in Bancroft.

Funeral service will be in the Thompson Chapel, Belleville, on Saturday, Feb. 20 at 2 p.m.

Rev. Laurie Sutherland will conduct the service and entombment will be in the Belleville vault. Interment in the spring at Lakeview Cemetery, Madoc.

MRS. JEAN VICTORIA McADAM

Eldorado

Mrs. Jean Victoria McAdam died at her residence in Eldorado Feb. 16, 1971 after an illness of several years. She was in her 54th year.

Daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Bert McCoy, Mrs. McAdam was born in Madoc Township and spent her lifetime in the area.

She is survived by her husband, S. Roy McAdam and one son, John Wilbur McAdam of Regina, and a granddaughter. There are two sisters also surviving, Mrs. M (Sadie) Montgomery, Toronto and Mrs. R. (Helen) McConnell, Stirling; two brothers, Harry C. McCoy, RR 1, Madoc and Wilbur R. McCoy, RR 3, Little Britain. She was predeceased by one brother.

Mrs. McAdam was a member of St. John the Baptist Anglican Church, Madoc.

The funeral will be held Feb. 19 at 1.30 p.m. from MacKenzie Funeral Home to St. John the Baptist Church, where Rev. J. H. Thompson will be the officiating clergyman. Entombment will be in Madoc Township vault, with interment later at Cooper Cemetery.

MICHAEL SHAWN LYTTLE

Michael Shawn Lyttle, of 171 King St., Trenton, died in the Trenton Memorial Hospital Monday, Feb. 15.

Master Lyttle, who was in his 11th year, was born in Trenton and was the son of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Lyttle and brother of June, Kevin and Victor. He is the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Fuller of Trenton and Mr. and Mrs. A. V. Lyttle of Oakville.

Master Lyttle was a student at Dufferin Public School and attended St. George's Church Trenton.

He was active in the community as a member of the 3A Cub Pack and participated in the Trenton Minor Hockey Association, Novice Division.

The service was held from the Weaver Funeral Home, Trenton on Wednesday, Feb. 17 and was conducted by Rev. M. Caswell.

Interment was in St. George's Cemetery.

MRS. ALBERT SHERMAN

Mrs. Hilda Sherman, of 2 Gearin St., Trenton, died in the Trenton Memorial Hospital Saturday, Feb. 13.

Mrs. Sherman, who was in her 80th year, was born in England and was predeceased by her husband Albert Sherman.

She is survived by her daughters Mrs. Walter (Lorene) Palset of Trenton, Mrs. Tom (Melba) McIver of Toronto and her son Ronald Sherman of Thorold, Ont.

Also surviving her are 13 grandchildren, 1 great grandchild, her sister Doris of Australia and a brother in England.

Service was held for her in the Weaver Funeral Home, Trenton on Wednesday, Feb. 17 at 2 p.m.

Rev. M. Caswell conducted the service and entombment will be in Mount Evergreen Cemetery followed by interment in the spring at Beaton, Ont.

Bearers were John Forsythe, Walter Palset, Robert Galloway, John Croxford, Lorne Moak and William McIver.

DAYTON NICHOLAS MILLIGAN

Funeral service was held for Dayton Nicholas Milligan in the chapel of the John R. Bush Funeral Home on Wednesday, Feb. 17 at 1 p.m.

Canon R. B. D. Wright conducted the service and entombment was in the Belleville Vault.

Bearers were Harold Osborne, William Conly, Cecil Reid, Gary Sine, Gene Stratton and Ernie Godin.

HARRY M. DONNELLY

Service for Harry M. Donnelly was held in the chapel of the Grant Funeral Home on Wednesday, Feb. 17 at 2 p.m.

Service was conducted by Rev. Lloyd Morgan and interment was in the Belleville Cemetery.

Bearers were Robert Niles, Leonard Sweet, Richard Cole, Vernon McKnight, Don McInroy and Gerald Robertson.

DAVID GARTLAND

Mass for David Gartland was celebrated in Holy Name of Mary Church, Marysville, Wednesday, Feb. 17 at 11 a.m.

The mass was conducted by Rev. William Dwyre and other clergy in attendance were Rev. J. J. O'Niel, Rev. Father J. Ferguson, Rev. Phillip Horrigan and Rev. J. Farrell.

Bearers were Len and Pat Power, of Toronto, Terry and Tony Wringe, of Belleville, and Ted and Fred Abrams of Belleville.

IN MEMORIAM

MURRAY — In loving memory of a dear dad, John Patrick, who passed away Feb. 18, 1947.

We mourn for him in silence,
No eyes can see us weep,
But many a silent tear is shed,
While others are asleep.

—Always remembered by wife and daughter Marguerite and son-in-law Ernest.

PIPERNI — In loving memory of our dear father and husband, Earle Rogers who passed away Feb. 18, 1970.

We miss you so much in many ways,
We miss the things you used to say,
And when old times we do recall,
That's when we miss you most of all,
Though absent you are very near,
Still loved, still missed and very dear.

—Sadly missed by wife, son, daughters and their families.

WILSON — In fond and loving memory of a dear father, husband and grandfather, Stanley Harry Wilson, who passed away seven years ago today, February 18, 1964.

—Ever remembered by wife Anne and family.

WILSON — In loving memory of a dear father who passed away seven years ago today.

Seven years have passed since that sad day,
God called the one we loved away,
Forget him—no we never will,
As years pass by we love him still.

—Always remembered by son John and daughter-in-law Joan of Sarnia.

CARDS OF THANKS

I would like to thank all my neighbors, friends and relatives for remembering me with cards, letters, flowers, fruit and calls while I was a patient in Kingston General Hospital. A special thank you to the Rev. J. Leslie Dean for his calls and acts of kindness. To Dr. Bates. Doctors and nurses of Victory one for their kindness and consideration. To those who offered and provided transportation for my wife to and from hospital.

Gerald Brickman.

Model Studied

Flood Control Dam Would Create Recreation Lake in Moira

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

How do you determine whether an ice control dam will do its intended job even before tenders are called for its construction?

Why it's simple — you merely build a scale model and test it under conditions similar to those under which it would operate at the actual site.

Just this has been done at Queen's University for the proposed Moira River ice control dam and conservation authority members travelled to Kingston yesterday to see it in operation.

Engineers say there are a few design bugs still to be eliminated, but in general the type of dam necessary has been decided and authority members came home confident it will do the job.

That job, in effect, is to hold up broken sheet ice which during spring breakup time jams at the river mouth to create flood threat conditions — and at the same time allow the spring run-off to continue on to the Bay of Quinte.

The proposed ice control dam actually would fill a dual purpose — that of holding back spring ice with its head pond providing a river recreational area during the summer months.

The site of the dam would be at the rear of the Belleville Creamery property and just above the remains of an old dam built a century or more ago to provide water-power for a Station Street mill.

The head pond would extend into a natural bay in the Reid Street area and create a miniature lake reaching up-stream half-way between the CN railway bridge and the new four-lane College Street bridge.

Cost of the dam has been estimated at approximately $686,000, 75 per cent of which would be paid by government grants.

Belleville, as the chief benefitting municipality, would pay 90 per cent of the balance with the other 10 per cent being paid out of conservation authority funds.

The city share would be approximatly 22½ per cent of the total cost.

The engineering firm of Crysler, Davis and Jorgensen, Toronto, was retained by the authority to do the preliminary engineering for the project at a cost of $11,000. Of this amount about $8,000 will go to Queen's University for construction of the scale model.

Actually the model constructed by the Queens engineering department represents close to a mile of the river extending from the dam site to north of the College Street bridge.

The 50-foot scale model takes into consideration the natural six-to-eight-foot fall of the river bed between the two points.

The model was constructed by engineering graduate David Bruce, under the direction of Professor Sam Lazier, formerly of Belleville.

The operation of the scale model is simple.

Polyethylene particles simulating spring breakup ice conditions, are poured into the river with their movement being checked under varying volumes of runoff.

A special boom, anchored to the rock at the river banks, and situated a few feet above the dam, would catch the cake ice and prevent it from floating downstream to create possible jams at the river mouth.

Engineer Keith Lathem, who did much of the pre-engineering study, noted that normal winter flow in the Moira is about 750 cubic feet a second.

This flow doubles during a winter flood and during the spring runoff period and can go as high as 4,500 cubic feet a second.

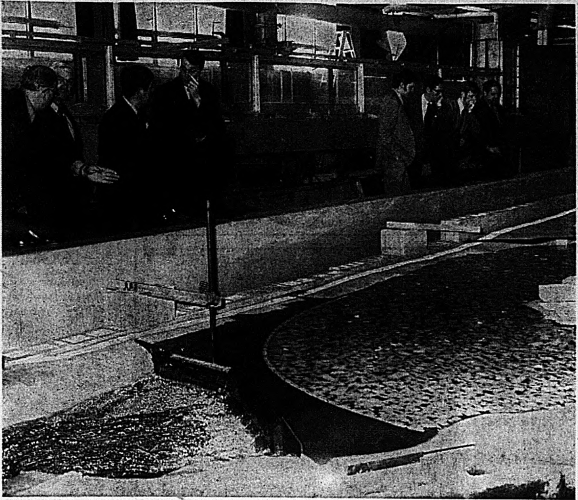
The peak flow of the river, registered some years ago after the spring breakup, reached about 12,500 cubic feet a second.

Engineers still haven't made a final decision on the best type of dam for the purpose and site, but an earlier recommendation favored an inflatable structure which has proven successful under similar conditions in Minnesota.

Just when the city may give the go-ahead for construction of the dam is still undecided.

But consideration has been given the project in the city's capital works program and an amount of $160,000 is earmarked in 1972 for its construction.

Mayor J. Russell Scott says construction of the dam could conceivably get under way next year.



Bird's Eye View of Moira Ice Control Dam

Moira River Conservation Authority executive members and city officials view scale model of ice control dam proposed for the Moira River. Purpose of the dam would be to retain ice, which during the spring breakup period is floated downstream to jam at the river mouth, thus creating a flood potential. The 50-scale model built at Queen's University is being tested under actual river conditions using polyethylene fragments to simulate ice. Cost of the dam, proposed to be built behind the Belleville Creamery, is estimated at $680,000.

Snow Fete Commences

The crowning of the Carnival Queen this evening at NHHS will open Bancroft's three-day winter carnival.

Highlights of this year's carnival will be snowmobile races, ending Sunday with the awarding of trophies valued at more than $1,500 and airplane rides provided by the Bancroft Flying Club. Many other sports, including skating, broomball, tree felling and pole climbing will all be part of the scheduled events during the carnival.

Following the parachutist display and the prize-awarding, the carnival will come to a roaring climax with the Grand Carnival Bonfire.

Quinte area residents are welcome to visit the carnival and are invited to contact the Bancroft Chamber of Commerce for information.

Kaladar Man Seeks Election

KALADAR (Staff) — Local businessman Roy Holtzhauer says he will seek the Ontario Progressive Conservative nomination in Frontenac - Addington because he believes Works Minister John Simonett is retiring.

The riding has been held for nearly 12 years by Mr. Simonett.

Mr. Holtzhauer, who operates a service centre at highways 7 and 41 was recently elected to a two-year term on the Lennox and Addington County Board of Education.

He says he will seek the nomination "in the belief Mr. Simonett will be retiring".

In the past, similar rumors have not been borne out.

A booster of the northern end of Lennox and Addington, Mr. Holtzhauer is president of the Land-O'Lakes Tourist Association.

Deep Snow May Starve Wintering Deer

TWEED (Staff) — Deep snow in the Quinte bushland could seriously increase the death rate among district deer herds before winter recedes.

Lands and forests department officials here are gravely concerned that snow — the heaviest in more than a decade — is threatening the survival of many deer in district forests.

In an effort to offset the feared attrition, game management teams in recent weeks have been mounting a series of wildlife mercy missions in snowbound bush country.

A helicopter and spotter aircraft have been flying out of here in past weeks seeking deer in obvious difficulties.

Once a troubled herd is spotted, ground crews move into the area, bulldozing trails to feeding grounds, cutting overhead growth to ground level where it can easily be reached by younger deer.

"Once you get over 22 inches of snow in this district you run into difficulties," a senior games management spokesman said yesterday.

So far, there are more than 30 inches in most areas — a volume that poses "a big problem" for deer survival, he says.

Of particular concern are pregnant does, now carrying next season's fawns.

Malnutrition can cause them to abort. If they do bear young, their milk supply may be insufficient to nourish the newly-born fawns.

In Toronto, a statement from the department says the number of deer brought down by wolves and hunters is minimal "in comparison with the devastating losses expected due to the severity of the winter".

Toronto spokesmen say there could be a repetition of the winter of 1959-60 when snow reached similar densities and the deer kill was estimated in thousands.

Deer are basically browsers, living off twigs, young bark from several trees and dogwoods.

When heavy lower growth is snowcovered, the animals must turn to sparser food supplies growing further up the trees.

Deer will not venture into deep snow to break new trails to other food areas. By browsing continuously along one, familiar trail they eventually exhaust the available food supply.

Natural competiveness compounds the situation. Year-old deer — last year's fawns — are unable to compete with older animals, particularly bucks, to reach the high twigs and bark.

The recent rescue operations mounted from here are only part of a wider program launched some years ago to provide a continuing source of winter supplies in Quinte deer yards — areas where the animals are known to concentrate.

Wood-cutting operations are now mounted each winter in the yards to provide large quantities of slashed growth on the ground. The forest canopy also is opened to the sun, providing warm browsing areas for the animals. Heavy second growth in cutover areas also is assured for ensuing winters.

Trenton Base for Ski Flights

TRENTON (Staff) — A sleek Quebecair jet airliner will leave CFB Trenton Feb. 26 to fly ski enthusiasts to Banff.

Nacona Ski Club of Napanee and the Ridgewood Ski Club of Toronto are organizing the week-long charter excursion through a Toronto firm, Skican Ltd.

Skican was formed in 1970 to promote skiing in the Canadian Rockies. Robin Nasmith of Skican told The Intelligencer today that through airline package deals it had become cheaper to ski in Switzerland and this should be changed.

It does not make sense, he contends, that it can be cheaper to fly to Europe on an airline ski tour, when the Alps are nearly twice as far away as the Rockies. Airlines do not offer domestic ski packages.

With charter regulations so stringent, access to such flights as those promoted by Skican are not open to individuals — only to ski clubs and other such organizations.

"But there are hundreds of ski clubs in Ontario and Quebec — and thousands more in the eastern United States," Mr. Nasmith says.

Skican has arranged charters this winter from Montreal, Toronto, Ottawa, Sherbrooke, London and Cleveland and now Trenton for well over 1,000 eastern skiers giving a substantial boost to the economy of Banff, Lake Louise and Mount Norquay.

Now it is cheaper for people in major centres and in the Quinte area to ski on their own country's finest slopes.

CFB Trenton has been used by commercial charters in the past, particularly to fly service clubs on inter-club visits, but the Quebecair BAC-111 will be the first commercial jet to use the base and it is the first vacation excursion

Summer Session at Trent University offers you . . .

- small group teaching
- 41 courses in 16 subject areas
- an unmatched summer setting

Trent University's campus on the Otonabee River at Peterborough offers summer school students an unusually attractive combination of small-group teachings with a vacationland setting. Tutorials and seminars are used to complement lectures and to provide for individual participation in the teaching-learning experience. Summer courses for 1971 are offered in:

Anthropology (5), Biology (4), Chemistry (1), Greek and Latin Literature (1), Economics (1), English Literature (4), French (2), Geography (4), Spanish (1), History (4), Mathematics (3), Philosophy (1) Physics (1), Politics (2), Psychology (3), Sociology (4).

Courses that may be of particular interest include a second-year course in General Human Geography, by Professor Peter Ambrose of the University of Sussex.

A field course in Anthropology offers students an opportunity to work and study at an archaelogical site. There will be as well a Sociology course dealing with French-Canadian Society, which will include a two-week field trip to the province of Quebec.

Summer school begins July 5 and ends August 14. Applications must be received by May 1, 1971.

Credibility Gap

While this newspaper has joined with most of the press of Canada in commenting favorably on the Senate report on the mass media, we have to question the credibility of some of the statements of Senator Keith Davey.

Senator Davey for one has not done his homework. Otherwise he would not have come to Belleville the other day to tell Grade 13 students of Moira secondary that the press "did nothing beforehand to prepare Canadians for events of the magnitude of the FLQ situation."

Not true, Senator Davey — and if you want proof, our files are available to you or anybody else to find that The Intelligencer has warned repeatedly over the past year, and long before that, of the subversive trends that have been rending Western society — and with ample reference, moreover, to what has been going on in Canada itself.

Some examples: January 7, 1970 — "In the Communist world they prattle about a democracy that does not exist, in the sense that each individuals's voice is heard. In the Western world we do have freedom of speech and all the other freedoms as well . . . but it is not a perfect democracy either because so many of us fail to make our views known, attend political meetings or even cast our ballots at election time."

In this context, consider the weak student response to Senator Davey at question time, and the lamentable turnout at the local elections in Belleville last December. Over past months we have had scant public response to our warnings about subversion and none whatsoever from students. So what has been occupying the young people? Well, we recall a panel discussion on drugs at the Rotary Club, and lately one group has been in a state of anxiety over inability to obtain cut-rate prices at local theatres.

"Public apathy is public enemy number one," said Senator Davey. And there we are in agreement.

On January 12, 1970 we wrote: "History then is in the making in our ever-changing society. Much of what is happening is disturbing and that is all to the good provided that the public at large . . . the 'silent majority,' get involved. The latter must make themselves heard more effectively because in large measure today it is only the voice of those who would undermine our society, who seek to move the western world to the extreme left, who for that reason condone anarchy and provocation . . . that voice we say is the one that is being heard with disturbing regularity."

The Intelligencer has also drawn attention consistently to the clear leftist bias and anti-Americanism of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation and the editorials of The Globe and Mail. Canada's "national newspaper," we wrote on January 30 last year, "is all upset over what it calls a political polarization in Quebec. For some reason the newspaper fears that the rightist orientation of political parties there 'spells danger for that province and perhaps for the country."

With the entry of the Creditistes into Quebec politics, the newspaper saw the spectre of a return of "repressive Duplessisism," while the then ruling Union Nationale party was 'quintessentially conservative and indeed reactionary, with a history of siding with the rich and the powerful. . ." The Globe went on to infer that any reforms might come via the Liberal party, but the newspaper had also expressed concern about a possible "backlash against youth," and about "labor unrest," and this prompted us to conclude: "Bring on the agitators, the mobs, the dissenters. Montreal and Quebec have not seen a good riot in quite a while. And their rallying cry? Why, out with the right — and in with the left, of course."

In Toronto recently Maoist agitator Robert Cruise was tried as a petty criminal and jailed for a year for possession of an offensive weapon; he also got six months for obstructing police. But it is as a Communist activist on university campuses that Cruise is best known. Vancouver Sun writer Keith Bradbury told Cruise's story early last year, relating the one-time law student's prediction that his followers would launch guerrilla warfare in Quebec within two years and "we are consciously organizing and preparing for the armed overthrow of the Canadian government."

"It is people like Cruise whom the Canadian public must beware of," we wrote on Feb. 2, 1970. "The time has come to tell the public the full extent of the Communist conspiracy in our midst. The public should know what is happening . . . particularly among the younger generation in the universities and secondary schools."

We repeated such warnings many times since, including references to the potential for trouble in Quebec.

And Senator Davey says the press did nothing.

NDP's Max Saltsman Fears 'Waffle Group' Takeover

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — If the New Democrats manage, within reasonable time, to find their way out of the party's deepening Waffle wilderness, Max Saltsman, their federal MP for Ontario's Waterloo constituency, could be their future leader.

He is young enough. Going on 50.

He is a sound, sensible, middle - of - the - road thinking reformer.

And he is popular, the first New Democrat ever to win this still solidly moderate old Ontario riding of Waterloo which, until he came along seven years ago, the Liberals and Conservatives had taken turns winning every since the first federal election in 1867.

He has held it safely through three elections, one of his small minority party's survivors of Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau's triumphant march to majority Liberal power and glory.

Max Saltsman, attractive, instinctively pleasant to everyone, enormously able, just might have been a candidate at the April convention when the NDP, whose spiritual leader, at least in the public eye, long has been good, grey Stanley Knowles, meets to elect a successor to Thomas Clement Douglas.

Tommy Douglas, one of the original small band of bright young men around the founding father, J. S. Woodsworth of the CCF, has been a practising socialist all his adult life. A veteran who initially entered Parliament back in 1935, he became Premier of Saskatchewan then NDP federal leader these past nine years, and is stepping down without, at this critical point in his party's time, designating a personal choice of successor.

And right there, with his failure to give the slightest indication whom he, as, well — as Mr. CCF-NDP if there is anyone — might personally prefer to see take over, Tommy Douglas has put his party in peril and the future of some of its parliamentary members in doubt.

Into the vacuum — and the contest to fill the Douglas shoes — have rushed several orthodox NDP leadership candidates and a decidedly unorthodox entry, the nominee of the party's Far Left, ultra - nationalistic socialist extremist Waffle wing.

Led by a miniscule university - academic, self - styled student "intellectual" minority, the Wafflers, fears Max Saltsman, simply because they practise the militancy of extremism, could capture and destroy the NDP.

The wild Waffle wing at least effectively killed any possibility of Max Saltsman, or any other NDP moderate like him, trying for the leadership.

Max Saltsman feels he is an NDP moderate, for he, with three other socialist MPs, Vancouver's Harold Winch, Surrey's Barry Mather, and Skeena's Frank Howard, voted for the War Measures Act.

And this, with the "Wafflers" in NDP ascendancy through their arrogant pretense at intellectual superiority — academic snobbery, Max Saltsman terms it — killed any chance of even a moderate law-and-order advocate making it to the leadership.

Vainly Max Saltsman and other cooler NDP heads have tried explaining to the "Wafflers" that their covert sympathy and often something approaching support for FLQ terror — not as a crime, mind you, but as a symptom of social sickness — dissolved what always slight hope the party may have had of winning the swing, or uncommitted vote in the next election.

The vast majority of Canadians supported the War Measures Act and the polls clearly proved that what base we had built over long years of hard work with the ordinary people had melted, he argued.

But the "Wafflers" simply answered that if this was so it proved only that the "people" — the average Canadian on whom the party must depend if it ever is to win power — are "stupid."

The "Wafflers," warns Max Saltsman, are so rabidly anti - American that any Canadians — including members of the NDP itself — who do not openly revile the United States are despised as "running dogs for Yankee imperialism," as he himself is regarded by the wild-men of the "Waffle".

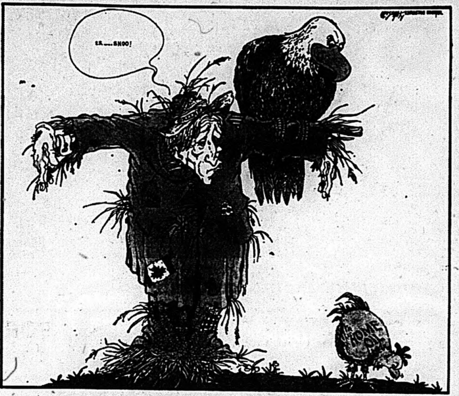
The delegates at the leadership convention, the way Max Saltsman, practising and extremely professional politician, sizes then up, fall into three groups. There is the "Waffle Wing," which, because its militants and extremists "work at it," will control, perhaps, a third of the votes. There are the "Moderates," the older non-academics of the party organization itself and its trade union supporters, with another third of the votes. And in between, the "undecided".

If the "Wafflers" win or even make a strong showing, worries Max Saltsman, it will be the beginning of the end for the NDP.

He will quit the party under the threat of a "Waffle" power takeover, and suspects others in the NDP, including MPs and provincial MLAs, will, too.

The "Waffle" wing, warns Max Saltsman, alienated from reason on the far-out side of the "lunatic line," suffers a paranoia against society itself and the system, and, having faith or hope in nothing, believes only in destruction.

And unless it can be disarmed and discredited at the NDP convention, the fear haunts him that it wil be the party's own built-in self-destruct mechanism.



More on Separate School Education

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

There would seem to be little purpose served by discussing the Separate School problem with your recent correspondents on this subject. Their main complaint against Separate Schools seems to stem from their dislike of all religion, but particularly the Roman Catholic ethic.

It is amazing, however, and worth some comment how narrow in their thinking these self-styled broad-minded thinkers can become when they are confronted with an emotional question about which there is a great body of opinion different from their own.

The spokesman for the "H. Arbinger Society" indicates at one point in his letter that he is a graduate of Separate Schools but his letter reads more like the effort of a Rochdale graduate. I wonder about his authority for the statement that Separate School supporters claim a superiority for their academic standing over the public school system. It is my understanding that the Department of Education controls the academic standards for both sections of the public schools and do actually set grade 13 examinations for all Ontario students. The H. Arbinger Society spokesman then proceeds to make his own judgment of the academic standards of both sections by his statement that "they both make the same education blunders."

Like many critics of Separate Schools he connects the system with the sin of "religious segregation". He apparently believes that all segregation is morally wrong, even though it might be freely accepted and does not interfere with the rights and privileges of other people. Instead of allowing parents to freely segregate their children in the Christian atmosphere of the Separate School, he would, through government action, coerce the segregation of all children in his own concept of the perfect school where the students might straggle in to class at any hour, unkempt, in nondescript dress, a dishevelled assortment of slobs. Most parents would prefer the cleansed and attractive "sausages".

The religious intolerance and discrimination that "E. Gibson" would like to see terminated is all too apparent in his assumption that all the world's troubles and suffering are centred in commonly considered Catholic countries and are in some way the result of Separate and Catholic education.

The Catholic parents of Ontario who many years ago decided that they wanted to have their children educated in a Christian atmosphere of their own choosing and by educators who believe and teach the Christian and Catholic ethic, did nothing that was not their right to do. The British North America Act protects that right and the United Nations Universal Declaration of Human Rights endorses this principle.

These parents are required to pay taxes for the support of secondary schools which they prefer not to use. They are requesting that the government give them the benefit of their own taxes for the support of their own schools. There is nothing subversive or sinister about their action, nor was it ever their intention to interfere with the rights of other citizens or to do any damage to the public school system.

It is unfortunate that so many people choose to see something sinister about the Separate Schools, but on the other hand there are many people who so appreciate the concept behind the Separate Schools that they are prepared to follow their example, as witness the ever-growing district Christian Schools and the recent decision by Reverend Paul Smith of Peoples Church, Toronto, to establish a Christian school for his people.

FOR A TOLERANT SOCIETY

The Irish Tragedy—What Next?

Moncton Transcript
Ottawa Journal

This year is the fiftieth anniversary of the partition of Ireland. There is little to celebrate in that, for events in Ulster in the first six weeks of the year are taking an ugly turn toward the sort of civil war which bedevilled the Irish Free State (Eire) in the year-and-a-half following partition.

. . . Ulster is awash in anarchy, ripe for an IRA-fostered civil war. What is wanting is leadership.

Britain's Daily Mail noting the fiftieth anniversary, made a recent suggestion:

"Why don't the prime ministers of Britain, Northern Ireland and Eire meet Protestant and Catholic church leaders at Armagh, the centre of faith for all Irish Christians, and there declare their determination to stand together for peace and justice? . . . Only some such gesture of imagination and generosity will ever heal the wounds of Ireland."

Such a meeting would be an improbable event; it might issue a statement which would have no effect at all. But clearly something more is called for than additional British troops. The ominious thing is, nothing else is even in sight.

Bernadette Devlin, the firebrand member of the British Parliament who already has served one jail term for her part in previous rioting, is in the United States preaching a brand of revolutionary socialism that is not too far removed from that preached elsewhere, including Canada, by wild-eyed revolutionaries. When Miss Devlin speaks of the workers marching through the ranks of the middle and upper classes to establish a workers' society she sounds very similar in tone to some of the Quebec Liberation Front spokesmen.

For the sake of keeping things in perspective, it should be borne in mind that the rioting that is grabbing the headlines is taking place only in certain centres and generally speaking the rest of Northern Ireland is quiet.

There seems to be no solution to the Irish problem other than good sense and a willingness to allow reform measures to take root. The terrible thing is that now that action is being taken to improve the lot of the Catholic minority, the roots of bitterness and bigotry on both sides are so embedded that moderation appears unlikely.

Canadians as Beer Drinkers

Peterborough Examiner

The dubious distinction of being the best beer drinkers in the world is not ours. "Beer in Canada," a publication of the Brewers Association of Canada, reports that world beer consumption reached 12,346 million imperial gallons in 1969.

As for Canada, the paper says, it "continues to retain its place half-way down the list as 'an average' among beer-drinkers." There goes our reputation.

Anyway, among beer drinkers, West Germany is first, with Czechoslovakia, Belgium, Australia, New Zealand, Denmark, Austria, United Kingdom, Switzerland, Canada, U.S.A., Colombia, Sweden, Netherlands, France, Norway, Mexico, Peru, Chile, Argentina and Italy following in that order.

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

The third floor of Belleville General Hospital was closed to visitors this morning on orders of W. H. Wakefield, superintendent. The third floor encompasses the maternity ward, and will be shut off to guard against influenza.

In order to comply with the Government's economy program the Post Office Department is required to reduce the number of active letter carriers and curtail delivery to residential areas of the city to one each day beginning February 19. The downtown business section will continue to receive two deliveries.

A type of construction new to Belleville but which has proved both successful and popular in many other centres is being used in the new Queen Elizabeth public school now in course of erection by the St. Lawrence Contracting Co. Ltd.

The Belleville OHA Intermediates visited Port H to play the return match of round. The final score was 8-2 in favor of Belleville, and with the four-goal lead of Friday last the Belleville boys have now won the right to play the University of Toronto team on Belleville ice. The following composed the Belleville team: Boland, Green, Goyer, Arnott, Weir and Whalen. Subs: Symons and Coon. Tom Munro of London was referee.

Today In History

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Feb. 18, 1971 . . .

George Plantagenat, the Duke of Clarence, was secretly executed 492 years ago today—in 1479—by being drowned in a barrel of wine, according to tradition. He was in fact killed after being tried by the king and "court of chivalry" and n as Shakespeare shows it in Richard III, by his brother, Richard of Gloucester. Later historians found that Clarence's own way of disposing of people was to charge them with a capital crime and have them summarily executed before the news could spread.

1964—The United States Supreme Court found that the constitution requires congressional districts to be equal in population.

1952—British identity cards were abolished.

1946—The Indian Navy mutinied at Bombay.

1942—204 were drowned when the USN destroyer Truxton and the freighter Pollux were grounded near Newfoundland.

1688—The Quaker community of Germantow Pa., made the first American denunciation of slavery.

Problems of the Railways

Vancouver Sun

CP Rail claims it lost $7.8 million on The Canadian's sleeping car services in 1968 and $1.7 million on meal services on the train. It proposed to the CTC that fares be increased and that sleeper and meal charges be raised. The commission told the company it can raise its rates. But if CP does raise charges, it will simply drive away passengers, unless at the same time it makes a conscious effort to attract business for its train.

The company has little time to put its services on a paying basis, since subsidies for dining car losses will end next year and those for sleepers shortly after. The railway can simply wait for the end of subsidies and do nothing about improving services — unless the CTC oversees CP operations in the same way as it told the railway to operate and improve a decrepit Vancouver Island passenger line last fall.

Although it may be decided that Canada does not need or cannot afford two daily transcontinental trains, the country surely needs more than one coast-to-coast train on one line. If transcontinental service is set up so that there is better access to trains during normal hours, need could more easily be assessed. For example, Saskatchewan is very badly served as far as time is concerned. The Canadian arrives in Regina by night, both east and westbound. The westbound Super Continental reaches Saskatoon in midmorning; eastbound i rives late at night. CN's connections at Regina arrive and depart at quite inconvenient hours.

The commission should be able to find some areas where the railways can save money on transcontinental services. There is duplication of runs, for instance, over hundreds of miles, especially in Ontario, which could be consolidated. But the commission should not allow the railways to wiggle out of providing an over-all service.

City's Finances In Good Shape

The city of Belleville is in a good financial position and its ratio of debt to taxable assessment is well within the guidelines recommended by the Ontario Municipal Board.

This was the assurance given by City Manager J. R. Reynolds to city council yesterday as members approved a five-year capital works budget calling for the expenditure of more than $11 million.

The city manager said the ratio of debt to assessment for 1971 is 15.1 per cent — a decrease of 1.1 per cent from last year.

If all projects in the capital works budget go ahead, the city's debt ratio in 1974 will be 17.2 per cent which Mr. Reynolds said was still well within OMB guidelines.

In a conversation with the OMB chairman last week, the city manager said Mr. Kennedy had been very much impressed with the city's progress in the past 10 years in the control and management of its affairs.

During the 10-year period, the OMB chairman said it had been necessary only on two or three occasions to reduce the current year capital works quota by relatively small amounts.

As result, Mr. Reynolds said the city had maintained a satisfactory debt ratio to taxable assessment.

"I feel that comments of the chairman of the OMB reflect the hard work and dedication of the council and administration staff and all city employees . . ." the city manager said.

The taxable assessment for Belleville this year is $125,285,521 — up $8 million over last year — and by 1974 it is estimated it will reach $132,500,000.

This estimated assessment figure reflects a $2.5 million increase for the next three years, which the city manager and Mayor Scott agreed was conservative.

City assessment in 1975 will reach an estimated $275 million, this representing full value assessments to be brought in that year under the new provincial assessment program.

At that time, Mr. Reynolds said new guidelines would be brought in by the OMB for debt-assessment ratios.

The total estimated debenture debt of the city for this year is $18,939,043, which by 1975 will have risen to an estimated $23,917, 523.

Wheat

tries likely will end Friday with a "limited" agreement which in effect will allow the existing administrative machinery to continue.

But for the first time in 21 years there will be no pledged agreement among importers and exporters on floor and ceiling prices, or on quantities of wheat the importers might buy from the main producers.

It will, in effect, be a free market with exporters competing fiercely against each other for sales made more precious by the fact that the major suppliers have huge surpluses.

The American delegate said there will be no price war. He said reports in Canada that a price war is imminent are "ridiculous." All the U.S. wanted was "a fair share" of the world market. Asked whether the U.S. has been getting a fair share, he said "no."

"No one will benefit from a price war," he said. "It will not increase the total wheat sold."

But the U.S. intends to remain competitive and will use its huge government treasury to do so, he added.

The American administration provides heavy subsidies to aid its wheat exports.

The American official said it wasn't fair to say the U.S. demanded that a new wheat pact be pinned only to No. 1 Manitoba at the Canadian Lakehead. The U.S. also offered to have its top wheat, dark northern spring, included. But he acknowledged that the Americans had suggested a floor price so low that it was immediately rejected by the Canadians.

Compared with the IGA floor of $1.95½ a bushel at U.S. gulf ports, the Americans had suggested a minimum of $1.55 at the Lakehead—far lower than the breached prices at the height of the battle for markets during 1969-70.

"We never even got to the point of talking about ceilings," the official said.

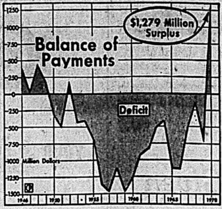
Bus Wheel Comes Adrift

An Identified Flying Object caused brief havoc in downtown Belleville yesterday afternoon with bystanders madly dashing to safety as the missile rocketed for a block and a half before running out of power.

The incident occurred when an entire wheel flew off the hub of a bus driven by Cyril Sloat of RR3, Ameliasburg, when he stopped his Hanthorn Bus Lines' coach on Front Street.

Gathering speed, the discharged wheel seemed to chase an observer or two, but, beating a hasty retreat, none of the pedestrians was hit.

The wheel lost speed, coming to rest just over a block and a half from the bus.



Giant Surplus

Canada's international balance of payments zoomed to a surplus of $1,279 million in 1970, a remarkable turnaround from a long string of yearly deficits, the latest $722 million in 1969. Last previous surplus was in 1952. Figures were released recently by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. (CP Newsmap)

Commissioner's Duties Stated

PICTON (Staff) — The duties of Prince Edward County industrial commissioner William Duggan have been outlined to county council in a 15-point program presented during a meeting this week.

Among his responsibilities is the preparation of an annual budget tailored to community needs and submitted to the industrial committee for discussion.

Mr. Duggan also will compile a report detailing Prince Edward's industrial and economic features. Pertinent information will be included in a form which can be recommended to the industrial committee as a suitable brochure.

The industrial commissioner must become familiar with community business leaders and leaders of civic groups, railways, banks, government, service clubs and other associations in or outside the county which can offer help in local development.

Mr. Duggan will maintain close liaison with chambers of commerce, industry, planning development and conservation boards, tourist councils and other organizations relating to Prince Edward or the general regional area which can promote area development.

The program describing Mr Duggan's duties stipulates that he must familiarize himself with existing industries and offer his assistance in their progress and expansion.

Train Stalled

Traffic was held up for 70 minutes this morning on Frank Street when an east-bound CNR freight developed trouble in its breaking system.

A spokesman this morning explained that air hoses parted on the more than 100-car freight, causing automatic braking.

Two workmen walked the length of the train, until the break was found, 15 cars from the end.

HEART DISEASE KILLER

Heart attack is the largest single cause of death in Canada, killing more than 50,000 persons each year.

Ward System Hearing In Trenton Tomorrow

TRENTON (Staff) — The Ontario Municipal Board's public hearing concerning possible institution of a ward system form of voting here will be held tomorrow in the municipal offices at 10 a.m.

Only one presentation on the issue is a certainty, that of Toronto lawyer James Taylor, hired by the town of Trenton's council to give an anti-wardship case.

Some of those who signed the 400-name petition calling on council to establish a ward system say it is impossible for them to attend because they cannot get time off work.

However, Mayor Duncan McDonald said today that if he has the chance he will drop in on the hearing to voice his personal views.

"I do not think it is true that you cannot represent a ward and the rest of the town too," he contended.

"I think it (setablishment of a ward system) would create new interest on council and various municipal boards . . . the people might feel better if they had a councillor living nearby," the mayor said.

When the petitions were received by council in the fall, most councillors lived on the west side, west of Dufferin Ave.

"These rumors that it is a way of breaking up a clique are hogwash," he concluded. "I think it will give better representation."

Estimates Higher

is customary to add supplementary estimates during the year. Such estimates for the current year totalled $528.9 million.

The gross estimates of $17,523,919,586 include planned increases in old-age pensions and loans to government and international agencies even though the government does not count these in its ordinary budgetary outlays.

A major increase in loans involves an estimated $153 million for the International Development Association, which is an increase of $60 million over the current fiscal year.

The big increase in finance department estimates is made up mainly of $125.9 million for interest on the public debt, $157.6 million for higher subsidies to the provinces and an additional $4.8 million for grants to municipalities.

After the estimates were tabled, Marcel Lambert (PC—Edmonton West), his party's financial critic, said the new practice of sending the estimates to Commons committees for examination means the Commons itself has lost some of the direct control it used to have over government policies and programs.

He also said the form of the estimates, packed in a heavy blue book, makes it difficult for Parliament and the people generally to understand them.

But this year, in an effort to assist people to digest the estimates, the treasury board has produced a booklet called How Your Tax Dollar is Spent.

The booklet, free to anyone through Information Canada offices, is intended to tell Canadians how the government collects money and how it works to ensure the money is spent in the best interests of all Canadians.

These Women Have Tried And Are Pleased With The CANADIAN WOMEN'S FIGURE & REDUCING CLINIC

READ WHAT THEY SAY ABOUT IT!

I've been a member of Canadian Women's Clinic for only 1 week and already have lost over 6 pounds and I can feel the big difference. The staff is always ready and willing to encourage and help me. I'm really confident that I will reach my goal that I have set for myself.

Ruth Perrin.

I lost 7½ pounds in 7 days. I feel 100% better since I started a week ago! At first I felt a little leary of going in to see about it, but once I got there I felt at ease and welcomed. I can hardly wait till the end of 12 weeks to see the new me! Get started right away before time runs out.

Belleville Nurse.

I find the atmosphere very pleasant. We receive personal supervision, rather than group attention. I've lost 8 lbs. in 6 days and I have already noticed a difference in my clothing, plus have energy to spare.

With the encouragement from the staff, at the clinic, and my husband's encouragement at home, I'm sure I'll obtain my goal.

Signed: "A Belleville Housewife."

I have tried everything except the Canadian Women's Clinic. I feel the goal is in sight because it is a personally supervised short term reducing program. In only 1 week I have lost 8½ pounds and feel more energetic and ready to tackle a new day. Don't make excuses for yourself. Let's beautify Belleville, girls. Come and give it a try!

Joan N. Jukosky.

On my first visit to the Canadian Women's Clinic, I was nervous but desperate. The staff soon put me at ease, because they were friendly and understanding. During my first week under their supervision I lost 7¾-lbs. I'm confident that in no time at all I will please my husband and family by improving my figure and self confidence.

Signed: "Belleville School Teacher."

The exercise and equipment stimulated my blood circulation to give me a vibrant but relaxed feeling. I've lost 8½ pounds in 6 days. I find the atmosphere very pleasant and enjoyable and highly recommend the Clinic.

Loyalist Teacher.

Two Views to Be Given of Life on Ice

NEW YORK (CP) — A conservation organization plans to take a half-dozen or so youngsters out on the Gulf of St. Lawrence ice next month to provide a stark contrast to the annual seal "slaughter."

The stunt will be part of the annual campaign of the organization, friends of animals inc., which has been a thorn in the side of many Canadian officials for the last four years.

Friends of animals (it uses no capitals in its name) has sent out invitations to the major news media inviting it to use an $3,000 helicopter service between March 7 and 16 to see the children playing on the ice and then the killing of seal pups.

The invitations say that from March 7 to 11 the children—two from St. Louis, one from Brooklyn, N.Y., and a couple or so from Long Island and Westchester, N.Y., will observe "the beauty and wonder of an area which looks now as it did millions of years ago—with harp seals by the thousands."

Then on March 12 "the commercial fleet of icebreakers enters the scene to start spreading horror on ice as the scheduled massacre begins."

A spokesman said Wednesday the children will not remain to see the slaughter.

The helicopter service will operate from Grindstone Island—where hotel accommodation is "plentiful and cheap"—and will provide a half-hour's flight out onto the ice.

Meanwhile, friends of animals has started an advertising campaign in major United States newspapers against the seal hunt.

Two years ago a friends campaign resulted in a flood of protest mail pouring into the Canadian government offices in New York and Washington.

No Protection Is Given By Snowmobile Seats

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Snowmobile seats don't protect passengers from bone-breaking jolts to the spine, according to laboratory research done by Dr. Verne Roberts and Dr. Robert Hubbard of the University of Michigan highway safety research institute.

The test, they said in a report released today, was intended to produce the most severe conditions likely in snowmobile operation and simulated the impact of a jump by dropping a snowmobile, carrying a 225-pound test dummy, four feet onto a concrete floor.

The dummy seated on the vehicle recorded downward forces of from 20 to 34 times its own weight.

"These forces lasted less than one-tenth of a second, but during that period the dummy weighed from 4,500 to 7,650 pounds," the report said.

Richard Gaudet, a mechanical engineer with Bombardier Ltd. in Montreal, said laboratory tests are seldom accurate and that the shock caused by dropping a machine four feet onto a concrete floor is absorbed by the forward motion of the machine.

"You can do anything in the lab," he said, "but the best results are arrived at under operating conditions."

British Conservatives Fire Negotiator for Big Pay Awards

LONDON (AP) — The Conservative government stirred up another hornet's nest in its battle with trade unions today by firing its top wage negotiator who was considered too lenient with labor demands for big pay increases.

Prof. Hugh Clegg was told he no longer will be needed as chairman of the civil service arbitration tribunal, which rules on all pay disputes affecting government employees.

His dismissal was regarded as fresh evidence of the government's determination to hold down wage settlements that could boost inflation.

Clegg, 50, has been out of favor with Prime Minister Heath's administration since he served as a union nominee on an official committee that recommended a pay increase of more than 15 per cent for striking sanitation workers last year.

That recommendation was implemented, but Heath publicly condemned it as nonsensical. The government wants to hold wage increases to around 10 per cent.

Official sources said the decision to drop Clegg was taken at cabinet level. His appointment as tribunal chairman had been due for routine renewal when his present three-year term expires March 10.

Employment Minister Robert Carr told Clegg in a letter he will not be reappointed, an action recognized on all sides as dismissal from the unpaid post.

Clegg, professor of industrial relations at Warwick University, said: "If this is a political decision I find it astonishing. I would be shocked to think it was taken on political grounds."

Union leaders had no doubt it was political.

W. L. Kendall, secretary of the Civil and Public Service Association, said: "This looks like a fundamental attack on independent arbitration and it will cause uproar in the civil service and elsewhere."

Clegg had been suggested as a possible mediator in Britain's five-week-long postal strike, which has halted mail deliveries and disrupted some telephone and telegraph links with countries overseas.

Some Alberta Doctors Receive Over $200,000

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Extremely high pay of doctors, unemployment and the need to educate the young to find jobs were discussed in three western legislatures Wednesday.

In the East the 34th session of the Newfoundland house was prorogued, with the 35th to open March 3.

At Halifax, Premier Gerald Regan suggested in an interview the Nova Scotia legislature might be recessed for a few days when it opens Feb. 23 to allow the Progressive Conservatives to finish their leadership campaign. Former premier G. I. Smith announced last month he was resigning because of poor health.

Ten doctors in Alberta earned more than $200,000 each in the year ended June 30, 1970, and four received payments of more than $240,000 each, said the annual report of the Alberta Health Care Insurance Commission, tabled in the Edmonton House.

All were medical specialists. General practitioners averaged $40,888. The commission had a profit of $3.1 million.

At Victoria, Education Minister Donald Brothers said enrolment at British Columbia's vocational colleges has doubled in the last five years primarily because they better prepare students to find jobs than do the universities.

As an example, he said, of the 1,038 students who graduated in June, 1970, from B.C. Institute of Technology in Burnaby, 94 per cent had found jobs before the end of the year. In 1969 there were more jobs available than there were graduates.

He said these figures differ drastically with reports of university graduates having a hard time finding work.

OES Chapter Observes 45th Anniversary

Minerva Chapter No. 138, Order of the Eastern Star, celebrated its 45th birthday on Friday evening, at the Masonic Temple, Foster Avenue, Belleville.

In spite of the inclement weather, a large number of visitors and members were present for this gala occasion. They were warmly welcomed by the Worthy Matron, Mrs. Rita Henning and the Worthy Patron, William Calvert.

A special welcome was extended to the distinguished guests, Mrs. Edna Dobbs, Associate Grand Conductress of the Grand Chapter of Ontario and member of Minerva Chapter, Mrs. Verna Young, Grand Electa of the Grand Chapter of Ontario and member of Ameliasburg Chapter and Mrs. Mary Bedford, District Deputy Grand Matron of District No. 12, member of Trenton Chapter.

The Worthy Matron expressed pleasure at having three charter members in attendance, Mrs. Laura Hyde, Mrs. Nellie Clarke and Mrs. Eva Way. She thanked them for many years of faithful service to their chapter and to the Order of the Eastern Star. Each of the charter members was presented with a lovely corsage.

All Past Matrons and Past Patrons were welcomed and presented with corsages and boutonnieres respectively.

After the close of the meeting, a lunch complete with the traditional birthday cake and ice cream, was enjoyed by all.

Women's Institutes

CHRIST CHURCH ACW

Several future events were planned at the regular business meeting of Christ Church Anglican Church Women's evening branch held recently.

Attendance was down due to inclement weather conditions, but those present were warmly welcomed by president, Mrs. Stephens following the regular opening procedures. Minutes and correspondence were read and the treasurer's report given by Mrs. F. Reid in the absence of Mrs. P. Burton who is ill.

Projects planned included a rummage sale to be held this Friday and plans were laid for a card party to be held after Easter, tentatively April 16. Other projects were discussed and details were referred to various members for further information, with these to be discussed at the next meeting to be held Feb 22. Collections were made for the sunshine fund and the travelling basket.

After the closing, Mrs. J Sandford and Mrs. G. Devolin served lunch.

USE CAREFULLY

Recognition of Many Nations

Guest speaker Miss Enrica Ocdol (seated) president of the Quinte International Club, awaits introduction at the Belleville and Professional Women's Club International Night held at the Sun Valley Motor Inn, on Monday evening. Other members of the head table as they were introduced (left to right) are: Charlotte Lockyer, Lois Brown, Dorothy Ellis, and Mary Gleeson.

International Night Marked by Club

By ALLISON STICKLE
Women's Editor

As was anticipated, International Night for the Belleville Business and Professional Women's Club held at the Sun Valley Motor Inn, Monday evening, proved a decided success.

The splendid program based on the international theme had been arranged by 1st vice-president Lois Brown, who conducted the meeting, and her committee. A display of flags denoting the 44 countries where there are B and P Clubs, or associate clubs, and dolls in native costume, formed the eye-catching decor at the head table. All members enjoyed a smorgasbord dinner.

Highlighting the event was a talk by Miss Enrica Ocdol, chief instructor of the School of Medical Laboratory Technology at the Belleville General Hospital who spoke on the Quinte International Club of which she is president.

Miss Ocdol who is a licensed pharmacist in her native land, the Philippines, became a Canadian citizen in May 1970 and while here as a member of the International Club has been most active in promoting its interests — internationalism. This is done by exchanging cultures of the various ethnic groups.

In her opening remarks Miss Ocdol told of advice that her father had given her before leaving home, and that was, "to adapt to the customs of your new country and not try to have them adapt to yours."

In continuing, the speaker dealt with the formation of the International Club which was organized March 8, 1969 and told of the numerous activities during that time. She pointed out two particular events, an Indian night to acquaint Canadians with the culture of India, and a Philipine social evening at Club Canara. Other such events are planned for the future.

The speaker was introduced by Charlotte Lockyer and thanks was expressed by Mary Gleeson, who also presented her with a gift on behalf of the members.

An impressive candle-lighting ceremony to remind everyone of the history of the International Federation and to re-affirm its purpose, was conducted by Dorothy Ellis with all present participating in lighting the candles. Each candle is a symbol of the aspiration and endeavors of the dedicated women in many lands. Each yellow candle represents a National Federation while each green candle stands for a country where there are Associate Clubs. Gold candles were lit for the U.S. Federation, the International Federation and for the future. An international prayer was read by Colombe Both, Dorothy Brown proposed a toast to the International Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, and guests at the head table were introduced by Dolly Reed.

A short business period followed during which time it was announced that Marion McFaul would complete the year as chairman of the ways and means committee with assistance from the executive. Several suggestions for money making projects were given with further announcements at a later date.

Charlotte Lockyer conducted a contest on rivers and canals, and following adjournment cake and coffee were served.

Study on Poverty at Guild Meeting

Mrs. Ralph Morden presented a study on poverty at the February meeting of the Albert College Guild held at the Manor and chaired by the president Mrs. Earl Fleming.

Mrs. Morden remarked that never before have the public heard so much about the plight of the poor which is now brought to light by marches and demonstrations. In Canada whose per capita income is fourth highest in the world, one third of the population live in poverty which means that 70 per cent of the income is spent on the basic necessities of life — food, shelter and clothing.

In Ontario, it is estimated that 13 per cent of the families live in poverty and 106 families in Belleville were dependant on welfare in December 1970. Assistance is given on the basis of needs rather than income and this is decided by personal interviews and studies of each case.

Mrs. Morden quoted the remarks of J. S. White of the Canadian Welfare Council at Brockville who said "one might liken poverty to an iceberg where only a small portion of the whole is visible, that is, the need for money. The submerged part consists of such things as lack of opportunity, frustration, discouragement, lack of training facilities, family breakdown, poor housing, poor health, lack of family planning and so on".

Mrs. Hickey who was in charge of the program based her devotional study on the Gospel of St. John which was written at the request of his fellow disciples and for adult Christians. During the program, Mrs. R. B. Wright accompanied by Mrs. E. Hubbs sang three numbers.

Reports given earlier showed that the committees were busy and plans are being completed for the dessert bridge in March.

At the close of the meeting, Mrs. Reynolds and Mrs. McCabe poured tea at a table beautifully decorated in a Valentine theme

SOCIAL and PERSONAL

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Douglas of Belleville and Mr. and Mrs. Philip Ray of Centenary have returned from vacationing in Florida and while there observed the launching of Apollo 14 at Cape Kennedy.

• • •

Miss Gloria Wardhaugh, 39 Northwood Crescent is reported progressing favorably following recent surgery in the Belleville General Hospital.

Ann Landers

Credit Card Buyer Trapped by 'Terms'

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Please, Ann, a word or two to the credit card nuts like myself — people whose eyes are bigger than their budgets. Idiots who have a weakness for things they have no right to own. Something happened yesterday that made me realize what a fool I am.

I was in a department store, shopping. The woman next to me was trying to cash a cheque. The clerk asked for a credit card to establish identification. The woman replied, "Sorry, I have no credit cards." The clerk then asked in what stores she had charge accounts. The woman answered, "Sorry, I don't have any charge accounts either. We pay cash for everything" With that she handed over her driver's licence for identification.

I envied that woman so much it hurt. There I stood with at least a dozen credit cards in my purse, charge accounts all over town — up to my tonsils in debt, wondering how I'd make it through the month. By the time I made all my payments I wouldn't have a dime left. I'd have to charge everything. My friends and relatives call me Giant-Hearted Geraldine. I buy fabulous gifts for everybody. I also have a yen for luxuries. In my rational moments I know I have no business even looking at cashmere skirts and handmade French nightgowns.

Please, Ann, print my letter for the folks out there who have not yet been trapped by "easy terms" and "enjoy now, pay later." Tell the young marrieds, for example, "Buy only what you can pay for." They'll have a happier life, fewer headaches and more self-respect. — RED-INK VIOLET.

DEAR RED: Thanks for those words of wisdom. And now — may I give you a suggestion? Throw out all your credit cards and close your charge accounts. Next year at this time you'll be happier, you'll have fewer headaches and more self-respect.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I just read in your column about the woman who gave her boyfriend $48 a week to fake a part-time job so his wife wouldn't suspect anything. She even fixed him steak dinners five nights a week! Her letter proved once again that love can make people do funny things. Everybody is somebody's fool.

My wife never walked the floor with our kids when they were babies. I did. She never took them to school when they were too young to watch for cars. I did. I used to come from work and cook dinner so our children would have a decent meal. I carried the laundry to the coin wash place three blocks away when our machine wasn't working. I even wrote to my mother-in-law because my wife was "too busy." Yes, Ann, everybody is somebody's fool. Love makes people do funny things. — BEEN THERE, TOO.

DEAR BEEN: The things you did weren't funny, Brother. They were things that needed to be done, and apparently your wife wouldn't do them. It's lucky for the kids that they had a father like you. Congratulations.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Two years ago I went through a messy divorce. I was depressed and miserable because I was the first in a family of five girls to have a marriage failure. Two weeks after the divorce I met a man who had beautiful hair and teeth. We were married after a whirlwind courtship.

A few months ago I noticed my husband's hair is thinning out. Last week he went to a dentist who discovered a gum condition that is threatening his teeth. I know this sounds crazy but these two features are very important to me. Without them he wouldn't look like much. I'm ashamed to tell anyone how worried I am. Can you give me some moral support and a word of advice? — ANONYMOUS PLEASE.

DEAR ANON: If your marriage was held together by hair and teeth I'm surprised it lasted two years. Stop being foolish. If your husband loses his hair he can buy a rug. If he loses his teeth, he can china clippers. These days experts can rebuild, restore and transplant almost anything. (Remember, I said almost.)

Alcohol Said to Be Greatest Drug Problem

By DORIS CLARK

According to the LeDain Report, alcohol use is so ingrained at all levels of society, that there is a tendency for many Canadians not to even consider it a drug. Yet the report goes on to say: "The large role that the production and consumption of alcoholic beverages plays . . . in Western society should not permit us to minimize the fact that alcoholism is a more significant problem than all other forms of drug abuse combined."

An organization called Alcohol and Drug Concerns, Inc., located in Toronto, devotes itself to helping us all to become more aware of the real nature of alcohol and other drugs.

Knowledge is power. For details of how to obtain the new periodical "Concerns" and how to get into the action in other ways, write me a letter in care of this newspaper.

Dear Doris: I was interested in your letter about students wearing pant-suits to school. I am an elementary school teacher in Vancouver and the teachers are allowed to wear them. I think there are more pants than dresses on the teachers and on the girl students now..

They are so comfortable and warm. I got a bad cold and had to get into my warm pant suit and wish I had a couple more. I don't seem to be comfortable in a dress any more. I guess I'm just a potted plant — chiefly "potted" — no flowers! — All For Pant Suits.

Dear Pant Suit: Your outfit would present the pant-suit style at its best. Long trousers make for welcome warmth.

On deep-freeze days, silk stockings are painfully (and I mean painfully) inadequate. Ought to take at least partial blame for chilblains, colds, flu, pneumonia and even untimely demise!

Dear Doris: I would like to serve "Pots de Creme" dessert in demi-tasse cups and I would like to know which spoon you use for this — dessert or coffee spoon? — Sweet Tooth.

Dear Sweet: Pots de Crème is a super dessert and a very rich one too — which is the main reason that servings are made small enough to be put in demi-tasse cups.

For same reason, bite size is coffee spoon size (about half the size of a teaspoon).

If this super dessert of yours comes of a special family recipe, would you care to share it with us?

Do you wonder why the people you care about act as they do? Let Doris shed light on your particular human problem. And remember that stamped envelope.

Variety of Pancakes for Shrove Tuesday

By MARY MOORE

We test-tasted mid-morning snacks of pancakes and evening dinner dessert pancakes to guess what you would like for your pancake meal on Shrove Tuesday.

We chose two: whole wheat pancakes and a repeat of our all-time favorite pancakes. We had first run maple syrup sent in 1970 by my sister-in-law in Athelstan, Quebec to pour over them but since it is ahead of the 1971 maple syrup season now you can use corn syrup if you wish.

WHOLE WHEAT PANCAKES
(About 12 to 14)

1 cup unsifted flour (all-purpose or cake and pastry)
1 cup unsifted whole wheat flour
2½ tsps. baking powder
½ tsp. salt
1 egg
1¾ to 1⅞ cups milk
2 tbsps. corn oil or melted butter

In order given measure all ingredients into beater bowl and beat until smooth. Using ¼ cup measure, filled ⅔ full, pour onto preheated ungreased electric grill or frying pan at 400 deg. Fahr. or onto greased hot frying pan and "bake" until golden on bottom. Turn over. Serve with butter and syrup. Continue until all batter is used. Serve at once.

ALL - TIME FAVORITE PANCAKES

1½ cups sifted all - pur-pse flour
3½ tsps. baking powder
¾ tsp. salt
2 tbsps. sugar
1 egg, beaten
1¾ cups milk
3 tbsps. melted butter or shortening

Sift flour once, measure, then sift again with baking powder, salt and sugar. Combine egg, milk, butter or shortening and add to dry ingredients. Beat until smooth. Drop by berryspoonsful (or ⅛ cup measure) onto hot griddle. Cook on one side until puffed and full of bubbles. Turn and cook on other side.

NOTE: To add to the pancake fun your children might want to get in on the act by making "50-cent piece" ones dropped from a dessert spoon. When they get them doctored up with butter and syrup they can eat a whole pancake in one bite.

Dinner Menu

THURSDAY

Baked Picnic Shoulder Ham; Mustard Pickles; Mashed Baked Squash; Chopped Green Beans; Heart of Lettuce with Russian Dressing; Cherry Cobbler; Coffee.

SUNDAY

Government Charges PCs Filibustering

OTTAWA (CP) — After grinding to a wordy stop in debate on the government reorganization bill Wednesday, the Commons turns today to a bill increasing pensions for war veterans.

Government spokesmen labelled Conservative tactics as filibuster in the reorganization bill debate that led Wednesday to a two-hour dispute on a procedural point of order.

After 12 days in the House, the debate has covered only two of 34 clauses in committee-of-the-whole, the stage after second reading.

Government House Leader Allan MacEachen and C. M. Drury, president of the treasury board, have both termed the debate a filibuster.

Earlier in the House, the government tabled its 1971-72 spending estimates totalling $17,523,919,586, a 6.9-per-cent increase over the estimates brought down a year ago.

Included in the estimates was $100,730,000 for the environment department that would be created under the reorganization bill. That led to the point of order.

James A. McGrath (PC—St. John's East) asked Russell Honey, chairman of the committee-of-the-whole, to agree that the government had no right to anticipate the decision of Parliament by allotting money to a department that had not yet been established.

Mr. McGrath said that put the House in "an impossible position" to debate his amendment to the bill that would have the new department named the environment and fisheries department.

After hearing the same argument from Lloyd Crouse (PC—South Shore), J. Patrick Nowlan (PC—Annapolis Valley), and John Lundrigan (PC—Gander-Twillingate), Mr. Honey ruled the debate should continue despite the estimates.

Debate then stalled until Commons Speaker Lucien Lamoureux made the same judgment after Mr. McGrath appealed Mr. Honey's decision.

Government sources are puzzled by the opposition tactics in the debate that have dragged out consideration of the apparently-popular environment department section of the bill.

Provisions would give the minister of the proposed department power to set standards for pollution control across the country, as well as manage such renewable resources as fisheries and forests.

These sources had predicted that seemingly more volatile provisions, including authorization for the prime minister to appoint an unlimited number of ministers of state to assist other cabinet members, would provoke the biggest dispute from opposition benches.

Fisheries Minister Jack Davis, named to lead the new department, called the procedural point a "snowman."

The House could call the new department whatever it liked.

The title in the estimates would simply be changed, Mr. Davis said.

Quebec Union Fined for Collusion with Employer

QUEBEC (CP) — A retail workers union local embroiled in a dispute with its United States head office was fined $1,500 and costs Wednesday for collusion with an employer to organize employees.

Members of Local 500 of the Union of Commercial Employees are already protesting what they call head-office domination from the U.S.

In Wednesday developments involving the union:

—Police arrested a union member in connection with the Tuesday night beating of a U.S. union official here to discuss complaints against the U.S.-based Retail Clerks' International Association;

—Judge Rene Beaudry of the Quebec labor court ruled testimony indicated the Syndicat de Quebec store here had supported, collaborated and participated in a union campaign to organize workers;

—Louis Laberge, president of the Quebec Federation of Labor, said his federation would not immediately take sides in Local 500's dispute with its parent body.

Members of the union have occupied the QFL's Quebec City headquarters to draw attention to their dispute with the union's U.S. head office.

Police said the man arrested Wednesday is one of the men involved in the sit-in which began Monday at QFL offices here.

He was suspected of being one of a group of men who beat up Douglas Dority, 31, of Morristown, N.J., Tuesday night. Mr. Dority was treated in hospital for cuts and bruises to the face and arms and later was released.

Yves Carrier, a spokesman for Local 500, said the dispute with the parent union is the result of three years of rigid control of the local by the Washington parent body.

He said commercial workers in Quebec pay $1.60 a month in union dues which go directly to the United States. The payments had totalled more than $300,000 but there had never been any strike pay for picketing workers in Quebec.

In the court decision Wednesday, Judge Beaudry said Syndicat de Quebec had been helped to collaborate in organizing employees by the company's assistant personnel director, Claude Chantal.

The action was brought by the rival CNTU-affiliated Syndicat des Employes de Commerce de Quebec.

The CNTU also had demanded dissolution of Local 500 but Judge Beaudry said this was beyond his jurisdiction.

He acquitted Mr. Cote, former administrative secretary-treasurer of the union, of three charges of being responsible for the collusion.

U.S. Considering Alaskan Pipeline

WASHINGTON (CP) — An Alaskan senator suggested Wednesday that a U.S. task force discuss with Canadian officials problems arising from shipment of oil down the West coast of Canada.

But Senator Mike Gravel said that consultation should not concern itself with any proposal to build a pipeline through Canada to carry oil from the North Slope of his state.

"I think we could gain much from consultation with our Canadian colleagues," Gravel told the hearing. He said Alaska needed immediate development of the North Slope and early construction of the pipeline.

Other speakers Wednesday supported the idea of routing the oil through Canada. Charles R. Lewis, a geologist and environmental consultant, said natural gas probably will be moved through Canada from the North Slope.

Herbert Winokur, a management consultant from Washington state, told the hearing that a statement by the interior department gave the most "cursory and uninformed" consideration to alternative methods of transporting North Slope oil.

Winokur, who has served in posts dealing with the importing of Canadian oil, said:

"The interior department statement concluded that the Canadian pipeline offered no environmental advantages and presented national security disadvantages.

"This conclusion was based on misleading and sometimes downright dishonest reasoning."

Fuddle-duddle Buttons Called 'Just Beginning'

TORONTO (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau may or may not have mouthed it in the Commons, but Morris Hackman has it right on the button.

Says Mr. Hackman, a novelty store proprietor here:

"Fuddle-duddle buttons are just the beginning."

Mr. Hackman, also known as Morris the Button Man, is going along with Mr. Trudeau's suggestion that he may have mouthed the term "fuddle-duddle" in the Commons Tuesday rather than the frowned-upon four-letter expression some have attributed to him.

"It's fantastic," said Mr. Hackman, known for his varied stock of comic buttons. "It will be the greatest thing to hit North America in years.

"There's no telling how far this thing can go."

He may be right. Toronto shirtmaker Roy Silver already is planning to emblazon the phrase on sweatshirts.

Greene Believes Home Not Yet Sold

OTTAWA (CP) — Energy Minister J. J. Greene told the Commons Wednesday that to the best of his knowledge Home Oil Co. of Calgary has not been sold to a U.S. firm.

He was replying to Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield, who referred to a news report that a letter of intent between the president of Home and Ashland Oil Inc. of Kentucky to sell the Canadian firm had been filed with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission.

Mr. Greene said he was only aware of a "purported document which is to the best of my knowledge purported to be a proposal or a possible suggestion that might lead to a sale."

"Any document of which I am aware referred to proposals or a possible sale," the minister said in reply to Eldon Woolliams (PC—Calgary North).

The news reports said R. A. Brown, president of Home, had agreed to sell almost half his controlling interest in the company to Ashland for $10 million.

Home Oil is Canada's biggest domestically-owned oil firm.

Study Is Made To Guard Birds

OTTAWA (CP) — Scientists strolling the peaceful countryside around Ste. Scholastique, Que., jot notes on the birds and cows and chat to village residents.

They're beginning an ambitious study of the impact of the proposed international airport there, 30 miles northeast of Montreal, on animals, birds, people, air, soil and water.

The $200,000, 18-month project is the first such in Canada and the forerunner of ecological precautions to be taken at future airports such as Toronto, where a second airport is scheduled.

Expropriated property as large as Montreal Island is being examined at Ste. Scholastique, where the airport is scheduled to open in 1974.

The site was chosen partly because it is not on any bird migration route, reducing the hazard of birds interfering with aircraft.

The scientists are also seeking to ensure that nothing is done to attract birds through the existence of garbage dumps and certain types of crops.

Seven scientists are being used from the universities of Montreal, Quebec, Sherbrooke and Laval led by Dr. Pierre Dansereau, professor of ecology at the institute of urban studies at the University of Montreal.

The scientists range from geologists to social psychiatrists and there also are 20 graduate students in the program.

Liberals Excited By Size of Crowds

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Liberals are excited by the size of crowds turning up at riding nomination conventions for the next provincial election.

"There hasn't been anything like it for many years," said John Morritt, executive assistant to provincial leader Robert Nixon.

"We thought it was unusual when 1,400 showed up at an Ottawa riding convention to pick a candidate, but the large crowds began appearing elsewhere in the province."

He said crowds of 700 and 900 attended riding meetings in the London area and the Wentworth area and about 1,000 were expected at a nominating convention in Toronto's St. David riding today (Thursday).

House Clerk Roderick Lewis says it is possible for a provincial election to be held as early as April without interfering with his work as chief returning officer.

Sopha Would Cut Ties to Monarchy

SUDBURY (CP) — Canada should abolish ties with the British monarchy, a joint parliamentary committee on the Canadian constitution was told Wednesday.

Elmer Sopha, Liberal member of the Ontario legislature for Sudbury, told the committee.

"I would do away with monarchial ties . . . because I believe fervently that a nation can only achieve its integrity and identity out of its own experience and not derivatively from a parent country.

"We have always been a colonial people with a colonial mentality. In recent years, we have merely moved from the suzerainty of the British lion to the American eagle."

The committee was sitting in Sudbury as part of a national tour.

Welfare Rates Unfair to North

SARNIA (CP) — A field worker for the Union of Ontario Indians said Wednesday the province's welfare rates are not fair to the Indians of the North.

Audrey Nelson of Toronto told a union meeting that a 75-pound bag of potatoes that costs as little as $2 in the Toronto area sells for $22 in Indian communities north of Sioux Lookout in northwestern Ontario. "In fact it's so bad that a loaf of bread is 75 cents and one egg is 25 cents."

Kerr Wants Deposits On All Drink Bottles

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario's minister of energy and resources hinted Wednesday he will ask the new cabinet to impose mandatory deposits on soft-drink bottles and cans.

At a news conference on waste disposal where the subject of litter came up, George Kerr suggested the solution was a "a much higher deposit on glass bottles."

When the authors of a waste-disposal report said that would just encourage people to use cans instead, Mr. Kerr replied: "Oh, we'll put a deposit on those as well."

Asked later about his comments, Mr. Kerr said deposits for both kinds of containers are under consideration. He said he believes premier-designate William Davis favors the idea.

Nine Rinks Chase Legion Curling Crown

By ELMER BONTER

TRENTON — The Royal Canadian Legion's second biggest curling prize is up for grabs in the provincial command championships which started here this morning.

The winners, to be decided Sunday morning unless there is a tie, earn the chance of a shot at the coveted Dominion command title being played in Charlottetown, P.E.I. March 15 to 19.

Nine rinks from branches including the centres of London, Dundas, Galt, Toronto, Sutton, Trenton, Pembroke, Copper Cliff and Kirkland Lake began the pursuit for the top honors at CFB Trenton at 8.30 a.m. this morning.

Things officially got under way this morning when Fred Levere, president of host Trenton Legion Branch 110, sent the ceremonial first rock down a sheet at the CFB Trenton curling club. Sweeping assistance was provided by town mayor Duncan McDonald and acting base commander Colonel Gordon Webb.

Earl Jesse — who skipped Branch 110 all the way to the Dominion Legion final in British Columbia last year — was odds-on-favorite to repeat as Ontario titlist, despite losing the services of second Gord Carroll due to illness.

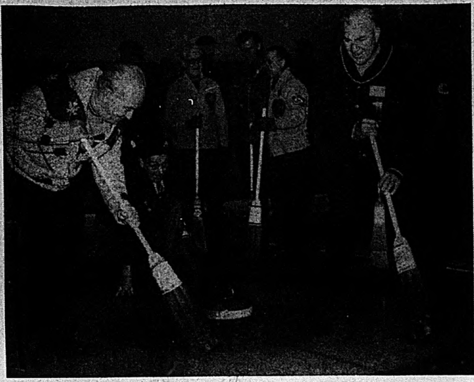
Rink spare Hec McIntosh took over third duties from Carl Legroix, who moved into Carroll's second slot. Wayne McCreadie is throwing lead rocks for the Jesse rink.

This morning's first - round action of the round - robin event pitted W. Conroy's Dundas (District B) rink against George James' District D quartet from Toronto: R. Miller (London - A) vs. Copper Cliff's B. Miller (H): Pembroke's B. Dickie (G) vs. Galt's Jim Brookfield (C); and Trenton's Jesse (F) vs. G. MacDonald of Kirkland Lake, representing District K.

First - round bye was drawn by George Holborn's District E representatives from Sutton.

In this afternoon's 1.30 draw, it was Dickie vs. Jesse, Brookfield vs. MacDonald, B. Miller vs. Holborn, Conroy vs. R. Miller, with a bye for James.

In tonight's 7.30 third round MacDonald meets R. Miller, with Conroy vs. Holborn, Jesse vs. James and Brookfield vs. B. Miller. Dickie draws the bye.



Legionnaires Off and Curling

Fred Levere, president of Trenton Legion Branch 110 hosting the Provincial Command bonspiel at CFB Trenton, kicked off the big four-day competition by throwing the official first rock. His sweepers were Trenton Mayor Duncan McDonald and Acting Base Commander Col. Gordon Webb. The nine competing rinks — one from each provincial Legion district — include curlers from as far away as Copper Cliff in northern Ontario.

Woodstock May Call It Quits

WOODSTOCK (CP)—Financially-troubled Woodstock Athletics may have played their last game of the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A season Wednesday night—a 9-4 loss to Oakville Oaks.

Team officials are not sure the last-place Athletics will be able to play their final four games, two at home and two away. Two of the games were postponed contests with Belleville Mo-Hawks, to be played Monday and Tuesday.

With seventh-place Owen Sound Crescents only four points behind Belleville, the points with Woodstock take on a special importance.

From Toronto this morning, OHA secretary Bill Hanley said if Woodstock drops out, the opposition in their four unplayed games would pick up the points.

"We've heard nothing official from Woodstock," Hanley stressed. "But the normal thing if the situation arises is that the points are given to the other teams.

"That's the way the rule book reads."

Facing a weekend away-and-home series with Orillia, and with the Crescents breathing down their necks, the Mo-Hawks would not be too proud to accept four gift points from any source.

E. E. Tommy Starr, president of the team, surveyed the 25 persons at Wednesday's game and commented: "This'll be the last game they see for a long time." He did not elaborate.

Last month Mr. Starr said the team needed $6,000 to finish the season. Players are no longer being paid and many of the men filling holes on the squad are players from local industrial leagues.

The win put Oakville into a tie with Kingston Aces for fourth place with 37 points each. It left Woodstock with a dismal season's point total of six—three wins and 33 losses.

Jack Price and Ken Knapton each fired three goals for Oakville. Dunc McDonald got two and Frank Hincks one. Mac Westgate replied with three for Woodstock, and Gerry Harrigan collected the remaining goal.

Friday's scheduled games take Oakville to Barrie, Belleville to Orillia and Galt to Kingston.

Chargers Win Some, Lose Some

Coach Sees Both Sides of Coin

By ERIC EMERSON
Staff Sportswriter

Coaching basketball, like any other sport can make a man feel nine feet tall — or nine inches — and Centennial Secondary School instructor Bruce Faulds experienced both feelings in his school's Bay of Quinte COSSA triple-header against Quinte Wednesday.

The Centennial coach led his junior Chargers to their 11th straight victory, a 61-50 decision over previously unbeaten Quinte, a team that had taken Centennial's measure in an earlier exhibition encounter. The win left the Centennial juniors with the only unbeaten record of any team in the Bay of Quinte league.

While Fauld's guidance was a prime factor in the junior victory, some unsolicited sideline "coaching" may have cost the Centennial seniors an upset win over Quinte.

The two senior clubs battled to a 53-53 deadlock at the end of regulation time. With 12 seconds left to play and the score tied at 55 points each, in the three-minute overtime a call by referee Gord Smith brought a low, almost involuntary "no, no, no!" from Faulds sidelines.

The protest wasn't low enough, however to escape the ears of the referee, who issued a technical foul against th Chargers. Quinte's Barry Culkin then sank the crucial free throw to up the count to 56-55. Paul Wolfe put the game out of reach when he hit for two points from the free throw line as the Chargers were forced to foul him in an attempt to regain possession of the ball with only three seconds remaining.

Centennial Juniors built up an early lead in their key divisional battle, pulling ahead 20-9 at one stage in the game, but the previously undefeated junior Saints managed to come up with ten unanswered points to move to within one of the Chargers.

Centennial regained their momentum, however to open up a ten-point lead which they held for the remainder of the contest.

The winners used solid rebounding and a combination of a zone press and man-to-man defence that stymied the Quinte attack.

The Chargers riveted much of their defensive attention on Quinte guard Rick Meagher, the team's top backcourt man. "We felt going into the contest that stopping Meagher was the key to beating them," acknowledged Faulds. "We tried to pressure him when he got the ball and force him to pass off, and it worked pretty well. Once we got the lead, Rick, like most players, wasn't as effective trying to play catch-up basketball."

"Offensively I think the key was that we were moving the ball well," claimed the Charger coach.

Colin McIntyre and Vahe Parmakesezian paced the strong Charger rebounding effort with 10 each, while Brian Morphy pulled in eight more. Defenders Dave Dent and Rob Vandewater were responsible for the effective outside pressure maintained by the winners.

Dent led all scorers with 18 points, many of them coming on lay-ups, while Parmakesezian added 10 and Morphy nine.

Neil Dunning was high scorer for Quinte with 15 points, followed by Rick Meagher with nine.

The senior game was a tight contest all the way. Quinte jumped out to an early lead, but the Centennial man-to-man defence managed to throttle the Saints' effective fast break in the second quarter and Quinte led by a narrow 23-22 margin at half-time.

The see-saw battle continued in the third quarter with the Chargers pulling ahead 39-38 at three-quarter time and opening up a seven-point lead at one point in the final period.

Quinte survived their cold spell, however, and bounced back to carry a four - point lead into the final minute and 21 seconds of play. A jump shot by guard Mike Thompson and a rebound by John Lanning of a Thompson free throw pulled Centennial even and sent the game into overtime.

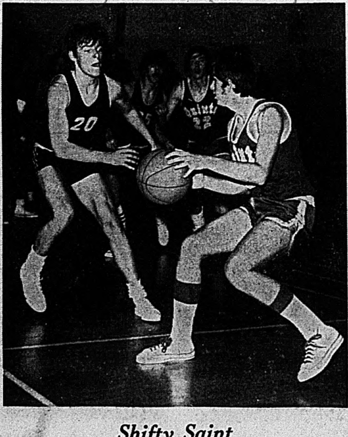
Lanning again pulled in a key rebound and sent Centennial ahead 55-53 before Darvin Easton's jumper squared matters again, setting the free throw.

Stan Brooks was the top Quinte point getter with 19, followed by Easton with 16 and Tom Churchill with eight.

Centre Bob Henderson piled up 19 points for the losers before fouling out with four minutes to play. Thompson played a tremendous second half for the Chargers, hitting for 10 of his 12 points in that stretch of time.

In the midget contest, Centennial almost squandered a 33-9 half time lead, but held on to a 48-43 victory.

Charles Vanderwater scored 14 points for the winners followed by Mark Everrand with 10 and John Spitters with nine. Homan had 10 points and Ashley eight for the Quinte midgets.



Shifty Saint

Quinte Saints' Barry Culkin throws a shift at Centennial defender Bruce Lanning in Bay of Quinte high school basketball action Wednesday. Culkin was instrumental in a 58-55 overtime win by the Saints, who maintained their lead atop the senior league's West Division standings.

Games Crowd Flocks to See Miracle: Prairie Skiing!

SASKATOON (CP) — About 5,000 spectators turned out Wednesday in 33-degree weather to see a prairie miracle, the debut of Canada Winter Games skiing on man-made Mount Blackstrap.

The spectators who streamed into the site, 25 miles south of here, in more than 2,000 cars were witness to the spectacle of skiers from 10 provinces and two territories competing on the prairie in the opening slalom events.

Greg Athans, 15, a Kelowna, B.C., school boy, christened the $400,000 mountain by winning the gold medal in the men's slalom on a 1,200-foot course, made hard and fast by granular snow.

Val Watson, 16, of Ottawa, won the day's other skiing gold by capturing the women's slalom. Overnight snow and cooler temperatures arrived in time to make the course near-perfect after a prolonged mild spell had threatened to disrupt opening events.

As the Games passed the half-way mark, competition was completed Wednesday in basketball and badminton, leaving only seven of the 16 sports on the calendar for the 10-day spectacle which ends Sunday.

Defending champion Ontario continues to lead in the medals parade, with 26 golds, 20 silvers and 13 bronzes, followed by British Columbia with 18-10-16. But in the province-by-province standings, which takes into account the performance of every athlete, Ontario was leading B.C. by a slim 143-138 margin, with Alberta next with 119, followed by Quebec, 113, and Manitoba, 108.

Volleyball, table tennis and gymnastics makes its debut today, but only gymnastics and skiing—the men's 15 kilometre cross-country—will produce medals.

A classy team from Montreal, led by Peter Ryan with 24 points, won the gold medal in men's basketball by scoring an impressive 87-66 win over the Ontario entry from Windsor. Ontario had to settle for the silver, while the third-place bronze went to the Manitoba team.

However, Ontario got revenge in women's basketball by scoring an upset 61-57 victory over British Columbia to walk off with a gold. Host Saskatchewan took the bronze.

In badminton, B.C. picked up three golds when teen-ager Mike Epstein of Vancouver took the men's singles, Judith Rollick of Vancouver the women's singles, and the Vancouver team of Campbell Dalgliesh and Abdul Shaikh, the men's doubles.

The mixed doubles gold went to Jim Lynch and his wife Nancy of Ancaster, Ont., while two Calgary girls, Susan Cutmore and Lorraine Thorne, captured the women's doubles.

After two days of hockey competitions, Ontario was leading the A section with four points on two straight wins in the single round-robin tournament. Alberta was second with three points on a win and a tie, while Manitoba and New Brunswick were tied for third, each with a win and a loss.

Nova Scotia and Quebec were tied for first place in the B section, each undefeated in two games.

Athans, who is also Canadian junior water-ski champion, was impressed with his gold medal run down the mountain. "It's not so big, but it's really steep up top."

Athans had a combined time in his two slalom runs of 72 seconds.

The fastest time down Blackstrap for the day was clocked by Pierre Savoie of Quebec in a first-run of 34.67. His second run, of 40.54, dropped him to ninth.

Sport Briefs

OAKLAND (AP) — Warren Wells, 28, star receiver for Oakland Raiders, was ordered Wednesday to an Alameda County rehabilitation centre for 60 days for diagnostic tests after his probation in a 1969 attempted rape case was revoked. He was arrested in Los Angeles after the Pro Bowl game. The warrant cited probation violation arising from a charge of failure to remain at the scene of an accident late last year. Wells was placed on probation after he pleaded guilty to the attempted-rape charge.

* * *

WINTER HAVEN, Fla. (AP) — Carl Yastrzemski of Boston Red Sox signed a three-year contract Wednesday that may make him the highest-paid player in professional baseball history. No figures were announced but Dick O'Connell, vice-president and general manager of the Red Sox, said the contract makes Yastrzemski "the highest-paid player in the American League." It was speculated that Yaz may be getting $150,000 to $200,000 for each year of the contract.

* * *

MONTREAL (CP) — Donato Paduano, Canada's world-ranked welterweight champion, meets Toronto's Clyde Gray tonight in a 12-round title bout that could mark a turning point in the careers of both fighters. Paduano, seeking his 23rd victory in two years as a professional wants to meet the world champion, Billy Backus of Syracuse, N.Y., or the No. 1 contender and former title-holder, Jose Napoles of Mexico, sometime this year. The 22-year-old Montrealer floated for a year between No. 9 and No. 6 in World Boxing Association monthly ratings until his December loss to world lightweight champion Ken Buchanan at Madison Square Garden. He was dropped to No. 10 in the WBA's January list. Gray, 24, is unranked in world listings and is looking for a win to build his reputation and chances for bigger pay days. His 27-1 win-loss record, more impressive on paper than Paduano's 22-1 card, has not led to many big matches and he waited more than a year for a chance to meet the Montreal boxer.

* * *

QUEBEC (CP) — Only 22 teams remained in contention for the grand championship of the annual Quebec international peewee hockey tournament after Wednesday's games which saw a further 17 of the 102 entrants knocked out of the competition. Six teams remained undefeated in class AA, four in class A, four in class B and eight in class C. Ontario had 10 teams, including the four semi-finalists in group A, still in contention, Quebec eight teams, Nova Scotia, British Columbia, and the United States one each. The Canadian Forces team from Baden-Soellingen, West Germany, was also still in the running.

* * *

NEW YORK (AP) — Mel Stottlemyre, ace of the New York Yankees' pitching staff, signed his 1971 contract Wednesday for a reported $75,000. Stottlemyre has been the mainstay of the pitching staff since joining the team in 1964.

* * *

TORONTO (CP) — Graham Leggatt, 36, Scottish international winger and a star in the Scottish and English Leagues for 17 years, has been signed as head coach of the Toronto entry in the North American Soccer League, general manager Jack Daley announced Wednesday.

* * *

ORILLIA (CP) — Grant Moore, of Toronto, high-scoring forward with Orillia Terriers of the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A series, has been awarded the Andy Bellemer trophy, the OHA announced Wednesday. The trophy, commemorating a former Senior A referee, is awarded annually by the referees to the player in the series "who gives his best and tries the hardest at all times."

Theismann Talks Baseball

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Joe Theismann, Notre Dame quarterback, said Wednesday he is still undecided whether to play professional football in Canada or in the United States. He might even play pro baseball.

The All-American is still negotiating. He was drafted in the eighth round by Miami Dolphins of the National Football League and was also selected by Toronto Argonauts of the Canadian Football League.

"I'm going to take a trip to Miami to talk to Don Shula (coach of the Dolphins) in the very near future," he said. "We really haven't started negotiating yet due to some missed connections.

"I haven't decided whether I'll play football or baseball, and I still have to talk to several baseball scouts. But I've finished negotiating with Canada (Toronto)."

Toronto coach Leo Cahill said Wednesday he hoped his signing Tuesday of Ohio State All-American linebacker Jim Stillwagon would help persuade Theismann to choose the Argonauts over Miami. But Theismann said:

"Jimmy has his life to live and I have mine. His decision won't affect mine but I wish him a lot of luck. He's a fine ballplayer."

Theismann, who finished No. 2 in the Heisman Trophy voting, led the Irish to a 9-1 regular season record last fall and a 21-11 victory over Texas in the Cotton Bowl on New Year's Day.

Haywood Ordered to Sit Out Until Court Case Settled

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Basketball Association followed up a favorable appellate ruling Wednesday by ordering Spencer Haywood out of action with Seattle SuperSonics until the case can be settled in a court suit.

The suit is scheduled to be tried in a Los Angeles lower court March 2.

"We are not going to let

"We are not going to let Haywood suit up," said the Sonics counsel Mel Monheimer. "In fact, he won't even be on the playing court Wednesday night."

Monheimer said, however, he had applied for a summary judgment Feb. 22, asking that Haywood be permitted to return to the lineup without NBA penalties.

NBA Teams have protested games in which the 6-foot-9 Former Olympic star has played since joining the SuperSonics Dec. 23 after breaking a six-year contract with Denver of the rival American Basketball Association.

Under the appellate court ruling no action can be taken against the Sonics for games already played by Haywood.

Haywood has been a pro for more than a year, playing in the rival ABA. He said he left Denver Rockets because they did not live up to their contract.

Looking For Other Leafs

Norm Ullman (9) of Toronto Maple Leafs is surrounded by Bryan Hextall (7), Rod Zaine (24), Bob Blackburn (4), Bob Woytowich (A) and Al Smith (29) of Pittsburgh Penguins during National Hockey League action in Toronto Wednesday night. Toronto won 4-3. (CP Wirephoto)

Rangers Robbed by Rogie

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

"Vachon was fantastic," said Al MacNeil who might be accused of expressing a biased opinion were he not supported by Emile Francis who called the same goaltender "simply terrific."

The praise heaped on Rogatien Vachon came after the Montreal goalie shut out New York Rangers to lead the Canadiens to a 3-0 National Hockey League victory Wednesday night.

"He robbed us blind," said Francis, general manager-coach of the Rangers who outshot coach MacNeil's Canadiens 35-28.

In other games Wednesday, Toronto Maple Leafs edged Pittsburgh Penguins 4-3, Chicago Black Hawks dumped Buffalo Sabres 5-1, Minnesota North Stars beat California Golden Seals 3-2 and Philadelphia Flyers whipped Los Angeles Kings 4-0.

ROGTIEN VACHON

"If a goalie is going to have a good game, he might as well have it in a key game like this one tonight," Vachon said after the victory which pulled the third-place Canadiens within 11 points of the second-place Rangers in the East Division.

"I felt good. It was for sure my best game this season, if not the best I've had in this building." He was referring to the Montreal best I've had in this building." He was referring to the Montreal Forum where 17,251 fans had just given him a standing ovation.

"I got a lot of help from the defence," said Vachon who collected his second shutout of the season, "especially late in the third period when the Rangers were dangerous."

Vachon stayed in the nets despite suffering a cut between the eyes in a goal-mouth scramble during the second period.

"Funny thing about that. It was the mask that gave me the cut. The edge of it sort of dug right into the flesh."

Gilles Villemure, Rangers' outstanding rookie goalie, was on the receiving end for goals by Montreal's Pete Mahovlich, Yvan Cournoyer and Jacques Lemaire.

The game was marred by a third-period brawl between Canadiens' Marc Tardif and Glen Sather of the Rangers. Tardif drew only a five-minute fighting penalty while Sather took a major and a minor which gave Montreal the power-play advantage that resulted in Cournoyer's goal.

At Toronto, the Leafs won despite a display of bad passing and inaccurate shooting throughout the game in which they equalled their 1969-70 total of 29 victories. They have 20 games remaining in the 1970-71 season.

Toronto took a 3-0 lead midway through the second period after goals by Rick Ley, Bob Baun, and Dave Keon but the Penguins took advantage of Leafs defensive mistakes and tied the score early in the third period.

The tying goal by Keith McCreary came off a perfect passout by Andy Bathgate, but Norm Ullman got the winner nine minutes later on a power play.

At Chicago, Jim Pappin and Cliff Koroll each scored twice and Stan Mikita added a goal and two assists for the Black Hawks' 38th win of the season.

The Hawks now lead the West Division with a 19-point margin over second-place St. Louis Blues.

Donnie Marshall's first-period goal was all that got by Chicago netminder Tony Esposito.

Minnesota took over sole possession of third place in the West after centre Jude Drouin helped set up two goals by Bill Godsworthy and one by Danny Grant.

The Seals, mired in the West cellar, staggered to their 39th loss in 58 games.

Gardner Big Gun

Dave Gardner of Toronto Marlboros maintained his lead in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A scoring race with a seven-point performance in the past week.

Gardner has 48 goals and 59 assists for 107 points, three more than Montreal's Robert Lalonde.

John Garrett of Peterborough tops the goaltenders with a 3.10 average, followed by Michel Larocque of Ottawa, who has a 3.17 record.

STAN MIKITA

Mikita Moves In

Stan Mikita paced Chicago Black Hawks in a 5-1 victory over Buffalo Sabres Wednesday night, scoring one goal and assisting on two others, to move into a three-way tie for 10th place in the National Hockey League's individual scoring race.

Mikita's 54 points so far this season is equalled by Walter Tkaczuk of New York Rangers and Jean Beliveau of Montreal Canadiens.

CAHA Rule Causes Tykes' Suspension

TORONTO (CP) — A team of eight-year-olds was suspended by the Metropolitan Toronto Hockey League Wednesday for planning an unsanctioned trip to Finland next month.

Bob Stride, assistant secretary-manager of the MTHL, said the Don Valley Hockey Association team's suspension was ordered by the league's 20-member executive on receipt of a letter confirming that the tour would go ahead in spite of the objections of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association.

The CAHA banned international competition by teams under its jurisdiction two years ago when Canada pulled out of the world hockey tournament in a dispute over the use of professional players.

Stride said the suspension would apply only to the touring team and not to the other six member teams in the Don Valley association but that the MTHL will not accept any Don Valley entries next season.

Earlier, co-chairman Don Holden of the Don Valley group said he had been informed by the Finnish Amateur Hockey Association that teams under its jurisdiction would not be permitted to play the Canadian club because of the CAHA ban but that efforts would be made to arrange games with teams outside the jurisdiction of the Finnish national body.

Holden said the boys' parents had decided to go ahead with the tour even if the team played no games abroad because of its educational value.

Coach Gary McDonell said the team management and parents felt they had no alternative because $14,000 had already been deposited with an airline and they would be penalized 10 per cent of the sum if the trip were cancelled.

Gordon Juckes, executive director of the CAHA, with which the MTHL is affiliated, said the ban on international games would apply, even if the boys played against teams outside the Finnish national organization.

Some Ontario Municipalities Will Have School Tax Slashed

TORONTO (CP) — Some Ontario municipalities can expect significant decreases in education mill rates for 1971, a department of education spokesman said Wednesday, following announcement of increased provincial grants to school boards.

He did not indicate which municipalities would show significant decreases that would cut education taxes to property owners.

He said a number of other municipalities will show slight decreases in the mill rate and others will remain the same as in 1970.

It was expected that "very few" municipalities will raise the mill rate in 1971.

The department announced increases in maximum grants payable to school boards: $45 more for each elementary pupil and $60 more for each secondary school student.

The figures released Wednesday show that the province will pay a maximum $545 for each elementary pupil, up from $500 last year, and $1,000 for each secondary school student, up from $1,000.

These increases in per pupil grants bring the province's share paid toward ordinary expenses up to 60 per cent. It was 54 per cent last year.

But the province will be paying only 54 per cent of over-all costs when transportation, debenture charges and capital expenditures from current funds are added in, up from 51 per cent in 1970.

The spokesman explained that the province is not able to pay 60 per cent on total education costs because some boards are still spending over and above ceilings set.

Among the eight or 10 boards which seriously exceeded ceilings are Metropolitan Toronto, Lincoln, Ottawa and some in Northern Ontario. A number of others went slightly over the ceilings because their enrolments last September were smaller than anticipated in their budgets.

Any boards exceeding expenditures based on the ceilings must obtain the extra funds from their own revenues.

TransCanada Pipelines Job Will Provide Winter Work

OTTAWA (CP) — TransCanada PipeLines Ltd. of Toronto received federal permission Wednesday to go ahead immediately with part of a major pipeline-building program, partly on the ground that it would provide winter jobs in Northern Ontario.

At the same time, the company was told to reassess the biggest part of the proposed two-year, $240 million expansion it wants to complete by late next year.

TransCanada was asked to look again at its expansion program with the aim of covering an indicated shortfall next winter between the demand for Alberta natural gas in Ontario and the company's capacity to deliver it on its all-Canadian line.

The projected gap between demand and supply capacity emerged at a hearing on the expansion program late last month before the National Energy Board.

Evidence was that the Ontario demand could be filled through Trans Canada's U.S. line between Manitoba and Sarnia, but only if the company were freed from a 1966 federal requirement that at least half of the gas for Eastern Canada should move through the all-Canada line.

Approved Wednesday by the board and the federal cabinet was part of the two-year program that would be completed by next Oct. 31 at an estimated cost of $66.8 million.

It would involve putting in a total of 206 miles of pipe parallel to existing lines, mainly in Saskatchewan and Manitoba, and boosting the capacity of three compressor stations.

Work also would be started immediately on clearing and grading about 383 miles of pipeline rights of way in Northern Ontario at an estimated cost of $10.6 million.

Energy Minister J. J. Greene said the Northern Ontario program would amount to a winter-works program providing employment for several hundred men from Kenora to Muskoka.

Indian Hunter Broke White Man's Rule

SARNIA, Ont. (CP) — They said they were brothers and sisters from Ontario and they came to watch Joseph Sands Jr. when he took the stand Wednesday to face a charge that he violated the Migratory Birds Act.

And after the trial, assembled Indians were told that the white man's civilization poisons the air and drives 12- and 13-year-old Indian girls to prostitution.

Sands, a 21-year-old Chippewa from Walpole Island, about 20 miles south of here, had nations behind him when he pleaded not guilty to having a .12-gauge slide-action shotgun that did not have a plug—a wooden screw—to stop the gun from holding more than three shells.

Many of the Crees, Ojibwas, Algonquins, Iroquois and other Indian bands walked through a thick slush carrying placards before the court case opened to protest what they said was an act that stole their Indian rights.

Provincial Judge Alan Fower listened to arguments for 55 minutes before a crowded court room and then announced he would give his decision March 10.

But when the Indians who belong to the Union of Ontario Indians met two hours later it was not the Sands case they talked about, but the general plight of Indians in the province and Canada.

Fred Plain, union president, said the federal government was "a farce, hypocritical, naive and irresponsible" because it had not acted on Indian problems.

In an emotional speech to union members after the trial, he said:

"In education, they feel they are doing us a favor by taking Indian children from the north and placing them in city schools.

"What has happened is that the children are earning the crime, vice and corruption of the city. That's the white man's civilization.

"In Thunder Bay after 12 or one o'clock in the morning, 12- and 13-year-old Indian girls from the north are walking the street.

"You can presume what they are doing."

Later, in an interview he said the young girls were "soliciting men in the night."

Mr. Plain also said government subsidized industries were doing more harm to the environment than any hunting or fishing.

"The government subsidizes industries that pollute our streams and poison the air.

"That pollution is a lot worse than any hunting."

Joseph Sands Sr. told the union meeting that regardless of what happens in the trial of his son, the Indian people would take the case to the Supreme Court of Canada.

Harry Miskokomon, chief of the Muncy reserve near London, Ont. said the charge against Sands was trivial.

"Why in the hell don't they make the guns so that they only hold three bullets."

The trial had several complicated legal aspects including Indian treaties, constitutions and the Ontario Bill of Rights.

Judge Fowler said he needed time to study all implications of the charge, and reserved his decision.

Sands was charged Dec. 8, 1970, when RCMP Constable R. G. Winters found him guiding two American hunters on the island.

Constable Winters testified that the two American hunters—Joseph Valakis of Detroit and George Blond of Dearborn, Mich.—both had plugs in their guns.

He said that when he checked Sands' gun he found three shels in the magazine and one in the chamber.

He also testified that Sands told him that he did not need the plug because he was hunting on a reserve.

Howe Family Scores Four

DETROIT (AP) — Most of the 11,650 fans who went to Olympia Stadium Wednesday night went because for the first time in public Gordie Howe was going to play hockey on a forward line with sons Mark and Marty.

But there was a closing-moment surprise that not only caught the fans off guard, but which caught Detroit Red Wing goalie Jim Rutherford off guard—with tongue in cheek and goalie pads open.

With the Red Wings of the National Hockey League leading the charity exhibition in the closing moments against the Junior A Wings 6-5, 10-year-old Murray Howe entered the game for the Juniors. Joining him was Vern Howe, brother of Gordie.

No sooner did the Juniors win a faceoff in the Red Wings' end of the ice than Murray "fired" the puck between Rutherford's legs for a 6-6 final score.

It was a comic ending to what was, until then, a fairly honestly played game.

GORDIE HOWE

The Howe family scored four of the Juniors goals and assisted on two more. Marty Howe, 16, normally a defenceman, played left wing opposite his famous father who was a turncoat for the game. Mark, 15, played centre. Murray and Vern just played.

"This is the greatest birthday present anyone could ever have," said Gordie's wife Colleen, who celebrated her 38th birthday and who did much of the work organizing the affair.

She said $30,000 was collected for the local chapter of the March of Dimes and that "more money is coming in."

Gordie is chapter chairman.

He scored the games first goal, then two goals by Rene LeClerc gave the pro club a 2-1 first-period lead.

Red Berenson tallied a quick second-period goal for Detroit but Mark Howe took a pass from his father and got it back by beating goalie Roy Edwards. A goal by Bob Dobek sent the game into the third period tied 3-3.

Frank Werner and Gordie Howe scored back-to-back goals for a 5-3 lead, Howe's coming on a pass from Mark.

The Red Wings decided to get down to business and Mike Robitaille, Arnie Brown and Tim Ecclestone scored to give Detroit a 6-5 lead and set up Murray Howe's "game saving" goal.

Entertainment Roundup

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Superior Court has issued a divorce decree ending the 26-year marriage of Burl Ives, ballad singer and actor, and Helen Peck Ives.

A judge ordered the 62-year-old Ives Wednesday to pay $2,000 monthly alimony. Mrs. Ives, 54, is the entertainer's former business manager.

Ives says they have been separated 15 years. They have a son, Alexander, 21.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Frank Sinatra's singer daughter Nancy has asked the Supreme Court to stop what she alleges to be unauthorized imitations of her voice, mannerisms and dress in a TV commercial.

Miss Sinatra said the commercial featured the music of one of her hits, These Boots are Made for Walkin', with revised lyrics for advertising purposes.

Defendants in the case are the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co. and the Young and Rubicam advertising agency of New York.

A U.S. district court in California ruled against Miss Sinatra. The decision was upheld by the U.S. Court of Appeals in San Francisco.

NEW YORK (AP) — The American Broadcasting Co. became the third U.S. television network to enter the video cassette field Wednesday in a joint venture with Associated Television Corp. Ltd., the commercial network of England.

ABC and ATV will form a company to distribute and produce cassettes in the educational field, industrial training and specialized home entertainment.

The venture was announced jointly in New York by Leonard H. Goldenson, president of ABC, and in London by Sir Lew Grade, deputy chairman and chief executive of ATV.

CBS is in the cassette field with its Electronic Video Recorder and NBC with RCA's SelectaVision.

Midget Backs To Wall

Friday night will tell the playoff tale for Belleville's Blake Kerr Imperial midgets.

Belleville's midget all-stars trail 2-0 in their best-of-five first round OMHA playoff with Trenton Lions, and a loss in Friday's 8.15 Memorial Arena game will eliminate the Imperials.

The Trenton midgets also ousted their Belleville counterparts in last year's first-round playoff action.

In addition to a win, a local Minor hockey worker had another wish for Friday night's game: "It would be nice to see as many Belleville spectators at the game as there are from Trenton . . . for a change."

Which Day
Is Best?

☐ MONDAY ☐ THURSDAY
☐ TUESDAY ☐ FRIDAY
☐ WEDNES. ☐ SATURDAY

Advertisers frequently ask this question. Fortunately, there is no best day to advertise. Each day new wants arise, bringing new readers as old ones satisfy their wants. We recommend that you start your ad tomorrow and cancel it when you get results. After many years of experience with millions of want ads, we know tomorrow is the best day to start your ad and every day is the best day to advertise in The Intelligencer want ad leader.

TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market was down fractionally in light mid-morning trading today.

On index, industrials dropped .34 to 177.46, base metals .23 to 92.86 and western oils 1.16 to 208.18. Golds advanced 1.19 to 182.37.

Volume by 11 a.m. was 640,000 shares, up from 616,000 at the same time Wednesday.

Losses outnumbered gains 118 to 93 with 177 issues unchanged.

Weakest sectors were beverages, industrial mining and real estate.

Acklands was down ⅜ to $5. The company had a loss of $3,250,000 in 1970, compared with a 1969 profit of $3,186,569. In addition, the company says it will omit all dividends for the first quarter of the fiscal year.

Among other declining issues, Labatts was down ⅜ to $21½. Husky Oil ⅜ to $17⅛, Great Lakes Paper ⅜ to $20½, Bell ¼ to $46⅝ and Endako ¼ to $14¼.

Mattagami was up ⅝ to $27⅜, Sherritt ¼ to $17½, Bethlehem ⅛ to $13¼ and Houston Oil 15 cents to $2.45.

On index, industrials were up .07 to 177.80 and golds 2.37 to 181.18. Base metals dropped 1.15 to 93.09 and western oils 1.90 to 209.34.

Volume was 2.17 million shares, down from 2.43 million Tuesday.

Losses outnumbered gains $98 to 212 with 217 issues unchanged. Banks, oil refining and pipelines led advancing sectors.

Moore Corp. rose ⅜ to $35⅛. The company's 1970 net earnings were $1.39 a share, up from $1.26 in the corresponding period a year earlier.

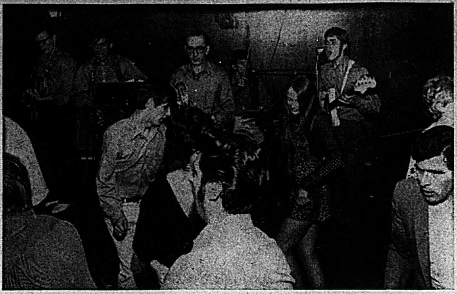
Vulcan Industrial Packaging, which raised its quarterly dividend to five cents from four cents, climbed ¼ to $[illegible]½.

Among other advancing issues, Erie-Diversified was up 1⅜ to $6½, Bay Mills $1.00 to $3.00, CPR ¼ to $71¾, Bell ¼ to $46⅞, Stelco ½ to $27¼, Imperial Oil ¼ to $19¼ and Thomson Newspapers ⅜ to $23⅞.

DOME UP 1½

Dome Mines was up 1½ to $66, Mattagami ½ to $26¾, Rio Algom ½ to $18¾, Hudson Bay Mining ⅜ to $21⅞, Preston 25 cents to $9.25 and Francana 25 cents to $4.00.

Dominion Stores dropped ¼ to $11. The company reported a net loss of $1.79 million during the 13 weeks ended Dec. 19, compared with a profit of $2.58 million a year earlier.



The Federal Cases

The Federal Cases, a unique rehabilitation experiment, is a country-rock group conceived behind the walls of Agassiz Mountain prison, 60 miles east of Vancouver. From left, they are Bill, rhythm guitar; Les, lead singer and guitarist; George, fiddle; Sandy, drums, and Barry, bass. Barry and Sandy have never been in trouble with the law. Bill served 29 months for breaking and entering, Les has less than a year to go on a five-year drug sentence, and George has been serving an indefinite life sentence since 1944.

North Vietnamese Shipments May Be Taking New Route

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pentagon sources say the North Vietnamese may be switching their main supply shipments through Laos to a route west of the primary Ho Chi Minh Trail now under ground attack by South Vietnamese troops.

They said indications of increased truck traffic have been picked up by electronic sensors dropped from U.S. planes along Laotian Route 23, some 25 miles west of what has been the chief supply road from North Vietnam for years.

Defence officials said after the South Vietnamese troops crossed the Laotian border last week the North Vietnamese might be compelled to put more traffic on Route 23 if the Ho Chi Minh Trail was threatened or overrun.

These officials said Hanoi has been reluctant to use Route 23 because much of it lacks the heavy jungle canopy which shield the Ho Chi Minh Trail and other key roads from air observation.

Eventually, the South Vietnamese are expected to try to cut Route 23, but so far the going has been slow in achieving the original objective, the Ho Chi Minh Trail.

In an operation code-named Igloo White, American jets have showered sensors along the Ho Chi Minh Trail for more than three years in a program which has cost more than $1,200 million counting research and development.

The sensors are made to look like jungle growth and are hard to find.

Moving trucks automatically activate a sensor and the signal is sent to specially equipped aircraft and then relayed to ground stations where they feed into a computer.

Analysts then can determine the number of trucks, their direction and speed. This information is fed to commands and air attacks are mounted.

New York May Ban Service in 'Non-wars'

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — A major Protestant organization is supporting a bill in the state legislature that would protect New York residents against having to serve in an undeclared war.

The state Council of Churches said Wednesday it endorses a measure sponsored by Democratic Assemblyman Andrew Stein to amend New York's military law.

Under its terms, state residents would not have to serve in an area where hostilities have existed for more than 60 days unless the Congress declared that a state of war exists in which the U.S. is involved.

New Tactic in Britain

Doctors Say Smoking Cuts Sex Appeal

LONDON (AP) — Health warnings didn't work, so British doctors are launching a $1.7 million advertising campaign keyed to the theme that smoking reduces sex appeal.

The Royal College of Physicians, which is sponsoring the campaign, believes smokers ignore grim statistics about deaths from lung cancer but that fears of sexual inferiority may scare them into giving up the weed.

"Sex is the most powerful motivation in selling anything," said Kim Mukerjee, director of the ad agency drawing up the series of television commercials.

"Cigarette companies have been using it for years to sell their products. We think it can be used for the opposite purpose.

"We want to show that smoking is as filthy and unpleasant as spitting in the subway. There will also be heavy hints that the breathlessness it causes impairs sexual stamina."

Other shock images will be the girl nobody wants because her hair smells of stale tobacco and the man who repels girls because he has brown teeth and a hacking cough.

Kennedy's Aide Raped, Robbed

WASHINGTON (AP) — A secretary to Senator Edward Kennedy was raped and robbed Wednesday after she had been abducted less than three blocks from the Capitol, police reported.

The 36-year-old woman told officers she had just left the new Senate office building and was entering her car when a man approached and asked directions to the Capitol.

The woman reported the man drew a pistol and pushed her into the car after she pointed out the building. He then drove to a nearby alley where he searched her purse and took $22, she reported.

The man then drove to a vacant garage in an alley and assaulted her, the woman told police.

Developing Countries to Get Smaller Donations of Grain

GENEVA (CP) — Despite pleas for increased aid by more than 77 developing countries, the amount of free wheat and other grain to be donated under a patched-up wheat pact is to be sharply reduced, informants said today.

Britain and some Scandinavian countries have indicated they will not participate in a new food aid convention thereby reducing total annual grain aid by donor members to an estimated 3,944,000 tons.

This compares with total annual pledges of 4,500,000 tons under the existing convention, though actual shipments are reported to have fallen a bit below that figure.

An agreement on participants and contributions, either in grain or in equivalent cash, likely will be completed late Friday after a month of negotiations paralleling work on a weak and shadowy marketing pact.

The negotiations, behind closed doors, are reported to have been marked by a sharp change in Britain's attitude. Canada strongly supported the concept of a new food aid convention but warned that if there is a significant withdrawal of supplier countries, the Canadian government "might have reservations about its own participation."

Britain, a wheat importer, had pledged to donate cash to cover the equivalent of 225,000 tons of wheat or other grain to be shipped to the developing countries each year.

But Ken Wilkes, chief British delegate, maintained that giving cash to a grain exporting country so that it can ship some of its own product to a needy recipient represents an inefficient use of aid funds.

Britain always considered food aid appropriate for immediate relief but having little lasting effect. Such aid risked

Zambia Faces Necessity Of Boosting Agriculture

LUSAKA (AP) — Zambian farmers began flocking to the mines and a promise of high wages when copper prices started going up five years ago. Now the copper boom is receding, and President Kenneth Kaunda must find a way to rebuild agriculture.

Coupled with this, the 47-year-old former teacher faces a new wave of problems with his own anti-apartheid dogmatism.

Landlocked Zambia, once Northern Rhodesia, gets 60 per cent of its income from copper, which constitutes 96 per cent of Zambia's exports. As the price drops, the likelihood increases that Kaunda will have to reduce government programs.

The average per-capita income is one of black Africa's highest, $1,120 a year. But a farmer makes only half that, compared with almost $2,000 a year for miners.

Even before the move of black farmers into the copper belt, most of Zambia's white farmers migrated south to Rhodesia. A critical shortage of corn, Zambia's staple, evolved last month, and Kaunda had to step up imports from neighboring Mozambique to bring the stockpiles to nearly normal levels in most of the country.

Importing is a major sore point for the Kaunda administration. A leading opponent of the apartheid governments of Rhodesia and South Africa, he imports agricultural products from as far away as Italy and Australia at greatly-increased costs.

His opposition to the white governments' segregation policies and his international fight against them has caused criticism in his country, even from a boyhood friend and former vice-president, Simon Kapwepwe. He contends that trade should be renewed with South Africa and Rhodesia, figuring that the damage to Zambia's economy caused by the higher import costs makes continuing the restrictions unfeasible.

Rumors of discontent with Kaunda's policies came into the open last month while he was in Singapore at the Commonwealth ministers' conference, and troops were stationed around government buildings until he returned. Back in Lusaka, Kaunda promised more attention to the problems of the economy and his United National Independence party and less to the international situation.

Kenya Seeking Help to Feed 90,000 Victims of Drought

NAIROBI (AP) — The Kenyan government is seeking international assistance in providing relief to nearly 90,000 people stricken by famine caused by a worsening drought.

Milk and meat are in short supply. Dirt roads in the northeast are littered with the carcasses of camels and cattle.

If the "long" rains fail in March the situation could become much worse, officials agree. The present crisis arose because the "short" rains in November and December were scant.

Officials deny that any human deaths are directly attributed to the drought, but hospitals in the areas have malnutrition victims. Malnutrition or dehydration aggravates other illnesses, sometimes ending in death.

Relief agencies and several embassies are assisting the government or considering applications for help.

Famine relief in the northeastern province was up from 5,000 in December to 30,000 by the end of January.

Motorists are halted by dusty groups of people pleading for water.

Carcasses of their livestock bleach quickly in the sun. Clouds of dust blow over what was once their grazing area, blinding pedestrian and motorist alike.

The Kenya meat commission plant at Athi River, near Nairobi, reports that the drought has reduced livestock intake by 40 per cent.

Gordon Says Government Controls Needed – Next Time

TORONTO (CP) — Former finance minister Walter Gordon said Wednesday the next time Canada is threatened with inflation the federal government will have to introduce controls in industries dominated by one or more companies.

He said the government must have a say in the running of such companies, particularly when they are controlled from abroad.

Mr. Gordon said this could involve helping to set prices charged by firms such as General Motors or Imperial Oil and the wages asked by large unions such as the United Auto Workers.

He told a meeting of students, attending a conference on life in Canada in the year 2000, the government would probably step in with such controls when a company had acquired a third of the total market of an industry or when two or three companies controlled half the market.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Patient Is Weak Following X-rays

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I am inquiring about the possible harm done by having had too many X rays. Last summer a doctor ordered X ray examination of my gall bladder and esophagus because of some pain I had been having. Several pictures were taken. A few months later I suffered a fall from an aluminum chair that collapsed, injuring my lower back. The insurance company ordered an extensive set of X rays.

I was sent to an orthopedist who ordered some more X rays. If only two or three pictures had been taken I would not feel concerned, but in each case from eight to 10 films were snapped.

It could be my imagination but since these X rays were taken, I have had a weak, trembly feeling in my muscles. I really can't describe it. Never had anything like it before. I'm concerned about the effects of the 'x rays on my blood marrow. This has been a source of great worry to me. Would you comment? — Mrs. S.

Comment: It makes good sense to be aware of the potential danger of too much irradiation. I think that both the medical profession and patients themselves, are concerned with this problem.

For this reason, doctors are supposed to be checking on their equipment for "leaks" and other reasons which might expose a patient to excessive radiation. Also, doctors try o obtain a history of what X rays have been taken in the past before they put the patient through a long series of further X ray studies.

What's important is this: have your X rays been taken by qualified X ray specialists? If so, I doubt that you have anything to be disburbed about. The only time to be really anxious is when the patient has allowed "any" doctor to take X rays. Be sure he is a specialist. He will guard against overexposure.

As for your weak, trembly feelings, Mrs. S., I doubt that they are due to X rays. But I'm only guessing. If you are still in doubt, your doctor can send you to a hemoatologist for blood studies and, if necessary, tests for examination of your bone marrow. Perhaps your symptoms are a normal reaction to all the pain and discomfort you have been through.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Lately I've been getting severe cramps between my menstrual periods. They last about two days. My stomach becomes so sore I can hardly touch it. When I laugh or bend it's "murder." I can't imagine why I should be having such pains two weeks before my expected period. Can you explain? — Mrs. I.

Comment: Pain in the middle of the menstrual cycle is often called "mittelschmerz. In some way it's connected with ovulation (release of an egg from the ovary). We don't know exactly what causes the pain — perhaps something which interferes with the easy release of the egg. Sometimes there is slight hemorrhage when this process takes place.

In many cases it can be helped if the patient will see a gynecologist. For example, using the birth control pill helps many women with mid-month pains by preventing the release of the egg.

Plane Pilot Charged After Air Collision

CORNWALL (CP) — A passenger aboard a plane that collided with another during a sight-seeing flight Aug. 2, 1969, testified Wednesday the second plane had been buzzing other aircraft earlier that day.

Robert Beeching also said that as his pilot was bringing the plane in for a landing the second aircraft appeared in front and the planes collided.

He was testifying at the trial of pilot Maxim David Weid, formerly of Embrun, Ont., who is charged with public mischief in connection with the incident which occurred in the air over Maxville, about 25 miles north of here. There were no injuries.

"I don't remember (the collision) very well," Mr. Beeching said. "I was excited at the time."

He said he had been "a bit concerned" earlier when he watched the second aircraft buzzing other planes, but not concerned enough to cancel his flight.

The sight-seeking tours were held in conjunction with the annual Highland Games in Maxville, attended by about 25,000 persons.

Pilot Donald Fraser of Brockville testified Tuesday that he was being harassed by the other pilot, Mr. Weid.

Mr. Fraser said the second plane flew underneath his aircraft and then reappeared on the left side. He said the pilot attempted to repeat the manoeuvre but reappeared directly in front instead.

Mr. Fraser said the propeller of his plane cut into the tail of the other, sending it out of control. The other plane crashed on the airstrip below.

The trial continues.

Windsor Said 'Anti-business'

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — A panel of local business, labor and civic officials could not agree Wednesday on whether Windsor's economic climate was "sunny" or the city is "an anti-business community."

M. L. Garland, vice president of operations for International Tool Ltd., told a Seminar '71 session sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce that for an industry "to come to a labor-dominated community would indeed be a challenge, but come to an anti-business area would be foolhardy."

He said excellent industries are still moving out of town and there is no real encouragement for a new industry to settle here. He said the community does not seem to care when a small industry moves out.

He blamed constructions costs which he said were 15 to 20 per cent higher than most areas and perhaps the highest in Canada, wage rates unrelated to productivity and profitability, high taxes on industrial land, the local media "which seems to glorify a strike situation and encourage conflict between management and labor" and poor planning by city officials

James Moor, city industrial commissioner, said Windsor leads Canada's 12 top manufacturing cities in productivity just as it does in growth in manufacturing. He said the business climate has to be called "sunny" despite uncertainty in other North American economic centres.

Protestant Teachers Will Renew Strikes

MONTREAL (CP) — Protestant teachers in Montreal were to renew strike action today after a four-day truce while French-speaking Roman Catholic teachers said they would step up rotating walkouts protesting reclassification of teacher qualifications and salaries.

Meanwhile, members of the Alliance des Professeurs de Quebec narrowly voted in Quebec City against a strike. Some of the members said they were badly informed about the reclassification issue.

The Montreal Teachers Association said late Wednesday that all 3,000 of its members would attend study sessions during the day, leaving about 60,000 Protestant students without classes.

The announcement closely followed a statement by the French-speaking Alliance des Professeurs de Montreal which said it would step up rotating strikes by withdrawing 4,000 teachers from duties at 103 French-language Roman Catholic schools, affecting more than 75,000 students.

The 9,500-member alliance said it was taking its action in response to the forcible police removal of teachers sitting in at education department and school board offices here Wednesday.

It stated that the government "systematically refused" to negotiate seriously for a settlement of the French-speaking teachers' grievances.

SOME SALARIES FROZEN

Some teachers have had their salaries virtually frozen by the reclassification procedure and have been asked to repay part of their wages.

In explaining the reason for renewed support by the Protestant teachers, MTA President Don Peacock said:

"We can't hold off forever. We understand the alliance's refusal to accept a truce was based on the belief that the government has no solution to offer."

The Protestant teachers earlier expressed regret that rotating walkouts by the alliance against schools under the Montreal Catholic school board were preventing further talks.

The strike action, which began Jan. 25, was suspended last Friday in a move to encourage talks with the provincial government and representatives of school boards.

But the government-teacher-school board talks in Quebec City broke off Tuesday with teacher representatives being told that so long as schools are not operating, no further talks could be held.

The twin announcements came following the forcible removal by riot-equipped police of teachers staging sit-ins at the Catholic boardroom and the regional offices of the department of education.

Twenty-nine teachers, who chained themselves together when they received word that police were coming, were removed from the education department by order of Guy Saint-Pierre, Quebec's education minister. Their occupation began last week.

Meantime, 2,200 alliance members stayed off the job during the day, affecting 45,000 students in 78 of the board's 292 schools.

At issue are decisions by the provincial classification board that downgraded the present qualifications of some teachers, virtually freezing salaries at the current level until they can take courses to improve those qualifications.

In addition, the Catholic board asked some 300 reclassified teachers to pay back amounts up to $1,300 in salary over-payments retroactive to September, 1968.

Thoughts at Large:

As people reach a new stage in life, they tend to shuck off the old, instead of incorporating it into the total personality; but someone who has shut out or repudiated his earlier level of consciousness has missed the whole art of living which consists in the simultaneous use of every stage, from the wonder of childhood to the judgment of maturity.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For February 19

Your birthday today: The sun moves from Aquarius to Pisces at 2:28 a.m. EST. Those born before this minue this year are are Pisceans. For the coming year both face peaceful conditions in which normal progress and prosperity can be achievpractical; today's Pisceans are more inclined to literature and mystical philosophy.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Lively company offers better prospects for business, budding friendships. Get out of your ruts of personal habits.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Associates are eager to spend money. It isn't going out of style so hang onto your share. Plenty of debates or even arguments follow.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Line up supplies, equipment, and help before you get entangled in repairs — or leave them alone.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Review your methods, look for a more effective approach. You may have to take time to calm friends' excitement. Be brief.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Willingly endure passing inconvenience for the sake of improvements. Diplomatic skill should be in action over this weekend.

VIRGO :Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Simplify, cut out unproductive activity. Social contacts are distracting. Some friends ask good questions.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): While winding up the work week, put in the first moves to start new ventures if they are different from what you've been doing.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Realizing the worth of a good thing when you hear about it from somebody who doesn't is a rare gift. Avoid tight schedules.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Family situations include surprises, excitement. Changing your mind during the morning complicates matters. Keep comments to the point.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): If you achieve something, let the doing be its own reward. Silly remarks deserve no response.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Co-operation is the watchword. Relationships "take" and you have a friend where before you had an acquaintance.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): If you see something you want, ask for it. You have nothing to lose, and might learn something. Adapt to new conditions.

St. Boniface Holds Voyageur Festival

ST. BONIFACE, Man. (CP) — The second annual Festival du Voyageur, named after the early French-Canadians who paddled canoes and sang their way into the unexplored interiors of Canada, begins here tonight and forecasts are that the celebrations will surpass the successes of last year.

Organizers have packed more than 100 events into the 11-day carnival, and highlighted the busy schedule with a two-mile parade, winter harness racing, a snowshoe derby, a Can-Am ice race and a demolition derby.

All events will be presided over by festival voyageur Roland Marion, a third-generation Franco-Manitoban who, like the famous Bonhomme Carnaval of the Quebec winter carnival, symbolizes the flavor and frivolity of the occasion.

He will depict an early Red River settler, Jean Baptiste Lagimodiere, who journeyed in 1816 from Fort Douglas on the Red River to Montreal to warn Lord Selkirk of the dangers facing the settlement from conflict between the rival fur trading companies, the North West Co. and the Hudsons's Bay Co.

Focal point for the festival will be Provencher Park in downtown St. Boniface, where Mayor Ed Turner will light the voyageur torch tonight to open the celebrations. A snow fort, which will be lit up at night, has been built in the park an snow has been pile up for tobaggan slides, snowmobile trails and sculpturing.

A casino du voyageur featuring black-jack, crown-and-anchor and seven-and-under tables, and a trading post with food, entertainment and drink will be open each night of the festival. There will also be historical displays in the St. Boniface museum highlighting the history of Manitoba's French-speaking people.

Egypt Won't Offer More Concessions

Nixon Doubts Vote Near

TORONTO (CP) — Premier-designate William Davis will postpone any plans for an early election because he has wounds to heal in his own party, Ontario Liberal leader Robert Nixon said Thursday night.

An election "seems more and more remote" as Mr. Davis assesses the "bitterness and ill-feeling" that came out of the provincial Progressive Conservative party's convention last week, he told a nomination meeting in St. David riding.

Mr. Nixon told the meeting that Mr. Davis should drop many members of the current Robarts cabinet.

He specifically mentioned George Gomme, minister of highways, J. R. Simonett, minister of public works, John Yaremko, minister of social and family services, Stanley Randall, minister of trade and development, Irwin Haskett, minister of transport, Arthur Wish-

Woman Has Plan To Avoid Strikes

VICTORIA, B.C. — A plan to settle strikes and lockouts was presented to the B.C. Legislature by Agnes Kripps, (SC - Vancouver South).

Here is how it would work.

Either side in a labor dispute could apply to the labor department for a 40-day strike-and-work order.

The department would issue the order for work to continue — with management and labor subject to agreed penalties — until a settlement was reached.

The penalties would be forfeiture of 25 per cent of gross wages for workers and the same proportion of wages and salaries of management. In addition the company would forfeit net profits during the period, pay no dividends and add nothing to its surplus. Labor would receive no strike benefits.

Funds derived in this way would be placed in a trust fund and if settlement were reached within the 40-day period these monies would return to their owners.

But if settlement was not reached, the money would be forfeited and turned over to "a neutral party, such as the government of Canada," to be used for services to the people.

Peace Or Territory Said Israeli Choice

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Egypt served notice today that it will make no more concessions to get peace with the Israelis and challenged Israel to "tell the Arabs and the world whether it wants peace or territory."

"If Israel's answer is, 'Yes, I want your land, not your peace, and you can do what you like about this,' then Egypt will have to draw the inescapable conclusion that there is no alternative to fighting," said a long article in the semi-official newspaper Al Ahram.

The article said, however, that this did not mean Egypt would start shooting March 7 when the current ceasefire expires. Instead, it will retain the initiative to pick the "time, place and method of fighting."

Sources close to the Israeli government reported Thursday that Egypt has indicated it will sign a peace treaty if Israel returns all of the Sinai desert. Israel has demanded a binding peace agreement as prelude to any withdrawal from territory it occupied in the 1967 Middle East war.

Observers in Jerusalem noted that even though the reported Cairo offer included the standard demand for complete Israeli withdrawal, by speaking of a peace treaty or agreement, it went further than Egypt's previous expressions of willingness to reach a "settlement."

The Israeli sources reported that Egypt also held out the prospect that it would allow Israeli ships to use the Suez canal if there is peace.

The sources said Egypt also said it would not interfere with Israeli shipping in the Strait of Tiran, between the Red Sea and the Gulf of Aqaba.

The sources said Israel would not agree to total withdrawal but that Premier Golda Meir's government would urge direct talks with Cairo in an attempt to work out some compromise Israeli pullback.

They said an Israeli answer to the Egyptian proposal might be drafted at the next cabinet session Sunday.

Egypt's latest expression of its views was delivered Wednesday to Gunnar V. Jarring, the United Nations mediator for the Middle East.

The Egyptian note replied to a statement Jarring gave Israel, Egypt and Jordan suggesting some principles for a peace agreement and asking their views. Jarring called for Israeli withdrawal from the Sinai Peninsula, a UN military force along the Strait of Tiran to protect Israeli shipping, declarations of intent from the three countries and their views on a peace settlement.

Quebec Expects Recovery

QUEBEC (CP) — The Quebec government is looking hopefully toward an expected economic recovery in the late spring and early summer to reduce severe unemployment in the province.

Liberal Premier Robert Bourassa said in an interview Thursday he expects the North American economy to pull out of the current recession toward the end of the second quarter of the year and enter a period of expansion, producing new economic activity and new jobs.

Mr. Bourassa said he felt his government, elected last April 29 on a promise to strengthen the province's economy, has done all it can to reduce unemployment.

However, he said the reasons for this winter's high unemployment lie in areas outside the government's control.

He blamed the over-all North American economic slump and the federal government's campaign against inflation for the slowdown in economic activity in the province.

Italian Town Still Resists

REGGIO CALABRIA (Reuter) — Police detachments moved into the Santa Caterina district today to remove fresh barricades set up by demonstrators still in control of two working-class districts in this Italian city after four days of violence.

Life was back to normal in the city centre, but in the militant Sbarre district demonstrators guarded barricades in relays during the night, ready to give the alarm if police tried a surprise attack.

But Police Chief Emilio Santillo, aware that some of the crowd are armed with pistols, kept his men away from Sbarre.

What Is Happening in Laos?

Conflicting Views Given On Results of Invasion

SAIGON (CP) — Conflicting reports rose today about the success of the 11-day-old South Vietnamese incursion into Laos.

The Associated Press quoted the commander of the South Vietnamese forces in Laos as saying his troops have occupied 25 miles of the Ho Chi Minh trail. Reuters news agency quoted a South Vietnamese command spokesman as saying the incursion was behind schedule and had come to a halt.

Lt.-Gen. Hoang Xuan Lam said in an interview with the AP that the incursion has been satisfactory. He was backed by Gen. Creighton W. Abrams, the commander of U.S. forces in Vietnam, who said the South Vietnamese "are doing well."

However, Reuter quoted the South Vietnamese command spokesman as saying: "Bad weather and enemy anti-aircraft fire are holding up the operation."

Reuter said the spokesman contradicted reports from field commanders who said South Vietnamese forces have cut the Ho Chi Minh trail in Laos. One commander had said: "We are sitting on the trail and strangling it."

The spokesman quoted by Reuter said some branches of the North Vietnamese supply line have been cut, but not all of them.

Asked if Hanoi is still moving supplies down the trail, he replied: "It is possible." He said South Vietnamese forces had advanced 15 miles into Laos and now are stationary.

In another development, a strong North Vietnamese force kept a South Vietnamese artillery base six miles inside Laos under heavy attack, inflicting severe casualties in the first major battle reported along the Ho Chi Minh trail, informed U.S. sources said.

The Associated Press quoted other sources as saying that North Vietnamese forces are putting heavy pressure on a South Vietnamese column advancing slowly along Highway 9, the main east-west route from the South Vietnamese border to the trans-shipment point of Sepone, 25 miles away.

The U.S. command reported three more helicopters were shot down over the trail Thursday and a fourth exploded in the air on the South Vietnamese side of the border while supporting the South Vietnamese drive. Field reports said still another helicopter was shot down in Laos.

The command issued a revised summary which said a total of 12 U.S. helicopters have been shot down and destroyed in Laos since the operation began Feb. 8 and seven more have been lost on the South Vietnamese side of the border. Casualties in these crashes included 22 Americans killed, 10 missing and 22 wounded.

Two F-4 Phantom fighter-bombers also have been lost over the Ho Chi Minh trail with two men missing.

Russia Balks at Wheat Pact Recognizing Common Market

GENEVA (CP) — Political differences between the Soviet Union and the European Common Market are reported to be delaying formal completion of the new, skeleton-type international wheat agreement.

Conference officials had hoped to complete the month-long deliberations today but the final public session was put off until Saturday. A Common Market official said he hoped the matter can be resolved by the weekend.

Briefly, the matter concerns recognition. The Soviet Union does not recognize the political existence of the Common Market and will not sign any agreement with it.

Under International Wheat Agreement rules the Common Market is recognized as "a country." While the final draft of the new agreement is still secret, a copy received by this reporter tries to get around the differences by allowing any signing country to withhold recognition of the Common Market and deal only with each of the six Common Market partners as individual countries.

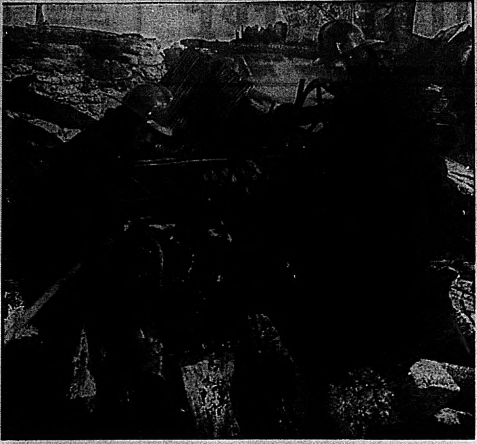
One of the delegates not involved in the dispute said the latest clash is how the agreement is to be signed and who is to be authorized to do the signing.

If this dispute can be settled —and conference officials feel this will be resolved—the new three-year agreement will go into effect July 1 providing that sufficient countries ratify it.

The disappointing elements from the Canadian viewpoint is that the agreement, for the first time since 1949, will be stripped of all major price and marketing props.

There will be no minimum or maximum prices, no obligations by the importing countries to buy fixed percentages or quantities of wheat from the exporters and no point—such as the Canadian Lakehead or U.S. Gulf ports—where wheat prices can be collectively assessed.

The main point of the new agreement is to retain the housekeeping or administrative machinery of the existing International Wheat Council in London and to have it continue to collect information on production, marketing and imports until a more effective pact can be worked out.



Charred Remains Raked Over

Sidney Township firemen Rod May and Don MacInnes clear charred and smoking rubble from the remains of two sows trapped in a farrowing pen. Up to 700 hogs were lost in an early evening blaze at the Farley Vermilyea farm on the 4th Concession of Sidney Township which also destroyed the two-storey concrete and wood barn and an outlying shed. Less than two dozen animals were saved.

Hog Barn Levelled by Fire

Sidney township firemen were this morning still digging through the smoking rubble of the Farley Vermilyea pig farm on the 4th Concession of Sidney Township after fire last night destroyed close to 700 animals and the barn in in which they were contained.

"It was an inferno . . . pigs burning barn . . . falling in their tracks," reported one tired firefighter this morning.

Varying reports have placed the animal loss anywhere from 500 to 700 hogs. Only about 20 of Mr. Vermilyea's herd were saved. They were still in the back of a large truck this morning, in varying conditions. Some were fire-scorched, others had developed what one fireman referred to as "pneumonia caused by breathing fire"; only about half appeared to have suffered no ill effects.

A Sidney Township volunteer fireman turned in the alarm at 7.20 last night and then raced to the hall for the fire engine.

A total of 25 men arrived on the scene to battle the blaze. Thurlow Township Fire Department responded with four men and a tanker, Batawa Fire Department sent three men. The last truck remained on the scene to prevent any further flare-ups, but by 10.30 this morning, had cleared up all equipment.

Besides the battle to save the barn, which one firefighter referred to as "hopeless," plus chasing the unharmed and dying hogs, two of the firemen came close to death.

"It wasn't until after we began fighting the fire, that we realized Steve Watt and Joe Craft were standing on a full drum filled with a mixture of oil and gas," said the spokesman.

"It was right next to the burning building . . . we moved that fast, you can bet."

Garfield Evans, next-door neighbor to the Vermilyea Farm, praised the efforts of the Sidney Township firefighters, stating their presence was the only thing which prevented his barn from going up.

"The wind shifted about 2 a.m. this morning," he said. "Sparks were flying heavy through the air and if those boys hadn't been there, my barn would have gone up too."

Mr. Evans reported that his barn contained 60 head of cattle, 15 sows and more than 100 piglets.

"I don't have anything bad to say against the Sidney Fire Department, they're a hell of a good bunch," the relieved farmer stated.

The four firewatchers detailed to stand guard over the smoking rubble, praised the thoughtfulness of the Evans family.

"They brought coffee out to us and not too many people would do that . . . it sure was welcome in that cold."

The only complaint registered by the men was the non-co-operation of certain drivers.

"If people would clear the road for firefighters, we'd have a better chance of doing our job."

One fireman wryly noted the uncomplimentary remark bestowed on him after he had requested one sightseer to move his car to allow the men to get to the fire: "He told me to . . . well, he said I should go somewhere else. It's amazing how fast these people arrive on the scene of an accident or a fire to stand and gaze."

Cause of the fire has not yet been determined and the loss has not been compiled.

Experts To Address Growers

PICTON (Staff) — A series of lectures sponsored by the Prince Edward canning crop growers will be held at Prince Edward Yacht Club Feb. 24 and 25.

Several prominent guest speakers have been invited to address farmers from the Quinte area during this two-day vegetable growers' meeting. Among them are Ralph Shaw, fruit and vegetable specialist from London, Ontario, and Dr. Ib Nonnecke, department of horticulture, University of Guelph. Mr. Shaw will speak on The Vegetable Industry As I See It. Dr. Nonnecke will discuss Prince Edward and the Pea Industry.

Dr. Walter Saidak, Harrow Research Station will speak on vegetable weed control He is a graduate of Cornell University, New York, and is now a research worker in the field of vegetable herbicides.

Robert Cobbledick fruit and vegetable specialist for Prince Edward County, will examine the potential of direct seeding of tomatoes in his address. He will be assisted by Dr. Nonnecke.

Other guest speakers will be John Vandenberg, marketing specialist, Vineland: Klass Werkhoven, president of the Prince Edward Canning Crop Growers' and A. Fisher, farm economics branch, Chatham.

The first day's program of lectures will be chaired by John Whiteford, Cherry Valley. Chairman for the second day will be John Huizenga.

PE Team Wins Quiz

PICTON (Staff) — A provincial safety quiz team from Prince Edward Collegiate Institute has won the Hastings and Prince Edward semi-finals held this week at an IAPA dinner in Belleville by defeating competitors from Trenton and Madoc.

Coach of the team is PECI machine shop instructor Herbert Pliwischkies. The quiz team answered safety questions concerning workshops, first aid, fire, proper tool storage, and highway and boating operations.

Team members include Barry Matthie, grade 11, a member of last year's champion team, Garritt Wemekamp, Stephen Nourse and Daniel Dulmage, all grade 13 students.

PECI is among 90 schools this year entering teams in the Ontario competitions. Last year, 30 schools competed in the safety contest. The Prince Edward County team already has established itself as one of the leading six teams in the Quinte area following this week's victory in Belleville.

Parks Board Declines To Get Into Catering

The Belleville Parks Board is not interested in getting into the food catering business, this despite the fact its counterpart — the recreation-arena committee — says there is money in canteen operation.

Parks board members last night considered the idea of running canteens this year at Zwick's Island, the fairgrounds grandstand, and at the Alemite field, but in the end decided they wanted no part of the operation.

Instead the board will offer the concessions out for tender to private operators and parks director Lloyd Syer was directed to prepare the necessary tender forms.

The city recreation-arena committee operates its own canteens at the arena and at the Ben Bleecker Auditorium.

Prior to the discussion, Douglas Jackson, who last year operated the canteens at the fairground's grandstand and at the Alemite field, urged continuance of the present policy, claiming that catering was essentially a service and could best be done by private enterprise.

And as a food caterer making a full-time living out of the business, Mr. Jackson had a few suggestions for the parks board.

He felt the Zwick's Island canteen, which in past years has been operated by Tooe's County Gardens, could be developed into an attractive drive-in operation.

He also suggested the operation of a mobile food catering unit to provide service at ball games or other sports events on park property where there was no regular canteen.

Such a unit would provide a much needed service during the winter months at Zwick's Island, he said.

Board member Robert Phillips said he was not in favor of the board getting into the food catering business. His motion to call tenders for canteen operation was seconded by Alderman Mrs. Jean Smith and was carried unanimously.

Haig Park Now Open

Haig Park in Belleville's east end is to be added to the list of city parks where, under the new snowmobile bylaw, motorized toboggan enthusiasts will be allowed to operate their machines.

Haig Park was suggested for snowmobile operation when the city bylaw was proposed but in some manner was omitted when the bylaw was prepared.

Snowmobile enthusiasts state that Haig Park is a logical area from which city snowmobilers can exit into the county for rural safaris.

Permitted hours for snowmobile operation at the park will be those normally allowed under the bylaw — from 8 a.m. to 11 p.m. Monday to Thursday; 8 a.m. to 12 midnight Friday and Saturday and 1.30 p.m. to 10 p.m. Sunday.

New Well To Be Dug

MADOC (Special) — The village of Madoc will drill a new well as a measure to help solve the community's water problem which last weekend saw some parts of the village without water pressure.

The immediate cause of the low pressure problem was a leak in a watermain which has since been deteced and repaired.

Water pressure had been decreasing for more than two weeks, and by last Friday was non-existent in the east end and on Saturday the west end was also without water.

Sunday an emergency session of council was called to determine the course of action.

Detection equipment was brought in to help determine the location of the apparent leak and sections of the village were cut off to help localize the problem.

In an effort to help conserve pressure in the emergency, water was cut off at the arena while T. C. Barton, manager of the local coin laundry volunteered to close his business until the trouble was cleared up.

Monday, village council again met and was informed the break in the watermain had been found and was being repaired.

Discussion the turned to a proposed new well and on motion of Kel Kincaid and Bruce White, the firm of J. D. Lee Engineering was instructed to call tenders for drilling.

Bids will be received until Feb. 25 with council to award the tender the following day. The tender contract will call for commencement of drilling operations by March 2.

Snow Clearers Are Commended

PICTON (Staff) — Price Edward County road employees were commended for their work in recent weather conditions during a county council meeting this week. Sophiasburg reeve George Foster praised county engineer Donald Clark and his staff for "an exceptionally good job." He added that county residents should make a greater effort to bear with Prince Edward road clearance work. "It's impossible to make the roads as passable as they are in July," reminded reeve Foster.

It was pointed out in a county roads committee report that high level maintenance of equipment has prevented any major breakdowns. A rubber-tired power loader now in use was termed "very satisfactory" and it was noted that it is fitting readily into the county operation.

Deep snowbanks along all county roads have prevented work crews from clearing dead trees this winter.

Street Lighting Cost $118,000

Street lighting will cost the city of Belleville approximately $118,000 for the current year, according to a report from the public utilities commission approved by city council this week.

The above estimated amount include the charges on $27,594 which was the capital investment on street lighting during last year, an amount for maintenance, and the cost of power.

The year's estimate for street lighting is predicted on the assumption that all work in the utility's street lighting program for this year is completed and on last year's power costs.

The utilities commission is currently having a rate study carried out by Ontario Hydro and this could result in a slightly higher rate for power during the year. The results of the study are not expected before late February or early March.

City council Monday approved a capital expenditure of about $47,000 by the utilities this year for installation of new street lighting.

Major item in the proposed expenditure is an item of $10,560 for doubling the lighting capacity on North Front Street from College Street to the city limits.

Other plans calls for the installation of 22 new lights on East Dundas Street, 31 new lights in the Gowanbrae subdivision; 23 lights in the second stage Glenarden and 27 lights in the second stage of the West Park Village subdivision.

Also 18 lights are scheduled for installation on Bell Blvd. from North Front Street to the west side of Quinte Mal.

All new street lighting recommendations by the utilities were approved by council with the exception of new lights on Station Street from Herchimer Ave. to the CN freight sheds.

On the decommendation of Mayor J. Russell Scott, council cut back the installation to the end of the present poles, thereby lopping just over $4,500 from over-all program costs.

Students Have Ideas

Drafting students at Moira Secondary School are taking an active interest in the development of new park areas in the city.

They got into the act last year at the invitation of the city parks board which was looking for ideas about what facilities might be wanted for the East Zwick's Island park area.

The students entered into the spirit of the thing and last fall and early winter came up with their own ideas of what should be included.

To better illustrate their points, the student draftsmen came up with detailed drawings along with lengthy descriptions of their ideas.

And the students' efforts in park planning are still continuing.

Last night Moira Secondary School teacher Robert Phillips brought two more such presentations to the parks board.

One, a plaster of paris model constructed by David Cheeseman, proposed development of a zoo for East Zwick's Island.

The other, a joint effort by students Bill Kerr, Bob Guay and Dave Shultz, suggested development plans for the Stanley Park area, north of Edgehill Crescent.

Board members expressed their appreciation for the suggestions and said the ones relating to East Zwick's Island would be forwarded to their plant planning consultants in Toronto for their consideration.

Fire Levels Picton House

PICTON (Staff) — A Picton woman was left homeless when fire completely destroyed her Pitt Street home last night.

A spokesman for the Picton Fire Department said today the 1½-storey frame house occupied by Lida Demille, burned to the ground despite firefighters' efforts to save it.

Damage to the house was estimated at $1,000 while the value of its contents lost in the blaze was set at $400. Cause of the fire, which broke out shortly after 7 p.m., is still undetermined.

SHRINER — In loving memory of a dear fiancee Paul who passed away Feb. 19, 1969.

Sad and sudden was the call,
So dearly loved by one and all,
His memory is as sweet today,
As in the hour he passed away.

—Lovingly remembered by Linda.

LUCAS — In memory of Charles Leslie Lucas, who was killed thirty years ago today, February 19, 1941.

Quietly remembered every day,
Sadly missed along life's way.

—Ever remembered by his daughter Dorothy.

AUSTIN — In loving memory of a dear father and grandfather, Charles William (Bill) Austin, who passed away February 19, 1965.

In our hearts your memory lingers,
Always tender, fond and true,
There's not a day dear Father,
We do not think of you.

—Always remembered by son Charles and daughter-in-law Shirley and grandchildren.

AUSTIN — In loving memory of dear husband William (Bill) Austin who passed away Feb. 19, 1965.

I think of him in silence,
His name I oft recall,
There is nothing left to answer,
But his picture on the wall.
Memories of him will always linger,
Till God calls me to meet him face to face.

—Ever remembered by loving wife Eva.

AUSTIN — In loving memory of my father and grandfather, Charles William Austin Sr., who passed away 6 years ago, Feb. 19, 1965.

May you always walk in sunshine,
And God's love around you glow,
For the happiness you gave us,
No one will ever know,
It broke our hearts to lose you,
For part of us went with you,
But you did not go alone.
The day God called you home.

—Sadly missed, but always remembered, your daughter Mary McInroy and one granddaughter Mary Jane and grandsons Michael, George and wife, Donald and wife.

New Members Chamber's Aim

PICTON (Staff) — Former Picton reeve Bernard C. Hepburn Tuesday was sworn in as president of the Prince Edward Chamber of Commerce during a directors' meeting at Prince Edward Yacht Club.

Mr. Hepburn, active as a chamber director for more than 20 years, commented that "today's big words are 'get involved.'" In his inaugural remarks he reminded directors that it is essential for them to join with members in activities outside chamber meetings. "You shouldn't call yourself a good director unless you are active outside the chamber," he said.

Mr. Hepburn commented that he has "certain ideas" which he thinks can benefit the chamber of commerce in the months ahead. "A main aim is to get everyone involved through a membership drive," he added. The new president also suggested that a membership committee consisting of himself, first vice-president Merle Pearsall, second vice - president Archie Kingma, secretary William Duggan and treasurer Victor Allan should be organized. "We can divide certain areas up and hit them for memberships," Mr. Hepburn urged. He observed that in examining 1970's membership dues of $1,200, he wondered if they should not be $3,200.

Chamber members were warned that it is important for them to be aware of Ontario's development and the development of Prince Edward County in each of its municipalities. "It's important to know what's going on," asserted Mr. Hepburn.

Chamber's Finances Termed 'Unhealthy'

PICTON (Staff) — Prince Edward County industrial commissioner and secretary of the chamber of commerce William Duggan Tuesday termed the chamber's annual financial statement "unhealthy," owing to a large grant recorded from county council.

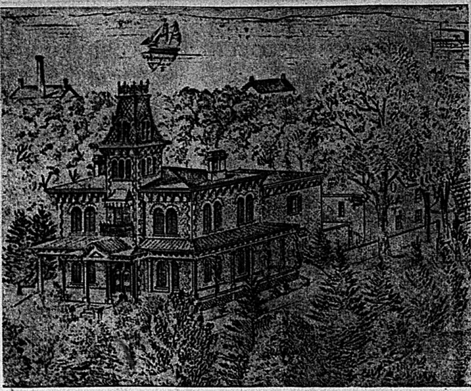
Mr. Duggan described the statement as showing "an unfortunate state of affairs". Approximately 50 per cent of the Prince Edward Chamber's operating funds were obtained through a $1,000 council grant. Mr. Duggan cautioned chamber directors that it is a grant they may or may not get annually.

He suggested that fees could be raised since the financial statement showed $1,200 recorded through memberships coupled with the $1,000 grant.

Several directors questioned a $196 expenditure listed as "the Cunnington promotion." Former secretary - treasurer of the Chamber, Lindley Calnan explained that the money was paid to county resident Ray Cunnington for metropolitan newspapers' weekend magazine articles promoting Prince Edward County as a retreat "from the rat race". He added that write-ups were accompanied by pictures of Quinte's Isle. The articles apeared in newspapers such as the Montreal Star.

A report of the financial success of the county's first winter carnival showed a loss of approximately $1,173. Winter carnival chairman Archie Kingma said that a balance of $1,423 was on hand before the carnival. Approximately $2,966 was paid out during the four-day program of events.

Chamber member Gordon Lloyd observed that the fee structure was "way out of whack," explaining the carnival fund deficit. With $250 on hand and the promise of 100 contestants, the snowmobile race committee has planned another meet at Picton fairgrounds this month.



St. Agnes Manor in Late 1800s

Fire damaged historic St. Agnes Manor on Bridge St. East last evening when long-smoldering flames burst into a major blaze in an upstairs apartment. The Tuscan villa, designed by an English architect and built in 1860, once housed distinguished Belleville industrialists and later became a well-known girls' school. Extensive additions at the rear were added after this sketch was drawn in the 1870s for inclusion in the county atlas.

City Landmark Fire Damaged

Investigation continues today into the fire that severely damaged one apartment at St. Agnes Manor on Bridge St. East last evening.

The 111-year-old city landmark, now converted into 21 apartments housing about 60 people, was threatened with destruction in the fire, first reported burning in a second-floor apartment at 7:33 p.m.

City firefighters confined the blaze to the upstairs rear apartment in the square front section of the building — the oldest part of the historic structure.

Clifford Maracle, occupant of apartment 15, where the fire started, suffered burns on his hands and feet, was treated at Belleville General Hospital and released.

"The fire was burning some time before it was reported," said Fire Chief Leo Culhane this morning. "The men had to crawl on their bellies through dense smoke in the attic to reach the blaze and get it under control.

No estimate of damage was available this morning. The fire chief reported apartment 15 "badly damaged" with extensive smoke and water damage to adjacent apartments, especially those on the ground floor.

Tenants pay rent to Basch Investments Ltd., but no one connected with the company could be reached today.

The house was built in 1860 by Billa Flint, a local lumber merchant and founder of Actinolite and Bancroft, which he named after his wife. Flint was appointed one of the first senators of the new Dominion of Canada after Confederation in 1867.

The house is considered a fine example of the Tuscan style of architecture fashionable in the mid-1800s.

From 1903 until 1920 the building was a girl's school, known as St. Agnes Manor. Its best-known pupil was the English comedienne, Beatrice Lillie, who was enrolled there with her sister. The Lillie career began with performances at local movie houses, where she and her sister sang duets during matinee performances.

PUC Balks at Signing Subdivider's Agreement

By KENNETH SMITH
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — Despite a resolution from town council ordering Public Utilities Commissioners to ratify the contentious Dufferin Developments subdividers' agreement the commission still refuses to sign.

At Thursday's PUC meeting commissioner Charles Hilton led off discussion, saying he would not sign because he had not been given "the right to agree or disagree with council's thinking".

"I would only be actings as a rubber-stamp . . . it is only that the subdivider should pay his own cost," he said.

Commissioner Hilton objected to the fact that no money had been allocated in the PUC budget for servicing the Dufferin subdivision.

He said the commission had not been consulted "with reference to how much money the council was committing the commission to spend on behalf of Dufferin Developments.

Town council has already signed its portion of the pact to extend sewers to the new westside housing development, although Mayor Duncan McDonald disapproves. The town will share the cost with the subdivider on a 50-50 basis.

However, commissioner Hilton and the mayor, in his capacity as ex-officio PUC member, object to the cost sharing for the utilities portion of the agreement (extension of water mains).

At the last PUC meeting, they refused to authorize 50-50 arrangements, prompting council to seek legal advice on whether the commission could be forced to sign.

Town Solicitor William Weston informed council that it had the power to force the PUC to accept the agreement, because the role of the commission is only "control and management" of the water system.

At yesterday's meeting, Mr. Hilton took the position that "control and management" provisions of the 1919 bylaw establishing the PUC give it "prerogative to create the methods and rates"—whether cost sharing should be accepted.

Commissioners learned during the meeting that the expense of providing Dufferin with water would be much higher than originally believed, because bringing a main in from Dundas St. West is impossible.

In a letter to the PUC, engineering consultants Gore and Storrie rule out a Dundas line. They indicate there is insufficient pressure along Dundas to consider the 600-ft. extension to service Dufferin.

Barry Box, the commission's public relations officer, told the meeting the Ontario Water Resources would not accept a Dundas line either.

Water along Dundas is pumped through a booster station on Mount Pelion. Mayor McDonald asked if it were possible, in any way, to use it to feed water to Dufferin Developments.

However, Commissioner Hilton said "this little booster is in trouble right now".

Mayor McDonald then indicated his refusal to sign. "In fairness, to Dufferin Developments they would not want to get mixed up in a thing like this" he said.

Gore and Storrie suggests that, instead of a line from Dundas costing less than $40,000, Dufferin Developments be serviced by a 4,850-foot, 12-inch pipeline overland from Dufferin Avenue near the Quaker Oats plant. Cost of this is estimated at 98,000.

The third commissioner, former mayor D. James MacDonald said he believed the PUC had a legal liability to Dufferin Developments over the mixup.

"Their (Dufferin's) engineers came in here and got advice from us before they drew up their plans" that included the cheaper Dundas service route, he explained.

"We have misled these people, approved their plans and now say you have to go a mile out of your way," Mr. MacDonald added.

PUC secretary - treasurer Doug Manlowe then told the commission Gore and Storrie have not changed their position on servicing the subdivision. In fact, he said, they had been suggesting the Dufferin pipeline since 1969.

Despite Gore and Storrie's survey for the PUC, Dufferin's consultants, Proctor and Redfern, had incorporated the Dundas linkup in their draft plans.

Mayor Duncan McDonald disagree with commissioner MacDonald on the matter of legal liability, saying Dufferin had been "saved in the nick of time'.

He added that "it is not going to take any crackpot lawyers to settle this."

Agreeing with this, Mr. Hilton suggested that the OWRC and Gore and Storrie be consulted on the matter. Commissioners decided to go to Toronto next Wednesday to see both OWRC representatives and the engineering firm.

Mr. Hilton dismissed responsibility to Dufferin, saying "he would rather be a little bit wrong with Dufferin" than be wrong with residents of a subdivision.

"We have a lot of responsibility to the people. To whom do we owe the most allegiance?" he said.

He contended that adequate servicing arrangements must be set now because the commission would be responsible for them once the subdivision is built. "Any way you look at it, the PUC is left holding the baby," he concluded.

Council Censures Public Network

Government assistance in the development of snowmobile trails to help keep the power toboggans off the public highways has been asked by members of the McClure Wicklow, Bangor township council in North Hastings.

At its February meeting, council members passed a recommendation calling for Hastings MPP Clarke Rollins to bring their request before the provincial legislature.

The recommendation asked for provincial assistance in the development and maintenance of ski trails in the North Hastings area.

A copy of the resolution is being forwarded to Hastings county council.

The three-township council is also urging that the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation upgrade the moral calibre of its programs.

The council has fired off a resolution to Hon. Gerald Pelletier, Secretary of State, soliciting his influence in parliament to make the CBC aware that Canada was founded in the name of christianity and is dedicated to christian ideals.

"Therefore," the resolution reads, "we urge you to impress the CBC that we request programs of the highest moral character and that the Corporation eject that segment of the industry in the CBC which seems intent on undermining and destroying our christian way of life."

Madoc's Carnival Starts Today

Another Quinte municipality has joined the winter carnival caper.

Madoc will hold its first carnival this weekend, beginning Friday night with the traditional torchlight parade at 7 p.m. A dog sleigh will highlight the parade and the 12 contestants for carnival queen will ride in one float. A queen and two princesses will be chosen later in the evening.

Snowmobile trips are scheduled for Saturday and local organizations will cater for a hot luncheon at noon and a turkey dinner in the evening.

The ice show Carna Capers will be presented in the evening with guest performers from the Kingston Skating Club.

A pancake breakfast will be held Sunday morning at the Kiwanis Centre and a parachute drop will kick off the snowmobile races Sunday afternoon.

Centre Hastings Secondary School started its first carnival at the same time, beginning at noon today when classes were cancelled.

A dance will be held in the school Friday night and free skating will be available on the school rink.

War Amps Tags In 25th Year

Car owners across Canada are receiving their War Amps Key Tags in the mail for the 25th time this year.

The Key Tag Service, now are institution for Canadian automobile owners, is celebrating its 25th anniversary in 1971.

Nearly 9.5 million of the tags, with a miniature licence plate, will be sent out this year by the War Amps-Key Tag Service. The finder of a set of keys with the tag attached simply drops them in the nearest mailbox. They go to the Key Tag Service headquarters, where disabled veterans look up records and mail the keys to their owners. The lost keys are returned postpaid.

About 70 sets of keys are returned each day. In the process, disabled veterans get jobs, the War Amputations of Canada gets the money it needs to operate and the motorist gets a service for only 75 cents a year.

Disabled veterans of World War II are just getting to the age where they are more prone than ever to physical and financial difficulties and more likely to need help, according to A. J. Parsons, general manager of the War Amps Key Tag Service.

"Their average age is now about 52," says Parsons. "We find we are having more and more calls on our service bureau."

In most cases, says the director, it is a matter of knowing where a veteran can get the kind of help he needs and going after it for him. Regular appeals are made to the department of veterans affairs, members of parliament, the Canadian Pension Commission and welfare departments.

The self-supporting Key Tag Service started in 1946. Through an arrangement with provincial governments, the names and addresses of all owners of new licences are furnished to the service. Soon after an owner buys his new licence plates, the key tag arrives in the mail for him.

Cost continues at 75 cents a set, and 50 cents for each additional set of tags the owner wants to order.

Mr. Davis' Task

One of the overall problems facing Ontario's premier-elect, William Davis, will be improvement not only of our material standard of living but also that "quality of life" we hear so much about today.

Our so-called "standard of living" is one thing, but "quality of life" is another. One has to do mainly with material things and the other with the moral and spiritual.

Life and people are too compartmentalized and opportunities for people to get together in a civilized, social atmosphere that does not involve a formal banquet, meeting, or whatever, relatively few.

We are so organized that we seem incapable of the kind of pleasant people-to-people relationships that are more the art of European society.

Conversations at formal gatherings can be as perfunctory as they are banal and superficial, lacking in either variety, meaning or depth. Come to think about it, how many people are actually listening? It is said that British-born television performer David Frost has the gft of making his guests feel he is interested only in them, or in each individual as he converses with them. It is a gift the rest of us might try to emulate.

How does all this affect Mr. Davis? Well he might try to infuse more spirit and personality into the school system for which he is still responsible as Minister of Education. Every school has its own image, but in the broad sense there is room for a little more . . . well, let us just call it happiness, in the day-to-day running of the school system, as there is in society at large.

Those students of Centennial who will be combining a Mediterranean cruise with studies aboard an educational cruise vessel, and meeting British students, are the envy of many. Is there nothing in the way of travel for students right here at home, and preferably involving work too? We realize such a scheme is under consideration to ward off the problem of student unemployment in summer — but what about trying it also during term time. There are the exchanges between Ontario and Quebec? Why not promote similar exchanges with other provinces? And send the kids by rail — it would help our ailing railroads. Maybe Mr. Davis could set up a department, or have some of the existing government agencies look into such enterprises. All should contribute toward achieving that elusive quality of life objective and toward making Canadian society more human.

Petty Crime

With the arrest of 28 persons Belleville police evidently have broken the back of a rash of petty crime in the city. We hope this will mean an end to the burglaries that have taken place, adding up to no fewer than 52 cases of break and enter, theft, fraud and wilful damage.

What is behind such episodes? While every community has its troublemakers it is disturbing to observe this apparent upsurge in this type of petty crime. Teenagers are involved and the authorities will do well if in pursuit of their investigations they consider the background of these youths, as well as their habits.

Meanwhile, we would draw attention to an article elsewhere on this page concerning an increase in crime in Winnipeg. Police there see a link between crime and increasing drug usage. Are drugs involved in the Belleville situation? We do not know, yet as everyone is aware drug usage has been on the increase in recent years.

Picton's Gain

It has been known for some time that the vacant army base at Picton was scheduled for conversion into a centre for the mentally retarded. The official announcement, however, affords particular pleasure and is of the utmost significance for the future of the Picton area and Prince Edward County.

The welfare of the patients of course must be of prime concern and it is clear that with a staff of 450 for some 300 patients of school age this will be ensured; but aside from this the economic outlook for the area, hit hard by the departure of the army, once again is bright.

Another boon for the patients is the attractive location of the new facility on the high ground above Picton. The importance of a pleasant environment for the retarded cannot be overestimated and the old army camp location is more amply endowed than most establishments of this kind.

Due praise has been voiced at the major role played by former Mayor Harvey McFarland in making the care centre a reality. One of the major benefits is that overcrowding at other centres for the retarded will now be eased considerably.

Number of Addicts Increases Sharply

Winnipeg Discovers Link Between Drugs and Crime

Winnipeg Free Press

If the LeDain commission is looking for fresh information in its fact-finding mission on the non-medical use of drugs, perhaps it should return to Winnipeg where Police Chief Norman Stewart has just released some statistics on the relationship of drug-use to crime. The number of known drug addicts in the Winnipeg area, he reports, has reached 180 — an increase of 50 since Oct. 1969. In the past year, the number of armed robberies has more than doubled — from 43 in 1969 to 95 in 1970.

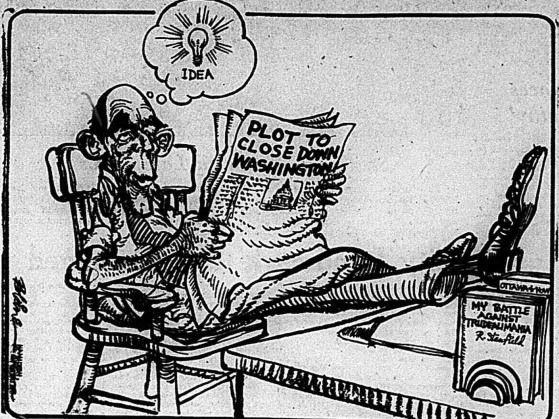
According to the chief, there is a relationship between these statistics. This is borne out, he says, by the figures for 1966, when there were no arrests on drug charges and the number of armed robberies in the city was six. Chief Stewart estimates that more than 75 per cent of the armed robberies in Winnipeg last year were committed by young people who needed money to satisy the drug habit.

These statistics suggest that the LeDain commission, which is reportedly in favor of relaxing laws on drug-use, may be asking the wrong people the wrong questions. Basic to its alleged attitude of leniency toward drug-users is its feeling — not yet scientifically verified — that "soft" drugs, such as marijuana, are harmless to the individual; and John Munro, federal minister of health and welfare, has suggested that, if "a significant minority" is in favor of a relaxed drug law, it would receive serious consideration.

But the key question seems to be not whether marijuana, as such, is harmless to the individual, but what effect it has on society and what its relationship is to the increasing use of hard drugs. Certainly it can be shown that, before soft drugs became popular, hard-drug users were few. This is borne out not only by the Winnipeg statistics but by those from any city in North America. Most dramatically it is borne out by New York. Before soft drugs became popular, heroin deaths in New York city were few. In 1969 there were over 900 heroin deaths in this one city alone.

The Winnipeg figures, from a much smaller city, are less startling, but they are enough to indicate that the relationship between soft and hard drugs is closer than the advocates of a relaxed drug law make out. They suggest that there is not only a relation between drug-use and crime.

Chief Stewart's report would indicate that, in any consideration of a relaxation of drug laws, caution, rather than precipitate action, is warranted.



Another Look at Proposed Kraft Mill Issue in P. E.

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

The controversy about the establishment of a large new Kraft Paper Mill in Prince Edward County continues, and your paper is reporting objectively on the matter.

It seems to me that the defenders of the Paper Mill have presented all arguments favorable to the mill, and these can be summed up shortly thus: the prospective mill is to provide certain material benefits, such as many more tax dollars and so and so many new jobs.

The opponents, on the other hand, have objected to the building of the mill mainly with less tangible arguments, such as expected pollution of air and water, damage to tourist industry and loss of scenic values, since the mill is to be built on one of the most beautiful spots in the county.

I feel like reinforcing a little these objections and adding a few more concrete arguments:

1. It seems that wherever new paper mills were built, the existing forests were largely destroyed since there are no restrictions on logging on Ontario private lands. There is reason to assume that such destruction would take place in Prince Edward County as well, and this might be fatal. I understand that the removal of forest cover in the county in the last 100 years has resulted in very serious deterioration of the land fertility, lowering of the water table, and in critical water and wind erosion. Consequently the streams and creeks in the County, which used to carry abundant water in the past, now run dry in June. Further destruction of the forest shelter is unthinkable, unacceptable!

2. All statistics point out that the needs for recreational land facilities are increasing by leaps and bounds, and with the ever expanding leisure time these needs can be expected to increase at an even faster rate. In the United States certain industries have already reduced the weekly working days and as usual Canada is expected to follow suit. Situated close to the immense reservoir of recreation - hungry masses of big cities like Toronto, Montreal and Ottawa, as well as the North-East United States, Prince Edward should be considered a prime tourist area, where definitely a long-term view should be taken in regard to the future development of the island.

There already exists one major polluter in the County, coating with fine dust the spectacular high shore and Picton Bay lands, and care should be taken in admitting more heavy polluters to this beautiful island.

While permanent dwellers may get used to the nauseating smells of a Kraft Mill, tourists are being repelled by it. Kraft Mills do smell, and no two ways about it! And there are no paper mills of any kind which do not pollute the water — and no industries which do not harm the scenic beauty of the land. Never, nowhere.

Separate Schools Draw More Comment

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

In reply to the letter signed H. Arbinger Society, I would certainly hope that the separate school issue will be expounded until such time as these schools are subsidized by the Ontario Government. I am not indifferent!

It is surprising to note that the Society referred to separate schools as "dissociating students because of religion". I am of the opinion that separate schools teach the brotherhood of man. How does considering one's fellow traveller as one's brother put a barrier between them?

"The Catholic religionist," as the Society calls them, were far seeing men endeavoring to safeguard the right to teach that God is the Supreme Being and if we put Him first, all other things will be added unto us. More and more schools are taking God off their agenda. Would the Society have us do the same?

I most certainly agree that students are in school to learn, but who would tolerate even a dog that was not "house-trained". Discipline in many forms plays a very important role in our lives. Many times, too much emphasis is placed on a person's freedom and not enough on his responsibilities.

There may be cases where all educational institutions have made "blunders" such as the emphasis on marks and examinations. Perhaps these were not so glaring a mistake as they seem. An essential part of schooling is to give the child a certain amount of basic information. Learning by rote, then must play a role in the educational process. From this broad base of general knowledge, a student bases his future thinking. How else could this general knowledge be assessed by a teacher except by tests or examinations?

It is my belief that the acts regarding education in 1867 never meant any schools to be left without tax support. Since our taxes may be allocated to the separate schools up to grade 10, is it asking too much that this support be extended to grade 13, especially now with the implementing of continuous education? How frustrating for a child in the separate school system, who, at the end of grade 10 for financial reasons must seek enrolment in the public school system! It is like asking him to change boats in the middle of the stream. This support through grade 13 is extended in Saskatchewan, Alberta, Newfoundland and Quebec, (where, by the way, the so-called "separate" schools are the non-Catholic schools). Educators in these provinces realize that an investment in all school systems is of benefit to the whole society. Our educators in Ontario believe in the individuality of the student, can they not uphold the individuality of systems?

The supporters of equal tax sharing for the separate school system are convinced that a child, taught in the atmosphere that he is a unique human being, created by God to share with all men the wonderful gifts of life, can be instilled with the responsibility to become a better student, a better citizen, a better member of the whole Christian community. For this reason, we are asking a fair distribution of taxes collected for educational purposes.

A CONCERNED PARENT

PC Strength In The Toronto Area

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

The Ontario Conservative Party holds all but three seats in the Ontario legislative assembly east of Toronto. Yet, only one of the five candidates for the leadership of the Ontario Conservative Party came from east of Toronto.

Furthermore, Bert Lawrence the only candidate east of Toronto, ran last in this contest and William Davis, one of the remaining four candidates from Toronto-west, where the Conservatives are having problems holding their own, will now become Premier.

The fact is, that the leaders of all three major political parties come from Toronto-west ridings.

Perhaps this is the reason why Eastern Ontario has been considered a slow growth area and that this may be changed if we have a strong MPP from Eastern Ontario.

Swift Aid For Accident Victims

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

May I say a word of praise to the people who helped the injured in a very bad accident which I witnessed last Friday night on West Dundas Street.

I think that all too often we are ready to criticize and at the same time not give credit where credit is due. In this light, I would like to highly commend police constable John Walker of the Belleville police department, the staff of LaSalle Ambulance and one of our young people Jim Meens (who was a bystander and pitched in to help) for the efficient way they handled a very bad situation. Both police and ambulance were at the scene within minutes of our call and the speed and efficiency with which the injured were removed from the wreck and dispatched to the hospital I am sure went a long way to help save their lives.

AN OBSERVER

The Constitution

A Breakthrough in Ottawa

Ottawa Journal

The constitutional conference has shown for the first time that it is possible after all to make significant progress towards an updated constitution.

Nothing of course is settled: . . These constitutional meetings have grown so frustrating it is tempting to make too much of any discernible advance.

But Prime Minister Trudeau is entitled for the moment at least to the use of the word "break-through," even to using it three times, as he did during his press conference. Despite the calculated boredom of Premier Bennett and the stagey posturing of Premier Thatcher, the meeting did go farther toward agreement than almost anyone dared to hope.

Of course Bennett has no mind or will for constitutional changes; other provinces may also think that bread and butter issues are more important. But that is irrelevant. The constitutional reform process was not started for Bennett or for Thatcher. It was started so that Quebec could find in the Canadian constitution an instrument to affirm the province's legitimate identity. If that is forgotten, or thought unimportant, then the whole business of reform is as pointless as Bennett would have us believe.

Rolls-Royce Collapse

Ottawa Journal

The Conservative government plans to nationalize some per cent of Rolls-Royce operations, notably the marine and aircraft engine divisions. The profitable luxury car enterprise will be offered to private bidders, who are already standing in line for the chance. Even some of the one-quarter of Rolls' 80,000 employees who have been working on the RB-211 project might be spared loss of jobs if an Anglo-American deal can be worked out to re-finance the project.

In the end the chief casualty may be British national pride. But it is a harsh reality of our time that not even the British can put symbols and reputation before good economics.

County Official Plan Explained by OMB Man

PICTON (Staff) — Prince Edward County municipalities lacking zoning bylaws and official plans may benefit from the proposed organization of a county-wide land division committee.

Formation of such a committee was suggested to county councillors Tuesday by department of municipal affairs spokesmen Niall Carney and Patrick Shepperd. Both men recommended this committee as a means of returning to "people on the scene" the right to determine "what form of physical environment they would like to have".

A province - wide subdivision control plan implemented in 1970 was considered too awkward in some instances. Mr. Carney and Mr. Shepperd both with the department of municipal affairs' land division office stressed that the plan's aim is the provision of a certain amount of control over property sales in municipalities lacking land control bylaws.

Persons offering land for sale must apply to the minister of municipal affairs for permission. This control program is hampered by staff shortage, lack of knowledge of the needs of certain areas and restrictions on time and travel by employees examining applications according to Mr. Carney.

He reported that land division committees now are being organized by seven Ontario counties. All will be functional by mid-March. These committees consist of seven members nominated by council but not belonging to county or municipal councils. Employees of these councils also are ineligible to serve on the committees.

Consent for land sale is given only after the committee has considered all aspects of each application. Sale applications also are examined by the department of highways, county council and the health unit. Charge for each application would range to $25 and the committee's activities would be financed by county taxpayers.

It was suggested that if a committee is formed in Prince Edward it would deal with from 200 to 300 applications annually. Meetings would be necessary on a bi-monthly basis. Each committee member, according to Mr. Carney, probably would be paid from $25 to $35 a day and travel costs. Committee decisions would be open to appeals by the minister of municipal affairs, a municipal council or an individual resident.

It would be necessary, however, to register all appeals within 14 days of the committee's decision. All departments consulted by the land division committee concerning a land sale would be required to forward replies within 10 days. The final decision of each department would not, essentially, be contained in this initial reply. Applications could ordinarily be completed in two months time.

Mr. Carney explained that a land division committee in Prince Edward would not necessarily make land sales more difficult. "If you don't give a damn what happens, then it's going to be a lot easier," he predicted. He reminded councillors that committee members' concern for their environment would play a significant part in all decisions.

Mr. Carney added, "If a committee is formed members should just exercise common sense when considering applications from areas not covered by official plans or bylaws." He reiterated that the MacDonald-Cartier Freeway would not have been required if Highway 2 had been protected from "a residential street".

In Prince Edward County only the municipalities of Picton, Hallowell, and Ameliasburg are protected by official plans and zoning. An official county plan remains in preparation. Mr. Carney remarked that municipalities without committees of adjustment could defer organization of a land division committee and support the department's proposal. A uniform policy across the county could be enforced in this manner by a land division committee. Minor variances on applications could be granted by existing committees of adjusment.

It was suggested that committee members could be appointed for terms of from one to three years. County council would appoint the committee and approve its budget.

Toronto Stocks

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market was fractionally lower in light mid-morning trading today as it entered a second consecutive declining session.

On index, industrials were down .29 to 176.58, golds .14 to 184.55, base metals .06 to 92.47 and western oils .66 to 206.25.

Volume by 11 a.m. was 572,000 shares, compared with 640,000 at the same time Thursday.

Losses outnumbered gains 128 to 99 with 183 issues unchanged.

Among declining issues, Canadian Industrial Gas was down ½ to $10⅝, Genstar ⅜ to $11⅞, Moore ¾ to $34⅝, Metropolitan Trust ¼ to $16, Kerr-Addison 15 cents to $9.75, Bakeno 15 cents to $5.15, Scurry-Rainbow ½ to $24¼ and Ranger ⅛ to $14⅞.

Dead Trees Sprout Work Program

Trees stricken by Dutch elm disease along Highway 401 are now being felled from Quebec border to Windsor under Ontario Seasonal Employment Program — a provincial work project employing men hired through Canada Manpower and local welfare agencies. About 30 workers are involved in the scheme (above) between Belleville and Trenton.

Concept Endorsed

Zwick's to Be Developed Slowly

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

After months of consideration on what facilities and attractions should be made available members of the Belleville Parks Board have arrived at a concept plan for the East Zwick's Island park area.

And for the immediate future at least it seems there will be no thought of including a pitch and putt golf area.

Yesterday parks board members accepted a concept plan of the area drawn by parks director Lloyd Syer and this plan, along with ideas and submissions made by the general public and drafting students at Moira Secondary School, will be forwarded to park planning consultants in Toronto.

The consultants in turn will provide a detailed costing of the project for the parks board.

This year city council has provided $100,000 in its capital works budget as a possible expenditure for East Zwick's Island improvements, and over the next four years an additional $300,000 has been earmarked for development at the rate of $75,000 per year.

But if the recommendation of parks director Lloyd Syer is carried out, development of the east Zwick's park area will be a gradual and continuing operation.

The reason for the parks director's recommendation is that the type of park facilities wanted by the public changes rapidly and he cannot see constructing costly facilities which in a few years time might not be wanted, or even needed.

As an example Mr. Syer cited the case of a small new park in Quebec City where walks were provided as part of the original project.

But public usage of the park differed from the planner's idea with result that over the years more walks were added until now the park was mostly concrete walks with but very little grass.

The director suggested that if costly buildings were provided initially for East Zwick's Island, they would have to be left regardless of public usage.

East Zwick's Island is the site of the city's present sanitary land fill garbage disposal area and Mr. Syer says that much of the initial development of the proposed park area will be to decide on contours and cover the area with a liberal depth of clean fill and top soil.

If fill and top soil is skimped, Mr. Syer says it will be difficult to grow good sod and turf cover.

Mr. Syer's concept plan for the park would be to divide it into two specific areas — one suitable for both summer and winter activities and the other a passive area.

Included in the active area would be a toboggan hill, picnic facilities and a children's play area, and possibly a beach area.

Also suggested are a canteen and a dock area.

Initially a par three golf course was proposed for the park with Alderman Mrs. Robin Jeffrey being one of the strongest proponents for such a scheme.

Now, however, she admits she has changed her mind on the pitch and putt facility.

She says she would hate to see this potentially attractive waterfront area wasted on such a facility which might be better provided by private interests on a different site.

Committee to View Plan On Future of Fairgrounds

One man's opinion of what the Belleville fairgrounds could some day look like will be presented to members of the Exhibition Park planning committee at their next meeting.

At the meeting a concept plan drawn by parks superintendent Lloyd Syer will be presented for consideration of the committee members.

That the operation of the Belleville fairgrounds be under the one body instead of several organizations, all of them with vested interests in the grounds or certain facilities was proposed last summer.

An exhibition park advisory committee urged the move and a park planning committee was set up to further the idea.

Proposals were invited from the various organizations having vested interests in the grounds but no action was taken and the matter was shelved for consideration by new board appointees this year.

At the last meeting of the park planning committee on Feb. 9 it was agreed that the exhibition park advisory committee and the exhibition park planning committee should be combined into one body.

Members of the new board will be Mayor J. Russell Scott, two representatives each from the parks board, recreation-arena committee; Quinte Riding and Driving Club and the Belleville Agricultural Society and one member each from the Lawn Bowling Club and the Belleville Curling Club.

Acting in an advisory capacity will be City Manager J. R. Reynolds, City Solicitor John Miller; parks director Lloyd Syer, recreation administrator Lorne Williams, Quinte Exhibition manager Everett Gowsell and Gerald F. Brennan as secretary.

Parks board representatives to the exhibition park planning committee will be Paul Russell and Robert Phillips.

art, attorney-general, and Health Minister Thomas Wells.

Mr. Gomme said before the convention that he had plans to retire.

Earlier Thursday Mr. Nixon said the plight of the McClelland and Stewart publishing house shows the provincial government must act immediately to require that a set percentage of textbooks in Ontario schools be written and published in Canada.

He also suggested interest-free loans from the Ontario Development Corporation as a means to bolster the industry.

Jack McClelland, president of McClelland and Stewart, had said his company was for sale for $1.5 million because of financial troubles.

"What is needed is a policy . . . that a large percentage of our tax funds that go for the purchase of textbooks will be spent only on books and texts written and published in Canada," Mr. Nixon said in a statement.

U.C.W. Meetings

QUEENSBORO UCW

Mrs. Rex Rollins who was in charge of the program gave an outline of the work planned for the year during the general meeting of the Queensboro UCW which took place at the Church on Monday afternoon, February 8 under the chairmanship of the president, Mrs. Allan Franks. Miss Mary Taylor read a short selection on Brazil and Mrs. Rollins conducted a cross word puzzle on "the Americas".

Delegates were chosen to attend the annual meeting of the UCW of the Belleville Presbyterial which was held recently in Tabernacle United Church, Belleville. Mrs. Gordon Holmes was chosen to represent the UCW on the Board of Stewards.

Cooper unit was in charge of the devotional period with Mrs. Gordon Holmes being the leader. She was assisted by Mrs. Lynn Holmes.

At the close of the meeting lunch was served by unit one and a social time was enjoyed by all.

FRANKFORD UNIT II

FRANKFORD — Unit II of Frankford UCW met for their February meeting on Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. Frank Moran. Leader, Mrs. Ray Rumney, opened the meeting with a poem, "Just for Today." The secretary's report was given by Mrs. Earl Hewison followed by the treasurer's report given by Mrs. Ken Roote.

Mrs. Rumney read an article concerning "Pennies for Peace" and as membership dues are no longer required, it was unanimously agreed to take that money and send it to "UNESCO" who in turn will send it to a needy country.

Several items of business were discussed. Mrs. Rumney informed the members that any announcements for the United Church bulletin are to be given to Mrs. Earl Hewison by 5 p.m. Tuesday of each week. World Day of Prayer will be held on March 5 in St. Francis Church at 2 p.m.

A successful auction sale consisting of baking, canned goods and sewing were auctioned by Mrs. Dick Reed.

The worship service was conducted by Mrs. Ray Rumney and Mrs. Frank Moran.

Following the worship service, Mrs. Frank Moran welcomed Frank Rabel, who enlightened members on various aspects of Japanese life and customs. These were highlighted by slides and photographs.

Lunch was served by the hostesses.

MELROSE UCW

Mrs. Don Macfarlane, the new president of the evening unit of the Melrose UCW chaired her first meeting on February 11 at the home of Mrs. Clarence Hagerman.

Mrs. J. Macfarlane conducted the worship service with Mrs. N. Demille reading the scripture portion.

During the business part of the meeting several items of business arising from the reading of the minutes of the previous meeting were dealt with. The evening unit agreed to cater for an early June wedding.

It was announced that the Melrose congregation will unite with the Shannonville ACW for the World Day of Prayer on March 5. A general meeting will be held on March 11 when the evening unit will engage a special speaker for the occasion.

It was agreed that $125 is a workable sum to be held in the treasury at the beginning of the year. A visiting committee will be appointed at intervals during the year to visit the shut-ins in the community. Mrs. K. McMeehan and Mrs. S. Demille will be the visiting committee for the rest of February and the whole of March. Mrs. S Demille was appointed to be the third member of the social committee for the next catering undertaken by the evening unit.

The topic of the program introduced by Mrs. Jack Macfarlane was evaluation. It dealt with accomplishments and purposes for the future and the selection of priorities. It was pointed out that our present problem is confusion in our faith and doctrine and our need is to hear again the voice of God and trust in His guidance for He is still at work in the world. The program concluded with a trialogue followed by a hymn and prayer.

Refreshments were served and a social time was spent.

Runner-up!

Miss Dianne Bartley, formerly of Belleville and now living in Wakefield, Quebec, was the first runner up in a beauty pageant sponsored by the town.

The contestant was to decide the delegate who would represent the town in the major beauty contest at the Quebec Winter Carnival.

Miss Bartley was eight years old when she left Belleville with her parents nine years ago.

WHA Hears Talk On School of Nursing

The curriculum of the Edith Cavell Regional School of Nursing is designed to prepare women and men to become competent nurse practitioners, who are eligible for registration as nurses in the Province of Ontario.

This interesting and informative talk, as given by Mrs K. Madge Flindall, Principal Edith Cavell Regional School of Nursing, enlightened those present at the recent meeting of the Women's Hospital Auxiliary, of the many objectives of the new regional school.

Introduced by Mrs. J. H. Forrester, Mrs. Flindall explained that plans to establish a Regional School of Nursing were established in 1965 with Dr. Dymond presiding. There are 30 regional schools in various areas of Ontario.

In 1967 a Board of Directors was incorporated and composed of representatives from the area of Belleville, Trenton, Picton and Campbellford. These are the hospitals utilized for clinical experience for the student nurses. Approval to admit 40 students, maximum 70 students in 1968. Thus the change in name from the Belleville General Hospital School of Nursing.

The name Edith Cavell was chosen, as she had been the first nurse to go to Belgium to establish a modern (at that time) School of Nursing in 1907. She met a tragic death of execution for assisting allied soldiers during World War I.

The original nursing program offered by ECRSN consisted of a two - year educational experience and a third - year internship. This program has just recently been changed to a straight two year program, eliminating the third (intern) year.

The appreciation of the members was expressed to Mrs. Flindall by Mrs. A. B. Duffy.

The president, Mrs. J. E. Nelles extended a warm welcome to several new members. She reported a new Regional Hospital Planning Council to be formed and stated that Mrs. B. E. Burley was appointed to be the representative from the Women's Hospital Auxiliary of the Belleville General Hospital.

Mrs. J. H. Forrester, bulletin editor requested committee chairman to keep informed of new members and the correct addresses of the large number of bulletins forwarded each month.

The Opportunity Shop report presented by Mrs. F. Bowler stated the shop had remained open during the recent inclement weather and presented a cheque for $800 to the president.

Mrs. P. M. Till, convener of 'Holiday Treats' thanked those who assisted her in distributing 194 Christmas gifts. She also reported on Valentine favors and thanked the Girl Guides for their assistance.

In the absence of Mrs. C. Ashley, Mrs. Nelles reported the puppet committee busy as usual.

Mrs. F. Stokmans, convener of in-hospital volunteer services reported that 91 volunteers gave 494 hours of service in hospital during January and 1671 magazines were distributed.

It was noted that at the annual luncheon meeting Jan. 19, in Education Hall, Mrs. B. E. Burley, the retiring president was presented with the Canadian Hospital Association pin, which is given for outstanding service. Mrs. J. E. Nelles, the newly installed president received the president's pin.

Auxiliary members and guests enjoyed refreshments served by Mrs. M. Tretina, social convener and her committee.

Millar – Irwin

Rev. J. A. Payton officiated at the wedding ceremony in Grace United Church, Trenton, on Saturday, Feb. 13, 1971, when Carole Ann Irwin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry W. Irwin, Trenton, became the bride of Gary Clifford Millar, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Ray Millar of Trenton RR 2. Wedding music was rendered by Donald Burke who also accompanied the soloist Robert Noyes, uncle of the bridegroom.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a full length sheath styled wedding gown of crystal peau featuring a natural waistline caught with bow at front. The long full sleeves were enhanced with fitted cuffs trimmed with guipure lace. Matching lace also adorned the bodice with panels of lace extending down the skirt and around the hemline. A train of crystal peau extended from the waistline and a chapel length veil was caught to a guipure lace headdress adorned with seed pearls and aurora borealis sequins. The bride carried a white Bible crested with a white orchid and stephanotis.

MR. AND MRS. GARY CLIFFORD MILLAR

Matron of honor was Sue Murphy, senior bridesmaids, Pat Coleman and Donna Irwin, cousin of the bride and junior bridesmaids, Gayle Irwin, cousin of the bride and Carolyn Millar, sister of the bridegroom. All wore red velvet Egyptian styled gowns and carried white fur muffs and red roses with matching flowers in their hair. Flower girl was Cathy Couture, cousin of the bride who was dressed identically to the other attendants.

Doug Millar of Trenton RR2 attended his brother, while the ushers were A. Young, E. Thain, George Sandercock, cousin of the bridegroom and David Irwin, cousin of the bride. Ringbearer was Ricky Chaddick, cousin of the bridegroom who wore a red velvet blazer and white pants.

A reception was held in the Batawa Recreation Centre where the bride's mother greeted the guests wearing a sky blue shantung dress accented with lace, full length coat with black accessories and a mauve orchid corsage. She was assisted by the bridegroom's mother, who wore a hot pink crepe dress with full length sheer sleeves and beading on the bodice with black accessories and a cymbidium orchid corsage.

Leaving on the wedding trip to Florida U.S.A., the bride donned a green corduroy pantsuit with lime green crepe blouse, brown accessories and a corsage of yellow sweetheart roses.

Mr. and Mrs. Millar will reside in Napanee.

MR. AND MRS. WILFRED MUIR

Natives of Belleville Mark 50th Anniversary

Even with the extremely inclement weather last Saturday well over 100 guests attended an 'At Home' in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred T. Muir, 302 Foster Ave., Belleville on the occasion of their 50th wedding anniversary.

The couple's three children, Mrs. Raymond (Jean) Donovan of Kingston, Mrs. Frank (Dorothy) Macgillivray of Toronto and Wallace W. Muir of San Francisco, California were hosts for the event and welcomed guests at the door. A sister and brother of Mr. Muir, Miss Irene Muir and Robert J. Muir of Belleville also assisted. Present also for the celebration were five of their six children.

Mr. and Mrs. Muir who have lived practically all their lives in Belleville, were married Feb. 17, 1921 in the old St. Andrew's Church manse located on George Street. Mrs. Muir is the former Ethel Williams.

Numerous gifts and floral arrangements were received along with congratulatory telegrams from the various levels of government.

Tasty refreshments were served during the afternoon by the Women's Missionary Society of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church with Mrs. Joy Purdy pouring tea.

Valentine Tea Held by ACW

MARMORA — A friendly atmosphere, the sight of hearts and cupids scattered around the tea room and tables decorated in red and white made it all worthwhile for those brave souls who ventured out on Saturday afternoon to attend the Valentine tea and bake sale, sponsored by St. Paul's Church ACW.

Nearly everyone stopped by the bake table to purchase some of the fine food offered for sale by Mrs. Clayton Cronkright, Mrs. Ira Edwards and Mrs. James Clark. Several beautiful Valentine cakes were taken home.

The new rector of St. Paul's, Rev. John Lombard and Mrs. Lombard were on hand to meet some of their parishioners. The president, Mrs. William Lavender greeted guests as they arrived.

'Eldorado Gold Rush' Topic at Club Meeting

MADOC — Mrs. Kenneth Bateman gave an interesting and well-researched account of the Eldorado Gold Rush of 1866 at the February meeting of St. Peter's Women's Club of Madoc, which was held at the home of Mrs. Geraldine Hawkes.

Mrs. Bateman was introduced by Mrs. Hawkes, convener of the program, and was thanked by Mrs. Reta Pitts.

The president, Mrs. Daisy Bateman, opened the meeting by reading a poem. Mrs. Mary Trotter, who conducted the worship service, read an article on "Conservation". An article, entitled, "More Life," relating to the drug problem, concluded the worship portion of the meeting.

The president conducted a business discussion, at which time it was decided to hold a rummage sale on March 19. It was announced that the World Day of Prayer is to be held on March 1 at Sacred Heart Church. The March meeting is to be held on the first, at the home of Mrs. Catherine Weaver.

A sale of articles brought by the members was held, with E. Hawkes and Don Love as auctioneers. This added considerable merriment to the meeting as well as additional money to the funds.

Lunch was served by the hostess, assisted by Mrs. Dorothea Armstrong and Mrs. Sheila Matchett.

New Patterns In Bed-Care

OTTAWA (CP)—The availability of new knowledge and technology in the health sciences has caused a revolution in patterns of patient care, Beverly Du Gas today told a gathering of more than 300 nurses interested in research.

Miss Du Gas, a nursing consultant with the federal health department, said the revolution affects not only nursing and medicine but all the allied disciplines.

A study she did in 1969 showed the problem of informing nurses of new ideas and practices was serious. It was particularly acute with nurses employed in small hospitals where there was little contact with other hospitals and nurses.

GIRL GUIDE, BROWNIE NEWS

The annual fund raising project of the Belleville Girl Guide Division representing six districts will take place this year on Tuesday, Feb. 23 in St. Thomas Parish Hall, when a tea and home baking sale will be held.

Proceeds of the tea go to further the work of the Brownies, Guides and Rangers while the funds raised from the sale of baked goods goes to the particular district which each table represents.

There will also be a panorama of guiding where each district will sponsor a display of their badge work and crests. In the evening there will be 10-minute spot programs on stage dealing with the Guide program. Parents are especially invited at this time when leaders will be available to speak to them. Refreshments in the evening will be self-serve.

A great deal of thought and work by the various groups has gone into the preparation for this special annual event.

Dilly Bread Family Favorite

By MARY MOORE

QUESTION: I am one of your male admirers. Some friends from the West wrote to let us know they were coming East and added "Have some of that Dilly Bread ready." They were here three years ago when I made it and thought it the best yet—but I cannot find the recipe. Do you mind? —Hal K.

ANSWER: Not a bit. It is a favorite with all of my family connections too.

DILLY BREAD

- 1 pkge. granular yeast
- ¼ cup warm water
- 1 cup creamed cottage cheese, heated to luke-warm (see note)
- 2 tbsps. sugar
- 1 tbsp. butter
- 2 tsps. dill seed
- 1 tsp. salt
- ¼ tsp. soda
- 1 unbeaten egg
- 1 tbsp. minced onion
- 2¼ cups sifted all-purpose flour

NOTE: Be sure to heat the cottage cheese very slowly and just a little, because if you do not it will form into a tough rubbery ball.

Soften yeast in warm water 5 min. Combine softened yeast in mixing bowl with cottage cheese, sugar, butter, dill seed, salt, soda, onion and egg. Add flour gradually to form a stiff dough, beating well after each addition. Cover and let rise for 2-2½ hrs. at room temperature until dough is light and doubled in size. Stir down dough. Turn into well-greased casserole of 6-cup capacity or large loaf pan. Let rise until light and risen 2 or 3" higher than rim of baking dish. (Or put in refrigerator uncovered, for about 5 hrs.) Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. If loaf has come directly from refrigerator it will require 1 hr. baking. If it has risen at room temperature, it requires 50 min. Be sure not to underbake this loaf for a good crisp brown crust is one of its charms. If desired, brush with butter and sprinkle with salt after baking but while still hot.

Ann Landers

Privileges Abused; Principal Sets Rules

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am writing this in study hall, so please excuse the note book paper. Our principal made the following announcement over the inter-com and we are like dying. He said: "There has been too much making out in the hallways. There will be no more physical contact, including hand-holding. This means keep your hands off each other."

ANN LANDERS

Isn't that just gross? We all agree that kissing in the halls has to be stopped, but to ban hand-holding is plain creepy. When that announcement came over the speaker the kids got like spaced out.

I realize you are not of this century, Ann Landers, and you probably haven't been inside a high school for 40 years but you could help loads if you'd print this letter and say you are on our side. — PRESIDENT OF THE SOCIETY FOR PRESERVATION OF HAND-HOLDING.

DEAR PRESIDENT: This will probably come as a shock to you but I was actually born in this century and have spoken in hundreds of high schools during the last several years. (Colorado Springs and La Porte, Ind. just last month.)

I see nothing wrong with hand-holding, but obviously a few of you cats have been mushing it up in the corridors and the pricipal's edict is the result. Unfortunately, the majority invariably has to suffer for the sins of the few, so keep your pea-pickin' hands off each other during school time, Chicadees. Rules are rules.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am 15 years old and I'm like in jail. Here are my orders. I must come straight home after school. I cannot invite anyone to the house. I am not permitted to talk on the phone. I cannot go anywhere such as to a basket-ball game, a movie or even for a ride in a car with a guy. This agony goes on for one solid month. In other words, I am worse than grounded. I am cut off from civilization. What I did was not that bad. Don't you think it's rotten to subject a person to such inhuman treatment? Please rush your answer. My parents think you are groovy. — INCARCERATED IN AMARILLO.

DEAR IN: What did you do? Rush your answer and I'll rush mine.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: The other evening we had a dinner party. Three couples came from a cocktail reception — half smashed. The guys who were juiced up started to make bets on who was in the best physical condition and began to wrestle in the middle of the living room. I could see by the faces of the sober guests that they didn't like it much.

One guy took off his shirt and another guy wanted to take off his trousers but my husband stopped him. To make a long story short "Bronco" made a flying leap toward the other two, missed them and landed on the coffee table. Needless to say he broke the table to pieces. His wife thought this was hilarious. My husband and I just stood there dumbfounded. The only comment by "Broncho" was, "Gee, it must have been a cheap table."

I say the three drunks who were horsing around should buy us a new coffee table. Am I wrong seeing as how they were guests in our home? My husband thinks so. Please advise. — DAVENPORT, IOWA.

DEAR DAV: I say the three drunks owe you a new coffee table. And if you invite them again, I suggest you hold the party in a gymnasium.

Talkers Can Draw Out the Quiet Ones

By DORIS CLARK

Are you a person who feels uneasy with silence? When you sit in a room with four or five others and conversation lags, do you plunge into the gap with some fast talk about your own experiences?

Noble as your intentions are, don't tell yourself you have to hold the floor. Do what you can to draw out the quiet ones. There may be pearls of wisdom which only need uncovering.

Remember too, that the occasional silence in a group is friendly and restful, just as long as those present are comfortable about it.

Dear Doris: My complexion has a yellowish color. I have read where the color of skin is due to pigmentation.

Is there any surgery which would get rid of this problem? I understand there is a technique called skin-grafting which is used to correct blemishes. — Yellow.

Dear Yellow: All normal skin has some type of pigmentation. A person is dark or fair or in-between. If there is no skin pigmentation at all, the skin is completely colorless — the albino type.

Find out from your doctor whether the yellow tinge is an indication that all is not well, physically.

If he gives you a clean bill of health, and it is your natural skin color which is yellow or olive tone, enjoy it and use the cosmetics and dress shades which will blend with it. Try a rosy-toned foundation base a little darker than your skin. Ask a knowledgeable cosmetician at a drug counter for guidance in choosing the makeup shades which will bring out the best in your skin.

Skin-grafting is only used where there are very bad scars or pimples to be removed. You wouldn't want to replace a whole face. And couldn't.

Confidential to Uncertain: Billy likes you. He made himself late for work to take you home, didn't he? Jack seems to be more self-centred; may be concentrating on beating his drinking problem.

Sit tight, much as you would like to push things a little. If both Billy and Jack cool off, there's bound to be someone else warming up to you.

This is what takes the patience — and often calls for a mother's help, in offering easy hospitality to a girl's friends.

Dear Doris: My niece is being married late this summer. She has asked me to take the place of her mother who died a couple of years ago.

Do I enter the church just before the bride or do I just go in with my husband and sit with the rest of the relatives? — Auntie.

Dear Auntie: For this very special occasion, you ARE the mother (or "in loco parentis", as the preacher puts it), so you do what she would have done.

You enter the church just ahead of the bride, walk up the aisle on the arm of the usher and sit in the front pew. After her father has given the bride away, he joins you.

It is optional whether your husband follows you there or joins the other relatives. Ask the minister which he likes.

(Ask Doris for the information you need. If she doesn't know she'll find out from one of her consultants. Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for private reply.)

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Mother: "I wish we had a nursery school in this town. I think Linda needs regular companions and more interesting play to prepare her for kindergarten."

Mother: "You children are all doing so well with these cookies. Won't they be good when we have them for our afternoon snack? Tomorrow you will all be at Suzie's house where you'll finger paint."

If your town has a shortage of nursery schools, several mothers can start a playgroup where children can have organized games, crafts and stories. With this plan, each mother can devote certain days to being the mother-teacher and the children will get the benefits of nursery school.

DISTRICT WOMEN'S INSTITUTES

RYLSTONE WI

Mrs. Gerald Barnum, convener of "resolutions" was in charge of the program at the February meeting of the Rylstone WI which was held in the WI hall on February 3 with an attendance of nine members and one visitor. The topics which were featured in the program included the origin of the WI and highlights from the Institute handbook discussed by Mrs. Ernest Irwin. She explained how Mrs. Adelaide Hoodless of Stoney Creek was the originator of the Institute and how she, like one of the founders of the Rylstone WI, Mrs. Herbert Spencer, died at the early age of 52. She spoke of the aims of the Institute and urged all members to back the officers who were chosen to head the association each year.

A few pieces were played on the violin by Mrs. Alice Brunton who was accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Ernest Irwin. A reading was given by Margaret Osborne and Mrs. Paul McKeown rendered a piano solo. A contest on famous couples was conducted by Mrs. Percy Reid. Some valentine verses were also recited.

There was some discussion on the March meeting which will be preceded by a pot-luck dinner at the WI hall at noon on March 3. Each member was invited to bring a guest and asked to provide one item of food. Beverages will be supplied. Mrs. Austin Dunk will be in charge of the program. Mrs. Donald Kerr will demonstrate the making of fancy cushions and there will be a display of hobby work.

There was also some discussion about a card party to be held later in the year in aid of Campbellford Memorial Hospital. Details of the event will be decided at a later meeting.

Mrs. Paul McKeown was chosen to attend the conference in Guelph in April. A few members paid their fees for the new year and copies of the Home and Country magazine were distributed. Delicious refreshments were served by the hostesses Mrs. Ernest Rowe and Mrs. Alice Brunton at the close of the meeting.

MOUNTAIN VIEW WI

D. C. Currie, regional director from Energy Resources Management, Kingston showed slides on pollution and gave a running commentary on them at the February meeting of the Mountain View Women's Institute held at the home of Mrs. C. R. Barber, Huff's Island. After pictures were shown Mr. Currie answered questions from the audience. Earlier, he was introduced by Mrs. D. Farmer who was the convener of the program, the topic of which was health. Mrs. B. Summers presented Mr. Currie with a gift from the Institute.

Mrs. W. Nightingale and Mrs. Bob Barber read a two-part paper on pollution.

Mrs. W. Nightingale, the district director who was the co-hostess at the meeting gave a report on a meeting she had recently attended in Picton.

At the close of the meeting the hostess, assisted by the lunch committee consisting of Mrs. J. Sprague and Mrs. Ken Woodall served refreshments and a social time was enjoyed by all.

Dinah Queries Censors

NEW YORK (AP) — Dinah Shore, discussing with Johnny Carson life in televisionland, this week complained mildly that NBC censors had "bleeped"—erased—references by a guest on her daytime show to an expensive San Francisco restaurant and to a brand of French wine that sells for $15 a bottle.

"I guess they thought they were free plugs," said Dinah.

"But when I had quite a discussion with the author of The Sensuous Woman, they never touched a word. Bureau of standards, where were you when I needed you?"

It was an interesting question. Sometimes the viewer wonders if network censors bother to check the exchange on daytime game shows which often are deliberately risque, many times started or egged on by the host.

Actor Forrest Tucker, a guest contestant with his wife on It's Your Bet this week, has constantly indulged in locker room quips. At one point Thursday, he surfaced with such a clinical remark that there was a sudden embarrassed stillness in the studio audience and frozen expressions by both his wife and host Dick Gautier.

Senior Playoff Plot Thickens as Crescents Come on Strong

By MAURICE SWITZER
Sports Editor

The senior hockey playoff plot thickens.

Belleville Mo-Hawks looked like sure - fire bets for the OHA Senior A league's sixth and final playoff berth a week ago. But that was before Woodstock A's decided they might throw in the towel.

Although OHA secretary Bill Hanley says he has received no official notice from Woodstock to that effect, he admitted president Clarence Schmalz has been "working on" the case since a Woodstock official was quoted this week as saying his club was done for the year.

The situation stands thusly: Belleville holds sixth place with 32 points in 36 games. Owen Sound, after a surprising 7-4 win over Oakville Thursday, now have 30 points in 38 games.

Two of Belleville's remaining four games were to be re-scheduled Monday and Tuesday night affairs with Woodstock, who have won three of 36 games.

The other two were in Orillia tonight, with the Terriers repaying the visit 2:30 Sunday afternoon.

The Mo-Hawks have not taken a point from Orillia in 13 meetings over three seasons, which makes those two Woodstock games extremely important. OHA secretary Hanley told The Intelligencer Thursday that if Woodstock folded operations, the points "would normally" go to the opposing teams involved.

That would give the Mo-Hawks four gift points, and put them beyond the Crescents' reach.

Today, Hanley told Mo-Hawk coach Dave Jones an Association meeting would be called to settle the issue.

The easiest apparent solution would be for Owen Sound to lose its remaining games this weekend to Kingston and Galt.

But even that might not settle anything.

Owen Sound have protested an overtime loss to Woodstock last week on the grounds the A's used ineligible players. If they win that protest, they would have 32 points, same as Belleville.

That brings us back to these two postponed games with Woodstock, which the league ordered re-played this coming Monday and Tuesday.

"There are only two logical solutions," argues Mo-Hawk coach Jones. "Either they throw out all the Woodstock games, or they give us those points. We'd end up ahead in both cases."

The OHA logic remains to be seen.

Loss to Crescents Keeps Oakville Tied for Fourth

OAKVILLE (CP) — Owen Sound Crescents kept their playoff hopes alive in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A series by upsetting Oakville Oaks 7-4 Thursday night before more than 700 fans.

Leading the Crescents attack was player - coach Dave McComb with a pair of goals. Garrie Vaughn also scored twice.

Single goals went to Don Vipond, Steve Garvais and Paul Domm.

Goals for Oakville came from Chuck Kelly, Frank Hincks, Jack Price and Mike Corbett.

Owen Sound remains in seventh place, two points behind Belleville. They have to make sixth place to make the playoffs.

Oakville remains in a tie for fourth spot with Kingston Aces.

Moore, Hergott Battle for Lead

GALT (CP) — Right winger Grant Moore of Orillia Terriers and defenceman Ron Hergott of Galt Hornets move into the final weekend of the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A hockey schedule sharing the lead in the scoring race.

Moore leads in goals with 40. Hergott is tops in assists with 56. Each has 72 points but Moore has a slight edge — Orillia has three games left and Galt has two.

Galt centre Vance Millar is another strong contender with 71 points. Bruce Reier of Galt and Gary Milroy of Orillia each have 68.

Galt goalie Boat Hurley is the runaway leader of the netminding award with a 2.39 average in 36 starts.

Gord Gallagher of Owen Sound Crescents leads in penalty minutes with 119.

Trenton Branch 110's rink, defending the Royal Canadian Legion provincial curling title, swept to three straight wins in opening-day action at the CFB Trenton Curling Club Thursday. Skip Earl Jesse shows teammates Carl LaGroix, Wayne McCreadie, and Hec. McIntosh their scoreboard success. The Jesse rink, which went all the way to last year's Dominion final before bowing out, met Galt Branch 121 this morning, drawing a bye for the afternoon draw.

TRENTON — Determination to reach the Dominion finals for another shot at the Legion's Canadian curling title stoodout like an eight-ender yesterday as Earl Jesse's Branch 110 rink swept to three straight victories as the provincial command championship opened at CFB Trenton.

The defending Ontario champions polished off Branch 87 (Kirkland Lake) 11-4 in the morning, Branch 72 (Pembroke) 5-4 in the afternoon and humbled Branch 210 (Toronto) 12-5 to climax the day's play.

Host skip Jesse, who went all the way to the 1970 Dominion Legion final in British Columbia before losing out in a sudden-death playoff, now has a head start towards a berth in the March 15-19 Dominion bonspiel in Charlottetown.

The sharp-eyed shooter doesn't hide his disappointment at failing so close to his curling goal last year.

"I've got my sights set on the prize, and with everything equal, maybe '71 is our turn to win," the Belleville airman said after Thursday's first-day success.

The only other rink to emerge unscathed from the first-day's action in the nine-draw, four-day bonspiel was Branch 356, Sutton.

The Sutton rink, skipped by George Holborn, won two games and had a bye into today's play.

Other results: Kirland Lake Branch 87, two wins, loss; Toronto Branch 210, win, loss; London Branch 317, Dundas Branch 36, Galt Branch 121 and Copper Cliff Branch 224, win, two losses; Pembroke Branch 72, two losses.

Competitions today comprised two draws. This morning it was Pembroke vs Dundas, Galt vs Trenton, Sutton vs Kirkland Lake and London against Toronto. Copper Cliff drew a bye.

In the afternoon it was London vs Galt, Toronto against Kirkland Lake, Dundas met Copper Cliff and Pembroke met Sutton. Trenton drew a bye.

The host Trenton branch laid on a dinner and entertainment at the Quinte St. hall to give the nine rinks the night off.

Curling activity resumes at 9 a.m. Saturday morning.

First City Snow Races Sunday

Organizers of Belleville's first snowmobile races can't be accused of going at things in a small way.

Some $1,600 in prize money will be available in four classes of stock, five of modified, and a powderpuff and junior racing events at the Fairgrounds Sunday afternoon.

Registration will close at at 12.30, and the afternoon's program will get underway with a "novelty" race at 1:30, featuring representatives of city council, CJBQ Radio's Peter "Pan" Thompson, and The Intelligencer's White Knight.

The sponsoring Quinte Exhibition Board has been working at the Fairgrounds site all week, preparing the banked track for the races, first ever held in the city.

Adult admissions will be $1.50, with elementary and secondary school students eligible for 50-cent admission.

Entries in A, B, C, or D Stock, A, B, C, D, or E Modified, women's "powderpuff", or the under-16 junior events should report at the Fairgrounds Catherine St. gate for registration before 12.30.

Winners of the stock and modified races receive a trophy and $60, with prizes of $45, $30, and $15 going to the next three finishers.

The three first across the line in powderpuff and junior events each receive trophies, as well as prize money.

First at Line

Alderman Gerald Joyce and Quinte Exhibition Board president Jack Bush sneak some mid-week practice in preparation for Sunday's snowmobile racing program at Belleville's Fairgrounds. The Belleville Agricultural Society project is offering $1,600 in prize money in 11 classes of racing.

Mary Not Contrary Racer

While the men are still scrambling for the over-all title in their section of the Ontario Snowmobile Racing Federation, Belleville's Mary O'Neill holds a virtual lock on the women's title.

A total of five wins and one second-place finish vaulted the local racer past fellow Arctic Cat rider Barb Eaton of Elmwood, Ont., giving her a lead of almost 450 points over the runner-up.

Mary has managed to accumulate 2,433.8 points for the season, while Mrs. Eaton has managed a total of 2,093.7 points.

The Bosch Invitational races at Mosport this weekend will complete the OSRF racing circuit season.

Fairways Get Playoff Practice In Trenton Tonight

The Trenton Golden Hawks could put together their longest, in fact their only winning streak of the season, when they meet the Belleville Fairways tonight in the final regular season game of the Eastern Ontario Junior B season.

Trenton, despite playing short - handed, upset the Fairways 5-2 last week for their second victory in 29 games. The Golden Hawks, who are rumored to be contemplating a drop to Junior C level next season, will be looking to repeat their success of last week when the teams meet for the 9 p.m. encounter at the Trenton Community Gardens.

The Fairways, on the other hand will be using the contest as a tune-up for their upcoming semi - finals series with the pennant - winning Peterborough Lions, who are currently representing Ontario at the Canada Winter Games.

Belleville looked impressive in their last outing, a 9-1 decision over the Cobourg Cougars, and coach Floyd Crawford could use the game to do some experimenting.

The Belleville mentor tried a brief experiment in the Cobourg contest, moving rearguard Kevin Dockrill to left wing for a shift. "There was no immediate reason for the move", explained Crawford after the game. "But it's nice to know what he can do there, just in case."

The play of Dockrill on the Fairway blueline would have to be one of the brightest spots in the Belleville season, with the sophomore defenceman showing an amazing improvement over his rookie year.

Slated to return to action is right winger Brian O'Coin who was forced to miss the Cobourg game, sitting out a one-game suspension assessed in the loss to Trenton. Also expected to be on hand is commuting defenceman Rick Holmes, working in the Morrisburg area but expected to be on hand for weekend games.

Belleville open their playoff series with the Lions Saturday, February 27 in Peterborough.

Not Even $125,000 Fire Can Dampen Games' Enthusiasm

SASKATOON (CP) — Trouble-plagued Blackstrap Mountain overcame another hurdle Thursday at the Canada Winter Games.

A $125,000 fire which destroyed snow-making equipment, a concession booth and other apparatus almost dealt a death blow to skiing competition. The fire broke out Thursday night after the athletes had left the site. Officials said cool weather, forecast to continue into the weekend, means snow making won't be necessary.

Unusually mild weather had threatened to disrupt skiing events at the man-made mountain, 25 miles south of here. However, cooler weather and some snow spread into the area Tuesday night and Blackstrap was saved as a ski area.

In Thursday's action, Ontario took the 50-kilometre cross-country event when Malcolm Hunter of Ottawa was first across the line.

Rolf Petersen of Prince George, B.C., was second for the silver medal and David Rees of North Bay, Ont., took the bronze.

Northwest Territories skiers, expected to be the big guns in the event, took five of the next six positions

After Thursday's activity, Ontario led the medal parade with 28 gold followed by British Columbia with 18 and Manitoba with seven.

Today, the Firth twins, Shirley and Sharon, of Inuvik, N.W.T., are expected to pick up gold and silver medals in cross-country.

Gold medals also will be handed out today in gymnastics with Qubec considered the powerhouse of the competition.

Gymnastic medals were awarded Thursday night for the women's team aggregate with Ontario first, Quebec second and British Columbia third.

Tiny Midori Fajiwara, 12, of Toronto was taken to hospital with a neck injury after falling to the floor while doing a difficult cartwheel on the balance beam. Her injury was not considered serious, but she will be unable to compete in the final events today.

Another hospital case was Jeff Reid, 16, a Winnipeg high-school student in the cross-country skiing. He completed only 10 kilometres of the 15-kilometre course before he passed out and was taken to hospital. He was later released.

In hockey competition, Ontario, Quebec and Nova Scotia emerged undefeated with 3-0 won-loss records.

Ontario trimmed a weak Yukon club 16-2, outshooting them 71-13. Quebec beat Prince Edward Island 6-2 in a penalty-filled game in which the Islanders showed that they can fight but not score.

Nova Scotia upset British Columbia 4-2 thanks to good goaltending by George Mason and handy goalposts which the West Coast team hit five times

In other games, Alberta knocked off Manitoba 7-5, Newfoundland beat New Brunswick 6-3 and hometown favorite Saskatchewan beat Northwest Territories 10-3 after trailing 1-3 at the end of the first period.

Games Hockey Anything But Dull

SASKATOON (CP) — Hockey at the Canada Winter Games may not be the highest calibre in the world, but it's never dull.

Consider these oddities in Thursday's action:

—Manitoba pulled its goalie four times while losing to Alberta 7-5.

—A Northwest Territories player got two minor penalties in less than a minute.

—Newfoundland goalie Doug Atkinson received three minor penalties.

—The first penalty shot of the Games went to Newfoundland's Randy Pearcey and he missed it, shooting into the goalie's pads.

—Ontario, in the course of shellacking the Yukon 16-2, fired 71 shots on goal.

—British Columbia hit the goal post five times while losing 4-2 to Nova Scotia

—Four game misconducts were handed out as Prince Edward Island lost to Quebec 6-2.

After three days of competition before good crowds in two arenas, Ontario leads the A section with a 3-0 won-loss record while Quebec and surprising Nova Scotia are 3-0 in the B division.

In other Thursday action, Saskatchewan overcame an early deficit and trounced Northwest Territories 10-3, and Newfoundland edged New Brunswick 6-3.

The 12 teams compete in two sections with the top two teams in each entering the semi-finals. The winners of each semi-final play for the gold medal.

Manitoba, trailing Alberta 4-0, pulled its goalie in the first period, leaving the net empty. However, neither team scored. Manitoba repeated the tactics three other times, scoring twice with the man advantage, but giving up one empty-net goal.

Dennis Nuylis of Yellowknife, N.W.T., took a penalty at 16:02 of the second period and Saskatchewan scored within 38 seconds. He returned to the ice for only 17 seconds and received another minor.

Atkinson, the Newfoundland goalie, got three minors, one in the second period and two in the third. His first came for slashing, the others when he slid out for the puck and became embroiled in roughing incidents.

The Yukon team used two goalies in their mismatch. The first, Tim McDonald, faced 46 shots His replacement, Tom Young, stopped 21 of 25 shots.

The line of Rick Nobes, Gord Rodine and Jim Wasson picked up 14 points in Ontario's runaway over the Yukon. Nobes got two goals and three assists, Rodine a goal and four assists and Wasson three goals and one assist.

Ninety-two penalties were assessed in the Quebec-P.E.I. game marked by a couple of good brawls. Game misconducts went to Marcel Charrette and Alain Perron of Quebec and Jim Andrew and Bill MacDonald of P.E.I.

Randy Crowell of Nova Scotia scored the winning goal against B.C., his third winning goal in as many games.

Skier Runs Out of Steam

SASKATOON (CP) — The collapse of a youngster from Manitoba was the only jarring note during the first day of cross-country ski competition at the Canada Winter Games Thursday night. Ontario took two of the top three positions.

Jeff Reid, 16, of Winnipeg, who had competed only on 10-kilometre courses before the 15-kilometre event Thursday, passed out when he pushed himself too hard early in the gruelling race. He made a quick recovery, however, and was released fro mhospital.

The gold medal went to top-seeded Malcolm Hunter of Ottawa who finished in 52 minutes 7.3 seconds, an average of about 10 miles an hour over the twisting five-kilometre course.

Rolfe Petersen of Prince George, B.C., took the silver in 53:44.0 and David Rees of North Bay, Ont., the bronze in 54:38.3.

"I was really surprised by the course," said Hunter. "There were more hills than I expected in this kind of country but they were short hills and no problem."

Skiers from the Northwest Territories filled five of the first 10 positions. David Cook, the best, was fourth in 54:41.4.

The only other competition Thursday was the first of five rounds in the men's and women's dual slalom which involves two skiers on side-by-side courses at the same time. The final is Sunday, last day of the Games.

Unsigned Reds Present Challenge

This is the year, says Sparky Anderson: "We'll find out if I can really manage."

Anderson guided Cincinnati Reds to the National League title last season as a freshman major league manager in baseball.

Anderson finds the 1971 picture a bit different today as he starts his sophomore season with the Reds at their spring training camp at Tampa, Fla.

For one thing, the Reds have only 17 of 37 roster players under contract. Catcher Johnny Bench, the league's most valuable player for 1970, is one of those still unsigned. Others include pitchers Jim Merritt and Wayne Simpson.

Another problem Anderson faces is finding a replacement for Bobby Tolan, regular centre fielder and the NL's leading base stealer last season. Tolan ruptured an Achilles tendon while playing basketball during the off-season and is out at least until June.

Surveying the tuning-up job the Reds need, it's hardly any wonder Anderson commented: "I guess we'll find out now if I can really manage."

Baltimore Orioles, the American League champions who beat Cincinnati in the World Series, opened their camp at Miami Thursday with veteran pitchers Dave McNally and Mike Cuellar still unsigned.

Paul Blair, the Orioles centre fielder, reported a week early to start a switch-hitting experiment. He hits right-handed, but wants to be able to swing from the other side of the plate, too.

Veteran southpaw Bob Veale was missing as Pittsburgh Pirates opened camp at Bradenton, Fla., but manager Danny Murtaugh said the star pitcher was expected by the weekend.

Three pitchers, Jim Colborn, Joe Decker and Larry Gura signed with Chicago Cubs.

Sport Briefs

DETROIT (AP) — Detroit Tigers announced Thursday the loss for an indefinite period of veteran lefthander John Hiller who suffered a heart attack Jan. 11 at his home in Duluth, Minn. The club said it was notified of Hillier's illness Monday but had not received confirmation of the Duluth diagnosis until Thursday. Hillier, a native of Toronto, is no longer in hospital, but he will be placed on the disabled list at the start of the season said Tiger general manager Jim Campbell.

* * *

BOSTON (AP) — Boston Patriots are no more. The National Football League club now is the Bay State Patriots. The board of directors voted the name change Thursday, noting that the team no longer will play home games in Boston. A 60,000-seat stadium under construction in Foxboro, about 20 miles south of Boston, is due to be ready for the Patriots' pre-season games next August.

* * *

CHICAGO (AP) — Chicago Cubs' young pitching trio of Jim Colborn, Joe Decker and Larry Gura signed 1971 contracts Thursday to bring the number of players in the fold to 33. Three key players remain unsigned — Fergie Jenkins, Billy Williams and lefty Ken Holtzman. Williams and Jenkins a native of Chatham, Ont., are shooting for the $100,000 range in salaries.

KINGFIELD, Me. (AP) — Bernard Russi of Switzerland and World Cup leader Anne-Marie Proell of Austria won the Arlberg Kandahar men's and women's downhill skiing events at Sugarloaf Mountain Thursday. Russi, 23, was timed in 1:31.41 over the 8,220-foot men's course. Henri Duvillard of France was second with a time of 1:31.95, followed by Stefano Anzi of Italy in 1:31.98. Duvillard picked up 16 World Cup points for his runner-up finish and moved into second place in the over-all standings with 121 points, trailing team-mate Patrick Russel, who has 125. Miss Proell, 18, increased her lead in the women's standings with her first downhill victory of the season. She has 156 points, with Michele Jacot of France, the defending Cup champion, second with 133.

QUEBEC (CP) — The 12th annual Quebec international peewee hockey tournament enters its second-lastday today with 12 teams, seven from Ontario, in the running for the grand championship and the divisional titles. The Class A and B finals set for today are all-Ontario affairs pitting Oshawa against Sault Ste. Marie and Richmond Hill against Whitby respectively. Two Toronto teams, Shopsys and Don Valley, Quebec Citadelles and Boston were still in contention for the class AA crown after Thursday's action. Donnacona, Villeneuve and Buckingham, all from Quebec province, reached the division C semi-finals along with Thornhill, Ont. A team from the Canadian Forces base at Baden-Soellingen, West Germany, was eliminated Thursday. There were 102 teams in this year's tournament.

Drug Warning Up

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball embarked on a previously-uncharted course for professional sport Thursday with the launching of a long-term program to combat drug abuse.

Commissioner Bowie Kuhn announced that a series of spring-training seminars, to be attended by key personnel of the 24 major-league clubs and representatives of the minor leagues, will be held as the start of "an ongoing, day-by-day involvement" by the baseball establishment.

The program will emphasize education and prevention, the commissioner said, but also will involve disciplinary procedures to assure its success.

Gray Claims Welter Crown

MONTREAL (CP) — Clyde Gray, a strapping 24-year-old from Toronto, slugged his way to the Canadian welterweight boxing title Thursday night, winning a 12-round split decision over world-ranked Donato Paduano.

His opponent, ranked No. 10 by the World Boxing Association, was ineffective throughout most of the bout in attempts to use the speed and counter-punching ability he is noted for.

The win left Gray in position to assume Paduano's role of possible contender for the world welterweight crown.

The Negro fighter now has 28 wins and one defeat. He dropped a 10-round decision to former world lightweight champion Eddie Perkins of Chicago last April.

Paduano, a 22-year-old Italian-Canadian from Montreal, came into the fight with a 22-1 record.

He was trying to make a comeback from his first professional defeat last December at the hands of world lightweight champion Ken Buchanan of Scotland at Madison Square Garden in New York City.

The Montrealer also had plans to meet either world champion Billy Backus of Syracuse, N.Y., or the No. 1 contender and former title-holder, Jose Napoles of Mexico, sometime this year.

Gray swarmed over Paduano in every round, jabbing effectively and connecting with uppercuts during close-in slugging.

"I was expecting him to box with me but I couldn't score when he kept in close," Paduano said in the dressing room. "He threw so many punches I couldn't counter."

Both Paduano and most of the crowd of 6,219 at the 18,000-seat Forum seemed stunned at times at Gray's perseverance and the quickness of his attack.

The former champion was forced to cover up through most of the match and was unable to make use of his skills as a counter- and combination-puncher.

It was not until the final three rounds that Paduano was able to connect with a series of point-scoring flurries and even then he met stiff opposition.

Gray, mobbed in the ring by supporters after the final bell, said the fight went as he had planned it.

"I stayed on top of him and kept on bobbing and weaving."

Paduano had not hurt him but was "a lot tougher than I figured."

Gray was warned several times on low blows and lost two points in the sixth for the infractions.

The deduction, however, did not alter the final decision of the three judges—who scored the fight 56-53, 55-53 and 56-56 respectively on a five-point round system.

Rocket Rookie Follows Orders

San Diego Rockets twice sent rookie guard Cal Murphy in to rally the team against New York Knicks, but when Murphy had a chance to tie the National Basketball Association game in the last minute, his coach's instructions prevented it.

The Knicks escaped with a 116-115 victory. In the only other game, Los Angeles Lakers whipped Portland Trail Blazers 136-114.

Larry Siegfried, acting Rocket coach after Alex Hannum was ejected on technical fouls, called time out and set up the play.

"I called the last play," said Siegfried. "It was supposed to be a drive to the bucket by Stu Lantz. We knew they'd converge on E," he said, referring to Elvin

Big John Trapp passed the ball in to Murphy, who wheeled and drove to the right. He was 20 feet from the basket and clear enough for a shot. More than 7,800 fans pleaded with him to drive or shoot. Three seconds remained.

Murphy flipped the ball to Hayes on the left side, 20 feet out, and as Elvin whirled, the buzzer sounded. The game was over.

Howe Can't Break Habit Of Those 20-goal Seasons

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Gordie Howe has done it again. For the 22nd consecutive National Hockey League season, he has scored 20 goals or more.

Thursday night, his 20th goal this season was the winner as Detroit Red Wings beat Minnesota North Stars 5-3.

Howe's goal was the 850th of his NHL career. He has been in the league for 25 seasons. The big total counts playoffs. In regular-season play, he has 783.

In the only other game Thursday, Buffalo Sabres fought to a 6-6 tie with Pittsburgh Penguins.

Detroit's victory pulled them out of the East Division cellar. They now are one point ahead of the idle Vancouver Canucks and one behind the Sabres.

The Red Wings were leading 3-2 when Howe got his 20th goal late in the second, but it proved the winner after Minnesota's Bobby Rousseau scored midway through the third.

North Stars' defenceman Ted Harris was in the penalty box when Howe put the puck behind goalie Cesare Maniago.

Rookie Jude Drouin's 13th season goal gave Minnesota an early lead but Alex Delvecchio scored to make it 1-1 going into the second period.

Gord Labossiere scored to put the North Stars back in front before Detroit rallied with goals by Bill Collins, Nick Libett and Howe.

Centre Red Berenson got an insurance goal for the Wings before Rousseau beat goalie Roy Edwards for the final score of the game before 12,374 Detroit fans.

Pittsburgh jumped to a 3-0 lead in the first period at Buffalo before the Sabres came back with five goals in the second 20 minutes to go ahead 5-4.

The Penguins also staged a rally and went ahead 6-5 in the final period before Don Marshall got his second goal of the night to gain the tie for Buffalo.

Penguins' rookie Rod Zaine also scored twice and his second goal at 9:41 of the third period appeared to be the winner before Marshall's tally at 10:13.

The Penguins were up against a tough goaltender in Roger Crozier who stopped 36 shots. Pittsburgh netminder Les Binkley made only 22 saves.

Eddie Shack, with his 17th of the season, and Ron Anderson, Gerry Meehan and Dick Duff got the other Sabres scores before a crowd of 9,969.

Keith McCreary, Dun McCallum, Jean Pronovost and Dean Prentice were the other Pittsburgh scorers.

Boston Bruins visit California Golden Seals and Philadelphia Flyers at Vancouver in tonight's action.

GORDIE HOWE

What Took So Long?

DETROIT (AP) — Dec. 4, 1968 when Gordie Howe scored the 700th regular season goal of his National Hockey League career, someone phoned his father in Saskatchewan and asked how he felt about his son's great achievement.

"What took him so long," came the terse response.

Thursday night when Howe scored his 850th goal, he looked up at a reporter and said straightfaced: "As my father said, What took me so long."

The milestone goal proved to be the winner as the Detroit Red Wings climbed from the East Division cellar with a 5-3 victory over the Minnesota North Stars.

"I like it because it was a winner," Howe said of the goal, which made him at least a 20-goal scorer for the 22nd consecutive season. It was a power-play goal, his 209th, and it was his 783rd regular-season tally. He has 67 goals in playoff competition.

Howe, who will be 43 March 31, said he didn't know he had scored his 850th until he went to the bench.

Conceives AND Receives

NEW YORK (CP) — The man who conceived the Lester Patrick Awards for outstanding contributions to hockey has himself been picked to receive the annual award.

William M. (Bill) Jennings, New York City lawyer and sports executive, will be honored Tuesday, March 9, at the sixth annual Lester Patrick Award dinner here.

The selection was made by a committee that included Clarence Campbell, president of the National Hockey League; Philadelphia Flyers Chairman Edward M. Snider; CBS-TV Vice-President Bill MacPhail; former referee Bill Chadwick; Associated Press writer Hal Bock and Sport magazine editor Al Silverman.

Jennings, president of New York Rangers since 1962 and former chairman of the NHL board of governors, has been credited as the individual most responsible for the dramatic expansion of the National Hockey League to 14 teams from six.

The awards are made in memory of the long-time general manager and coach of New York Rangers.

Hawks Not Hairy

CHICAGO (AP) — Boston Bruins, runaway leaders of the National Hockey League's East Division, are about the hairiest group of athletes under one roof. Chicago Black Hawks, their opposite numbers in the West, favor the clean-cut approach.

"Long hair, like some are wearing it, and moustaches hurt the image in the eyes of a lot of people, especially kids," says Hawk right winger Cliff Koroll, a 24-year-old bachelor in his second year with the club.

"I really don't see how it can be comfortable. And besides, it's scary. You have to worry a little when you go skating into a corner with some of the guys you meet in the league now."

Coach Billy Reay has an understanding with his players.

Reay makes it plain that he dislikes long tresses.

"We have to keep our hair cut and that's it," says Dennis Hull.

"I don't think there is a single guy on this team who even lets his hair grow in the off-season. That's just the way things are around here."

CAHA on Tour-banning Binge

TORONTO (CP) — A group of Japanese-Canadian hockey players has been advised that it cannot participate in a tournament in Japan because of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association's ban of international competition, a spokesman for the team said Thursday.

Gene Hamada of Toronto, who is organizing the tour, said the players will leave for Japan Sunday as scheduled but will not be permitted to play against teams affiliated with the Japanese national association. He said they have arranged games against independent clubs instead.

The players, all from the Metropolitan Toronto area, have no affiliation with the CAHA and are not subject to suspension. A team of eight-year-olds from the Don Valley Hockey Association was suspended Wednesday for refusing to abandon plans to tour Finland next month despite the CAHA ban.

The ban was imposed early last year when Canada withdrew from the world hockey tournament after a dispute over the eligibility of professional players.

Hamada said he was told by Japanese authorities that teams under their jurisdiction would face disciplinary action if they played against a Canadian club.

Meanwhile John Holden, co-chairman of the Don Valley association, said he still hopes to iron out the problems of the eight-year-olds' team with the Metropolitan Toronto Hockey League, a CAHA affiliate.

He said it might still be possible to reschedule the tour until after the team had completed its MTHL playoff commitments.

But Bob Stride, assistant business manager of the MTHL, said the playoff problem was not the only reason for the suspension.

Apart from violating the CAHA ban, he said, the team should have advised the MTHL of its plans in time for submission to the CAHA's annual meeting last summer for a ruling.

The MTHL official emphasized that players on the other six teams in the Don Valley association will not be affected by the suspension, although they will have to play for teams outside the association next year if they wish to remain within the organized hockey structure.

Which Day
Is Best?

☐ MONDAY ☐ THURSDAY
☐ TUESDAY ☐ FRIDAY
☐ WEDNES. ☐ SATURDAY

Advertisers frequently ask this question. Fortunately, there is no best day to advertise. Each day new wants arise, bringing new readers as old ones satisfy their wants. We recommend that you start your ad tomorrow and cancel it when you get results. After many years of experience with millions of want ads, we know tomorrow is the best day to start your ad and every day is the best day to advertise in The Intelligencer want ad leader.

Veterans Pension Appeal Body Approved by Vote in House

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons passed a bill Thursday setting up an appeal board for veterans pensions applicants after defeating a New Democrat attempt to raise the ceiling on allowances for exceptionally incapacitated veterans.

Along with establishing a pension review board—in effect, a court of appeal against decisions of the veterans affairs department—the bill would make Hong Kong veterans eligible for a 50-per-cent pension if they have a disability and give some 100-per-cent disability pensioners a special allowance up to $2,400.

Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre) offered a motion to return the bill to the veterans affairs committee to reconsider the incapacity allowance.

Mr. Knowles said the ceiling should be $3,500, as originally recommended by the committee.

The motion was defeated 97 to 68 with New Democrats, Conservatives and Creditistes lining up against the Liberals.

Standing in the 264-seat Commons: Liberal 152, Conservative 72, NDP 23, Creditiste 13, Independent 1, vacant 3.

Today, the House turns to the government's clean air bill, which would provide fines up to $200,000 for industries convicted of air pollution.

Last December, the government announced a 10-per-cent increase in veterans pensions and a 15-per-cent rise in veterans allowances effective April 1.

These increases, with benefits in the new bill, would give a married veteran with 100-per-cent disability an annual income of $4,464, the government calculates. That is $408 more than previous pensions and allowances would provide.

The bill must pass the Senate before being enacted.

The Commons also passed an amendment offered by Veterans Affairs Minister Jean-Eudes Dube extending the 50-per-cent pension to disabled veterans who served at least a year as a Japanese prisoner of war.

Mr. Dube said the changes were "important new benefits entirely appropriate in view of the experiences suffered by the veterans of Hong Kong and of other Far Eastern operations."

Mr. Knowles called the $2,400 ceiling on the exceptional incapacity allowance an inadequacy that should be reconsidered by the House committee.

Ross Whicher (L—Bruce) opposed Mr. Knowles, saying $2,400 was a "fair and realistic figure."

A larger benefit would require larger taxes that would be levied on other pensioners.

The exceptional incapacity allowance could go to such people as paraplegics and quadraplegics.

John Gilbert (NDP—Toronto Broadview) attacked the government's "inattention and callousness" toward pensioners.

Charles H. Thomas (PC—Moncton) referred to veterans organization estimates that the extra cost of raising the ceiling to $3,500 from $2,400 would only be about $500,000 yearly.

Jack Cullen (L—Sarnia-Lambton) put the figure at about $750,000. He said MPs should accept the minister's decision on the issue.

Marcel Lambert (PC—Edmonton West) urged the government to investigate the medical effects of detention camps on former prisoners of war.

He said he had found a "disquieting" deterioration in the health of former prisoners in recent years.

"Nobody seems to want to care to look at this."

Mr. Lambert was taken prisoner in the 1942 raid on Dieppe.

He also recommended removing the one-year residence requirement for pension applicants.

Many veterans were living abroad and could not afford to move to Canada for a year to receive their pensions.

On the other hand, allied veterans now living in Canada should also be eligible for Canadian pensions. "They were veterans too."

Henri Latulipe (Creditiste—Compton) called Mr. Knowles's motion logical. Veterans had waited a long time for increases and the extra was necessary to overcome living costs.

Child Gets $69,000 For Doctor's Error

NORTH BAY (CP) — The Ontario Supreme Court Thursday awarded $69,000 to six-year-old Pierre Villeneuve whose right hand had to be amputated following a hernia operation here.

The court's 37-page judgment awarded the damages against Dr. W. Frank Armstrong who administered the anesthetic during the operation at St. Joseph's Hospital in May, 1968.

Shortly afterwards the boy's right arm became mottled where the anesthetic injection had been made. He was taken to the Hospital for Sick Children in Toronto where his hand was amputated July 5, 1968.

It was later found that Dr. Armstrong had administered sodium pentothal into an artery and not a vein.

Actions against the other doctors involved in the suit and St. Joseph's Hospital itself were dismissed.

The boy's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Rheo Paul Villeneuve, are to receive $7,369 of the award for expenses incurred during post-operative treatment for their child.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Old People Need Love and Warmth

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I am writing in regard to Mrs. B's letter about putting her mother away in a mental institution for 21 years! The said part of her letter was in quoting her mother — "Don't feel bad about putting me away here." It made me weep. That poor woman knew she had just been put away but she told her daughter it was all right and she still loved her.

Our mothers loved and cared for us when we were helpless as babies — and think of all the years it took to raise us. They made many sacrifices. Don't we owe it to them to care for them when they are helpless in old age? Don't we owe them love and tenderness? Shouldn't we make every sacrifice to keep them with us in our home?

Nursing homes are not the answer. Sure, they are the easy way out. But how can one expect warmth and love in a nursing home? And that's what old people need. They need to be wanted.

If a person has the money to pay for a nursing home arrangement for a parent, why not use it instead to pay some one to take care of the patient at home? Either in their home or yours?

I beg of your readers — make every effort to keep your mother or father at home. Their happiness and peace of mind will more than repay you.

I am speaking of those old people with hardening of the arteries that make them what is called "senile— the ugliest word in the dictionary. They do respond to love. I know. I kept my mother in my home for many years before she died. — Mrs. Mc.

• • •

Comment: Of course, many will rightly say, "All well and good." We agree that an elderly parent who is manageable should be kept in her or his home or ours. But how about those with that "ugly" name called senile?

Suppose they are completely unmanageable? Suppose they are disrupting the lives of their own children and those of their grandchildren? Suppose children allow guilt feelings to come between them and the sensible and kind thing to do for all concerned?

As I keep saying, in each case it's a purely personal problem. Most children want to do the best they can for aged parents. But the answer is not always easy. In fact, it is always difficult.

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I am considering using silicone injections to increase the size of my breasts. Do you recommend this procedure? — Mrs. D.

Comment: Not knowing all the circumstances, I can't say yes or no. Nevertheless, I think this information will help you make up your own mind: the U.S. Federal Food and Drug Administration does not sanction the use of silicone injections for breast enlargement.

Not only have many of the results been ineffectual, but there is a question of possible delayed reactions years later. I'm sure that any well-qualified plastic surgeon is aware of these restrictions on the use of silicone.

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: My daughter is 2 years old. She was born with an umbilical (belly button) hernia. We've taped it for months but it hasn't closed. Our doctor says she needs an operation because it is so large. Isn't it dangerous at her age? — Mrs. F.

Comment: What might be more dangerous is waiting too long, and getting an incarceration of the hernia (intestines caught in it and strangled). If indicated, the operation is usually performed under general anesthesia. Ordinarily, there are no complications.

Sydney J. Harris Says

Child Needs Open Mind

As I remarked in a column a few months ago, most parents of teenagers and collegians are disgruntled because their children seem to repudiate the parents' value-system — and this is what parents are proudest of passing on to their children.

But, to me, the only value-system worth passing on is one which allows the children to maintain an open mind until they are old enough to make independent judgments.

I am not speaking of such basics as training a child not to lie or cheat or steal. Most parents do not complain about these things; they feel rejected because the children follow a different ethical or social or political path, and views the priorities of life from a different angle.

But the values that are inherited without thinking are rarely of much deep or permanent use. Every church knows that it is the converts who are the most informed, persuasive and balanced members of the congregation, for they alone have taken the trouble to investigate and understand their new persuasion.

Beyond the basics, all that a parent has a right to do with a child's mind is to instill a sense of fairness, to encourage curiosity, to keep as many options open as possible.

When my own younger children wanted to go out and ring doorbells for Senator Eugene McCarthy in 1968, I refused to let them, and carefully explained why. I told them they had no right to their "opinion" because it was formed by what they heard at home; and if they lived in a household that supported Governor Wallace, they would have wanted to ring doorbells for him.

Both liberals and conservatives make the mistake of indoctrinating their children with their own views, and caricaturizing the views of their opponents; so the children grow up either as doctrinaire as their parents, or they rebel and swing to the other extreme. Both reactions are unhealthy reflexes, and not the mark of an independent personality.

Of course, then they grow up, I would like my children to share my broader value-system; but I can do this only by warning them not to accept any doctrine simply because the people they know and like happen to believe in it. I want them to investigate all the alternatives, and if they settle for mine, it will be because our minds coincide, not because they have been coaxed or coerced into my corner.

Neither the youngsters who conform out of passivity nor those who rebel out of resentment are going to make intelligent citizens; the former will perpetuate the mistakes of their parents, and the latter will make the opposite mistakes. This is why real progress is so slow.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For February 20

Your birthday today: This can be a big year for you if you are able to see through your own ego. Tradition, resources created long ago tend to favor your enterprises. Look first for a goal, set a direction, then push.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): You have a lot of cathing up of odds and ends, chores to do. Household repairs, rearrangements are favored.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Conferences come naturally. You can roundtable almost any subject, get a different view from everybody in your group.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): It's not so much what you say and how logical the content, it's more how you say it. Be open and giving of your generous nature.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Make the rounds of people you care about; find out how they are faring and what you can do to make their lives happier.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Explore reasonable possibilities for social activity. Give yourself a complete rest from work or business.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Get out your mementos. Revisit old friends and long neglected relatives.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Now you have a day of fairly open opportunity in all directions. Do what you please, to the limit of your budget.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Friends, family, stir things up so you have limited space for reflection, unless you invent an escape. Profitable moves can be made.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Take on all you think you can handle this morning, put in a full day at it. You attract amicable attention.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Endeavors made long ago bear fruit, according to what you do now and what you did then. Some of your moves exceed your budget.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Getting people together requires manoeuvering. Many issues can be worked out in face-to-face dealings.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Your personal touch and charm turn all the wheels today. Let everybody help that will, and forgive those who won't.

Tweed

TWEED — Mrs. Arthur Palmater, who was a patient in the Kingston General Hospital where she underwent surgery, returned to her Tweed home, recently and is reported much improved in health.

Mrs. Elvina Woodcock, of Mountain Grove, celebrated her 81st birthday recently. She was the recipient of many lovely gifts and cards. She resides with her daughter, Mrs. Ellen Cox.

Mrs. Jack Thorpe, of the Tweed Bol-O-Way spent some time in Chatham recently where she attended the funeral of her mother Mrs. McClellan in that city.

Recently Constable Herrington, of the Napanee Detachment of the OPP gave a safety talk to the pupils of the Cloyne (on Highway No. 41) school, which was greatly appreciated by both the teachers and pupils.

He's Hopeful But---

Greene Can't Guarantee Success of Private Bid for Home Oil

OTTAWA (CP) — Energy Minister J. J. Greene told Parliament repeatedly Thursday night he is confident Home Oil Co. of Calgary will remain under Canadian control.

But in reply to a point-blank question at the end of a four-hour emergency debate, he said he could not guarantee the success of current private negotiations with potential Canadian buyers bidding against Ashland Oil Inc. of Kentucky.

He added in answer to the question from Doug Rowland (NDP—Selkirk) that the government has not decided what it would do if the Canadian-purchase negotiations fall through.

Speaking in the face of reports that sale of the major Canadian-controlled oil producer to the U.S. company is imminent, Mr. Greene earlier expressed confidence in the ultimate success of bids by "more than one Canadian company."

He added that if those bids fall through, against his expectations, retroactive legislation might be necessary to keep Home Oil Canadian.

The Commons thus failed to pin down the minister precisely on the debate's main issue—whether the government would act to keep Home Oil under Canadian control if private Canadian bids fall through.

By reiterating inside and outside the House that he is confident a Canadian takeover bid will succeed, Mr. Greene went a step beyond the hopes he had been expressing in previous statements.

He said at one point:

"I have been confident from the nature of the discussions I have had both with the vendor, Mr. Brown (Home Oil president Robert Brown), and with the Ashland company and with potential buyers that we can work this out together in confidence . . . so as to maintain this as a Canadian company without any legislation being passed which has a retroactive nature to it.

"That might be necessary if things go wrong, if I turn out to be wrong. . . ."

At the end of the minister's 45-minute speech, Mr. Rowland said uncertainty remained. He asked whether Mr. Greene could guarantee that Home Oil would remain under Canadian control, regardless of the outcome of private Canadian bids.

Mr. Greene replied:

". . . in the event that these negotiations—about which I am sanguine—do not succeed, the government will decide what action should be taken at that time.

"I cannot guarantee that the negotiations will succeed, of course.

"Hopefully, we will succeed and I do not think that we ought to look ahead of the event.

"I have no authority to say to the House what the government will do in the event that the present procedures, about which I am hopeful, do not succeed."

The debate ended on that note after midnight following demands from both sides of the House for quick government action on the foreign-ownership issue.

It also featured bitter opposition complaints after Mr. Greene, who had rejected repeated cries for him to speak early in the debate, left the House to talk to reporters and appear on national television newscasts.

After Mr. Greene returned to the Commons, several opposition MPs said his action in speaking to reporters on the matter before addressing the House was an indication of contempt for Parliament.

Jack Horner (PCCrowfoot) attempted a motion of contempt on a question of privilege but drew no reaction from Speaker Lucien Lamoureux.

Until that time, news reports of the debate had featured demands for government intervention and proposals on how it could act to keep the oil company in Canadian hands.

New Democrat Leader T. C. Douglas, whose procedural actions earlier led to the debate, said the government had the power to act now.

"If Home Oil is sold into foreign control it will close virtually the last chance for Canadians to get a piece of the action in oil," he said.

Eldon Woolliams (PC—Calgary North) said Liberal governments have been talking about foreign ownership since 1963, but they have done nothing and still have no policy.

Alastair Gillespie (L—Toronto Etobicoke) said much the same, observing that in eight years hundreds of Canadian companies had been sold out to alien interests, but there was still no policy to deal with it.

Mr. Gillespie, who resigned last year as a director of Toronto textbook publisher W. J. Gage and Co. when control was sold to U.S. interests, called for immediate legislation to prepare for the likelihood of similar foreign-ownership issues in the next month or two.

But in the Home Oil case, he said he believed the government lacked the authority to intervene. It could only use persuasion.

Mr. Douglas had expressed a different view when the debate opened with only 30 of the 264 MPs present. Attendance fluctuated in subsequent hours but numbered only 29 when Mr. Greene started speaking.

Mr. Douglas said the government could forbid sale of control in Home Oil as it did last spring to prevent a similar U.S. takeover of Denison Mines Ltd. of Elliot Lake, Ont., a uranium mine.

If a potential Canadian buyer lacked capital, he said, funds could be advanced from the federal Industrial Development Bank.

Panarctic Oil Co., in which the government has a 45-per-cent interest, could take over Home Oil, he suggested, or a Crown corporation could buy it for ultimate takeover by the proposed Canadian Development Corp., a state investment company.

Supporters of Alaskan Oil Pipeline Are Few But Most Witnesses Expect It to Be Built

WASHINGTON (AP) — If the more than 100 witnesses who testified at hearings on the proposed trans-Alaska oil pipeline this week had one thing in common, it was agreement a pipeline will be built.

Supporters of the $1,000 million line were relatively few, although they may become the majority in a second round of hearings next week in Alaska.

In day and night sessions Tuesday and Wednesday and a morning session Thursday, opponents dominated the Washington phase of debate, throwing barbs at both the project and the U.S. interior department's appraisal of its probable impact on Alaska's ice-brittle environment.

But only a few suggested the best idea might be to leave the huge oil deposits discovered in 1968 where they are—under the permanently frozen Arctic North Slope.

The United States could continue to supply its needs from existing oilfields and foreign imports, or perhaps even cut down its use of oil, they contended.

Pipeline suporters, however, repeated their argument that petroleum demand will continue to rise. The U.S., they said, needs Alaskan oil for its security, to reduce its dependence on the politically unstable Middle East.

The defence argument drew stronger opposition. Opponents said an 800-mile pipeline connecting with an ocean tanker route to Washington or California could be easily disrupted; Alaskan oil, they said, still would leave the U.S. partly dependent on foreign imports.

Other critics said the line would cross 350 streams and one of the world's worst earthquake zones where, a seismologist testified, there would be no way to prevent a pipe from breaking in a strong quake.

Tankers would carry Alaskan oil after its pipeline trip, and the record of tanker accidents, said critics, points to a major ocean spill as virtually certain in the first 10 years of the pipeline.

The interior department has recommended construction of the pipeline, despite possible harm to the environment.

Teachers and Board Take Conciliatory Stances

MONTREAL (CP) — The Montreal Teachers Association slightly cooled this city's simmering teacher dispute late Thursday when they announced a return to class today, ending a one-day walkout in support of French-language Roman Catholic school teachers.

At the same time, the Montreal Catholic school board said it favored mediation instead of an injunction to get all Montreal's schools open on a full-time basis again.

The announcements did not necessarily signal a break in the dispute. The Alliance des Professeurs de Montreal said it would continue walkouts begun Jan. 25 by withdrawing the services of 1,400 teachers today from 54 schools, affecting 30,000 students.

Education Minister Guy Saint-Pierre told a University of Montreal audience that Quebec plans to use adverse public opinion to convince the teachers to end their walkouts. It did not plan to use injunctions or legislation.

At issue in the dispute are decisions by the provincial classification board that downgraded the present qualifications of some teachers, virtually freezing salaries until the teachers can take courses to improve those qualifications. Salaries range from $4,500 to $14,500 annually.

The three-year labor agreement by the province, school boards and teacher unions expires this year.

The issue was sparked by Montreal French-language teachers when the Catholic board demanded 300 reclassified teachers pay back amounts up to $1,300 in salary overpayments retroactive to September, 1968. The board has since dropped the demand.

Principals Would Let Teenagers Quit School

OTTAWA (CP) — Some 300 Ontario secondary school principals gave almost unanimous support Thursday to a resolution not to force children to remain in school until age 16, the age now set by law.

Doug Barber, the Toronto-area principal who moved the resolution, said a withdrawal permit would allow students who have no interest in education, and who may be harming the progress of other students, to leave school before they are 16.

Lewis Pledges to Curb Big Business Farming

ARVA, Ont. (CP) — Stephen Lewis, leader of the Ontario New Democratic Party, said Thursday night a government under his leadership would embark on a program to strengthen the province's farming industry.

Speaking to an NDP nomination meeting for the Middlesex North riding in this community just north of London, Mr. Lewis said his government would legislate to restrict the integration of large corporations into farm production and against the ownership of Ontario farmland by non-residents.

He said the NDP government also would "move immediately to relieve the burden of the farm property tax."

Mr. Lewis said farm assessment would be divided into two segments—the dwelling facilities would be assessed at a regular residential rate and the land and other productive facilities at a lower rate.

The educational portion of the property tax would be excluded from the assessment of land and other productive facilities.

Mr. Lewis said the NDP also would establish a guaranteed-minimum-income program for farmers.

"We feel that a program of this importance should be a national one largely financed by the federal government, but failing action from Ottawa we are prepared to move in this field on a provincial basis."

Mr. Lewis said the NDP would provide long-term credit to the individual farmer for the financing of adequate acreage and other capital requirements.

He said the NDP would set up a Crown corporation to oversee the sale of farm machinery in the province. It also would establish producer-controlled marketing boards for all farm products, if farmers indicated they want them.

Students Plan Tour

LONDON (CP) — More than 400 Canadian students leave Toronto this weekend for a new experience in combining learning with leisure. They are the first large group from Canada to take part in an educational cruise from Britain.

The students and their accompanying teachers, all from Toronto and neighboring areas of Ontario, will be joining the British India Steam Navigation Co.'s S.S. Nevasa at Southampton. From there they sail Sunday for a 15-day voyage of discovery to ports in the Mediterranean, Adriatic and Black Seas.

Most of the Canadian students are paying their own way. They are selected by their schools on a first-come first-served basis.

Bourassa Explains Views on Language

QUEBEC (CP) —Premier Robert Bourassa says proposed changes in the British North America Act eliminating guarantees for the use of English in Quebec courts will "end a 102-year-old discrimination" against Quebec.

The premier was commenting Thursday in an interview with the Gazette on proposed constitutional changes agreed on at recent federal-provincial talks and to be further discussed next June in Victoria.

Article 133 of the BNA now guarantees that either French or English can be used in Quebec courts but at the recent conference Prime Minister Trudeau and the provincial premiers agreed to eliminate this stipulation while retaining the right to use either language in federal courts.

No other province recognizes bilingualism in its courts.

"Now that discrimination will no longer exist," Premier Bourassa said.

"The abolition of article 133 will allow us to be more flexible. That's the way I see it — more flexible without infringing on minority rights."

He stressed that "it's a delicate subject" which "could be interpreted."

"That's why I want to be very careful in my statements.

"If I say we'll use it, the amendment, the people . . . the Anglophons will take fright right away . . . what with my thing about French the language of work."

But he said there is "no question of being unjust or unfair to the English minority in Quebec."

Nor would it "necessarily mean in practice English will disappear" in Quebec courts.

"We will examine the situation . . . we are studying it."

One way of dealing with "the problem" would be for the Quebec government to declare English an official language in some parts of the province and not in others.

Developing Canadian Identity Depends on Students---Davis

PORT COLBORNE, Ont. (CP) — Making his first public address since elected leader of the Ontario Progressive Conservatives, William Davis asked a group of senior high school students Thursday if they wanted the voting age lowered to 18.

After a pause of about 10 seconds, many of the 800 Grade 11, 12 and 13 students at Port Colborne High School broke into applause.

Mr. Davis commented on the large number of students who did not react and encouraged those who did to "talk to them and tell them the meaning of the right to vote."

Mr. Davis told the assembly of students he has "great confidence in the students of this country, not only in the field of culture but in politics."

"If you students . . . do not do a much better job of developing a Canadian identity, of participating in government and moving our society ahead than we who are presently in positions of responsibility are doing, there is very little hope for each and every one of us."

Mr. Davis said he senses a growing awareness and desire by students to develop a truly Canadian identity and "it must be done."

"If we are to survive as a nation, this must be one of our basic goals."

Voice Sought by Teachers

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Windsor separate school teachers are attempting to negotiate working conditions into a 1971-72 salary contract, The Star says.

School boards in Ontario, in line with the Ontario School Trustees' Council, have taken the position that working conditions are not negotiable in teacher salary contracts. Council policy says working conditions are the "prerogative" of the board.

New Law Would Let Individual Control His Own Corpse

TORONTO (CP) — Relatives will no longer be able to overrule dead persons who wanted to donate organs for transplant operations if new draft legislation gets provincial approval.

Alan Leal, chairman of the Ontario Law Reform Commission, told the Toronto branch of the Canadian Public Relations Society Thursday that, since under the present law an individual does not "own" his body, next of kin can veto any instructions for its disposal after his death.

The new Human Tissues Act is now before the Ontario cabinet.

Death is not defined by the new act, which leaves it up to two doctors not connected with the transplant program to certify death. Doctors in transplant cases are protected against suit for surgical assault by the act.

The new legislation prohibits sale of human tissue, said Mr. Leal.

Autos and Pedestrians Slither on Glare Ice

Sneakers, Sand, Salt Keys to Salvation

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

Sneakers, sand and salt were the order of the day this morning as an overnight freezing rain turned streets and sidewalks into a slithering mass of glare ice.

For the first few hours after the rain commenced shortly before midnight, motorists were almost immobilized except for the main travelled highways and this morning police were urging everyone to keep off the roadways if at all possible.

Pedestrians were forced to creep along the sidewalks or even take to the middle of the road.

Road sanders were out early however and by mid-morning the main travelled arteries in the city were passable but rural sideroads remained treacherous.

Despite the slippery conditions neither city or provincial police reported any serious accidents as result of the freezing rain.

"Nothing of any consequence," reported a city police spokesman.

It was the same at the Ontario Provincial Police office although here one mishap which cut off cable TV service to the city was investigated.

Police said that a car went out of control and slid into a hydro pole at the corner of Wallbridge - Loyalist Road and the second concession of Sidney township. The accident occurred a few minutes after 11 p.m. just as the evening national news program was being concluded.

However, in the country, cars sliding into the ditch were a quite common occurence, with at least three cars reported off the highway in the Oak Hills district between Foxboro and Stirling.

Madoc provincial police reported five minor highway accidents as result of the overnight rain. There were no injuries and damage in all cases was less than $500.

At the Trenton Canadian Armed Forces base, officers said flights from the base had been cancelled because of icing conditions.

Provincial police at Brighton reported numerous cars sliding into the ditch.

The driving lane on Highway 401 was reported salted, but the passing lane was treacherous as result of the ice.

Near Brighton, a Colonial bus slid off Highway 401, on to the shoulder and was unable to continue. Another bus, also going westward, stopped to pick up the passengers before continuing.

This morning in Belleville, city buses got a late start with the morning runs not being started until 7:15.

And because of slippery roadway conditions a number of buses scheduled to take young people to sporting events were cancelled, including the regular Saturday ski bus to Oak Hills.

The duty forecaster at Canadian Forces Base Trenton said the freezing rain would turn to rain about 11 a.m. with occasional showers continuing until 5 or 6 o'clock this evening.

The rain will then become a drizzle and turn into light snow by midnight.

Laos Drive Stalls

SAIGON (AP) — South Vietnam's 12-day-old drive against the Ho Chi Minh trail in Laos apparently was stopped cold and in deep trouble today as the North Vietnamese launched heavy, counter-offensives against both sides of the frontier.

Elements of a 9,000-man United States blocking force on the South Vietnamese side also came under attack and a half-dozen more American helicopters flying in support on the South Vietnamese were reported shot down.

The fighting was the heaviest since the 16,000 South Vietnamese entered Laos to cut North Vietnam's principal supply network.

In Saigon, a South Vietnamese military spokesman indicated the drive was in trouble. He said South Vietnamese troops had not advanced for three days and the lead elements were still at a point about 17½ miles northwest of the Vietnamese border.

"We have stopped because of the weather and because of the resistance of the enemy," he said.

The South Vietnamese also are in trouble because heavy anti-aircraft fire and uncertain weather, often rainy with low cloud cover, are causing problems for U.S. aircraft flying resupply and fire-support missions.

U.S. Tells Peking It Is Safe

LONDON (AP) — President Nixon's administration has taken steps to assure Communist China that the United States-backed invasion by South Vietnamese forces into Laos does not threaten China, Communist sources say.

The United States and China have no formal political relations, but these U.S. signals were said to have reached Peking through a variety of channels, informal and undisclosed, that have been used in the past.

An article in Communist China's official newspaper, the People's Daily, warned Nixon today that the Chinese "know very well how to deal with U.S. aggressors."

ABORTIONS

Abortion Trips Are Forbidden

BUFFALO (AP) — A New York tate Supreme Court justice forbade a Detroit businessman Friday from opening an abortion-referral service in Niagara Falls.

The service would have flown women from states with stricter abortion laws to Niagara Falls for abortions, then returned them home the same day. A round-trip abortion flight would have cost about $400.

Lortie Refuses To Give Evidence At Rose's Trial

MONTREAL (CP) — The trial of Paul Rose, charged with the kidnap-murder of Pierre Laporte, was adjourned until Monday after key witness Bernard Lortie refused to add further to his testimony Friday.

Mr. Justice Marcel Nichols ordered the adjournment to give Lortie, one of four persons charged with the murder, time to reconsider. The 19-year-old student was ordered to be kept from speaking to anyone in the meantime.

Lortie, who peppered his testimony with statements that the trial was "a big farce" and that "the witness is hostile to the court," said the adjournment "won't change anything" as he was led from the courtroom.

The burly Rose, 27, a former teacher, is charged in the case of the Quebec labor minister who was kidnapped in front of his St. Lambert home Oct. 10 and strangled a week later.

Rose was not present at the Court of Queen's Bench proceedings, having been banished from the trial last week following repeated outbursts and delays. The trial began Jan. 25.

He Chipped In

Freezing rain started falling near 11 p.m. last night and by this morning a sheet of ice coated the Quinte region. Blaine Statham, a Bridge Street merchant, pitched in to clear the sidewalk in front of his store in an effort to prevent pedestrians from falling, a frequent occurrence this morning.

Ice Inch Thick Is Spots

TORONTO (CP) — Freezing rain that caused an ice build-up in some places of as much as an inch fell all night across southern Ontario from the shores of Lakes Erie and Ontario northweard to Muskoka.

The freezing rain missed the Niagara Peninsula but caused slippery conditions from southwestern Ontario to Brockville on the St. Lawrence River. Sidewalks and roads in Toronto, Hamilton and other centres were treacherous.

Provincial police reported minor accidents as motorists drove cautiously. Fog was reported in the Burlington area, adding to the traffic hazard.

The weather office said the rain "turned much of southern Ontario into a skating rink. . . . In addition one to three inches of snow fell in many northern regions and another two to four inches are likely there before the storm moves out of the province tonight.

The freezing rain was expected to change to rain as the day advanced.

Palestine Guerrillas Split Over Leadership

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Palestinian Liberation Army moved openly today to unseat Yasir Arafat as leader of the Palestinian resistance movement, touching off the biggest internal power struggle in the guerrillas' history.

Brig. Abudulrazzak Yahya, PLA commander - in - chief; made public demands that Arafat's ruling central committee be dissolved and that all guerrilla organizations be brought under the PLA.

Yahya's demands came in notes published in Damascus and Beirut today, a few hours before the 27-man central committee was to begin meetings in the Syrian capital on the growing momentum towards a peacemful settlement in the Middle East.

President Tito of Yugoslavia is returning to Belgrade today from Cairo with the blessing of Soviet Communist party leader Leonid Brezhnev for his one-man Middle East peace mission. He is expected to inform President Nixon immediately of the results of his week of discussions with Egyptian leaders.

An active peace-seeker in the region since the 1967 war, Tito has been in touch with the Big Four leaders in recent weeks and ended his talks Friday night with President Anwar Sadat in Cairo's Kubbeh Palace.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: A vigorous winter storm crossing the lower lakes turned much of southern Ontario into a skating rink overnight as freezing rain fell from the shores of Lake Erie and Ontario northward to Georgian Bay.

Mild air will push temperatures up into the mid 30s and 40s over southern Ontario today, changing precipitation to rain and then to scattered showers and quickly melting the ice that accumulated during the night.

Cooler air will spread back over the province this evening. Precipitation on Sunday will mainly be in the form of snowflurries.

Russia Yields on Wheat Pact

GENEVA (CP) — The United Nations wheat conference agreed today on a new three-year wheat trade and food aid convention after the Soviet Union withdrew its objections to European Common Market participation.

While the Soviet Union still insisted it does not recognize the Common Market as a country, it agreed to a compromise which gives the Common Market the attributes of a country for signing purposes.

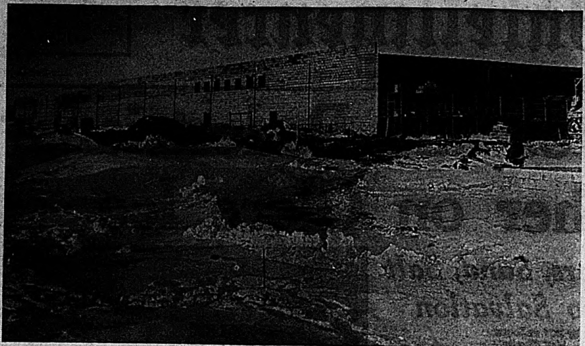
The wheat convention is a bare-bones convention under which the 12 exporting and 49 importing countries or parties pledged to maintain the spirit of orderly marketing but with no obligations on maximum or minimum prices or obligations on quantities to be sold and purchased.

The agreement, to be known as the Wheat Trade Convention, also maintains the existing administrative machinery of the International Wheat Council which will continue to collect information from member countries on production and import requirements.

The hope expressed in the convention is that the council may at some future time find the situation ripe for another attempt to negotiate a price-frame pact though no time is fixed for such an attempt.

Replacing the existing International Grains Arrangement, the new convention goes into effect July 1 providing sufficient countries ratify it. It will run until June 30, 1974.

Thus for the first time in many years there will be a free market in wheat next summer. Some commentators predict a price war but both Canadian and United States delegates anticipate that there will be no major break in the market which appears to be a bit stronger after the collapse of floor prices in 1969-70.



Winter Gets the Works

Winter, once the bane of Canadian construction schemes, no longer is a months-long obstacle to work projects. Dramatic proof of this is the progress being made on Quinte Mall, new northend Belleville shopping plaza to open later this year, where work continues despite one of the bitterest winters in years.

Sewage Treatment Plant

Deseronto Buys Napanee-Made Equipment

DESERONTO — The town of Deseronto is to have virtually home made equipment for its new sewage treatment plant.

Napanee Industries Ltd. of Napanee — just five miles from Deseronto — has been awarded the contract for the fabrication of the town's new sewage pumping stations and the sewage treatment plant.

Value of the contracts total $102,000.

Work on the $1.25 million sanitary sewer project in Deseronto began Feb. 1, the largest portion of the overall contract being the laying of sewer lines through 10 miles of town streets. Keystone Contractors of Windsor are doing the sewer installations.

Completion of the sewer installation is expected in about 52 weeks.

The system will be owned and operated by the Ontario Water Resources Commission and will be financed over a period of 40 years.

Napanee Industries have been actively engaged in the supply of pollution control equipment throughout North America for several years and has shipped treatment plants to communities as far away as Cape Breton on Canada's east coast, and Texas.

The firm is also installing a Napanee-built sewage treatment pumping station for the new Lennox Generating Station being built by Ontario Hydro at Bath.

Work on the latest order for Deseronto will be carried out by employees living in or around Deseronto.

Commissioner Objects To Patronage Advertising

TRENTON (Staff) — The Public Utilities opened the door to patronage of civic organizations claimed commissioner Charles Hilton at a meeting this week.

The PUC decided it would purchase advertising space in the souvenir program of the annual all-star midget hockey tournament to be held at the Community Gardens later this month.

"We should not get into this kind of patronage . . . we are using the public's money. If you open the door for one you have to open it for more," Mr. Hilton said.

In reply to a question from Commissioner Hilton, Mayor McDonald said the Town of Trenton had bought advertising space in the program.

Mr. Hilton indicated that he preferred supporting other charitable organizations. "I think No. 1 on the 'hit parade' should be the Victorian Order of Nurses, then, the heart fund, the Cancer society and the blind".

"These other people are as entitled to help as they (the hockey players) are" he contended.

Mayor McDonald suggested that the PUC would get some value for its money because the wide distribution of the program. However, Mr. Hilton said "a rose by any other name — it is still money".

Women Injured In Car Accidents

Two Belleville area women were admitted to Belleville General Hospital yesterday and last evening as result of separate road accidents — one a two-car mishhap at Rednersville, and the other on Highway 2 west of the city.

In hospital in fair condition with chest injuries and knee abrasions is Mrs. Vera McQuoid of RR 1 Belleville.

Two others involved in the mishap, Gordon McQuoid, and Mrs. Anne Armstrong of Parrott Drive in Belleville were treated and released.

Friday evening Mrs. Margaret Parkhurst, RR 5 Trenton, was admitted to hospital with head injuries as result of the accident west of the city on Highway 2.

Three other persons suffered minor injuries in the mishap and after emergency treatment were released.

They were Russell Parkhurst, RR 5 Trenton; Thomas Ryan of Stirling and Leonard Halpin of Charles Street in Belleville.

Brotherhood Contest Is Held

Thirty two public schools in the area were contacted by the Belleville Jaycees in order that the students in each school could compete in the Brotherhood Poster Contest.

The contest asked each student to create on paper what he thought brotherhood meant.

Because the age range was broad, the students weren't judged on talent, but were judged in their definition of brotherhood and how well, and simply, their posters illustrated it.

The competition last year received a reply of 400 posters from the 32 schools. This year the same schools were approached but only seven schools out of the original 32 sent 40 posters from their art classes.

The posters will be on display in the front window of Barrett's Stationery today.

The judging was placed into three categories starting with the youngsters in the Grade 3 level and working up to Grade 6.

The Grade 3 winners were David White and Jamie MacIlmoyle of Queen Mary.

In Grade 5, Bonnie Sallows of Prince of Wales, Leslie Goode of Prince of Wales, and Russell Millet of Prince Charles were winners.

The Grade 6, and up category was won by Christine Yoetes of Queen Alexandra, Billy Whittaker of Queen Victoria, Sandra Hamilton of Cannifton - Corbyville and Ricky Brohm of Queen Alexandra.

Rough-Going

Doug Ellis of 64 Yeomans St. and Sam Horton, 57 Yeomans Street, found it rough going this morning as they tried to pass this truck in a downtown alley. Their passage was similar to a merry-go-round . . . up, down, up, down.

IN MEMORIAM

BLAKELY, Mrs. Elinor E. Jean — In loving memory of a dear devoted daughter who passed away Feb. 20, 1965.

We little knew when we woke that morn,
The sorrow the day would bring.
It brings back a day we will never forget.
For the call was sudden, the shock severe,
To part with one we loved so dear.
No tears can show, no words can say,
How much we lost on that sad day.
—Always remembered and so sadly missed by Mother.

DENYES — In loving memory of a dear wife and mother Mary Denyes who passed away Feb. 1956.

Sweet memories will linger for ever,
Time cannot change them, it's true,
Years that may come cannot sever,
Our loving remembrance of you.
—Sadly missed by husband and family.

BLAKELY, Mrs. Elinor E Jean — who passed away Feb 20, 1965.

We lost a mother with a heart of gold.
Who was more to us than wealth untold.
Without farewell she fell asleep,
With only memories for us to keep.
Like falling leaves the years slip by,
But loving memories never die.
No longer here, our lives to share,
But in our hearts she's always there.
But Jesus took you home to rest,
And He knows best.
—Sadly missed and lovingly remembered by Heather.

ABBOTT — In loving remembrance of a dear mother and grandmother Norma Louise who passed away Feb. 20, 1970.

The dearest mother, the kindest friend,
One of the best whom God could lend,
Loving, thoughtful, gentle and true,
Always willing a kind act to do,
Loving and kind in all her ways,
Upright and just to the end of her days,
Sincere and true, in her heart and mind,
Beautiful memories she left behind.
—Always loved and forever remembered by her daughter Lela and granddaughter Kimberley Louise.

STIMERS — In loving memory of a dear wife, mom and granny, Alice Stimers, who passed away Feb. 20, 1966.

It's lonesome, Mom without you,
We miss you more each day,
For life is not the same for us,
Since you were called away.
If we could have one lifetime wish,
One dream that could come true,
We'd pray to God with all our hearts,
For yesterday, and you.
—Ever remembered by husband Keith, daughter Kathleen, son-in-law Alf, granddaughter Brenda Feather.

ABBOTT — In loving memory of a dear mother and grandma Mrs. Roy Abbott who passed away Feb. 20, 1970.

God knew that she was suffering,
That the hills were hard to climb,
So He closed her weary eyelids,
And whispered "Peace be thine."
Away in the beautiful hills of God,
By the valley of rest so fair,
Some time, some day, we know not when,
We will meet our loved one there.
—Sadly missed and always remembered by daughter Margaret and son-in-law Lawrence, also by her grandchildren Ray and Karen.

BRYANT — In loving memory of a dear son Flight Sergeant James Roy Bryant who was missing Feb. 21, 1944.

Every hour we dearly miss him,
Sadly do we feel his loss,
Lonely is our home without him,
Help us Lord to bear the cross.
—Sadly missed and dearly loved by mom and brothers and sisters.

MACDONALD — In memory of a dear son and brother Kenneth Richard who passed away Feb. 21, 1970.

It really is strange that those we need,
And those we love the best,
Are just the ones that God needs too,
And takes them home to rest.
Our hearts still ache with sorrow,
And the secret tears still flow,
For what it meant to lose you,
No one will ever know.
So you who have a son and brother,
Cherish him with care,
For you'll never know the heartache,
Till you see his vacant chair.
—Lovingly remembered by mother and sisters Heather, Donna, Berta and brothers-in-law.

KNOTT — In loving memory of a dear father and grandfather Joseph Henry who passed away Feb. 21st, 1955.

His life was earnest, his action kind,
A generous hand and an active mind,
Anxious to please, loath to offend,
A loving father, faithful to the end.
More and more each day we miss him,
Friends may think the wound is healed,
But they little know the sorrow,
Lying within our hearts concealed.
—Sadly missed and always remembered by daughters, son-in-law and grandchildren.

Brass Rubbing Helps Two Girls Pay For European Tour

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — When you're a poor student working your way around Europe and you're tired of doing dishes, picking grapes and waiting on tables, what else is left?

Brass rubbings, that's what.

At least that's what Paula Sten and Kathleen Wright, both 21 and students at Queen's University at Kingston, have stumbled upon as a plan to see the world and pay for it at the same time.

Today they're in England, probably scouring the countryside for old churches with medieval brass plates in the stone floors.

The plates, which were popular as memorials between the 13th and 17th centuries, are said to number 4,000 throughout England, but the trick is in finding them.

When they locate an interesting plate, Kathy and Paula get permission from the local vicar to do a rubbing, and set to work.

The method is simliar to that of placing a sheet of paper over a penny and rubbing with the side of a pencil until the imprint of the coin appears.

What they do is tape a sheet of thin paper over the brass and rub the paper with a special cake of black wax until the image is reproduced on the paper.

It isn't easy work. The finished rubbings take from three to six hours to complete.

But there are compensations, like the wayfarers' dole they received at an old church located on an original pilgrims' route to Canterbury which retains the 11th century custom of giving a small mug of ale and a piece of bread to travellers.

Paula says they got the idea of doing the rubbings from a friend in Brussels who did some herself and then sold them in California for $200 apiece. While they don't plan to charge that much, they do hope to sell some in Canada.

Kathlen says the rubbings are a unique art form and they'll probably soon become collectors' items.

"More and more churches are refusing to allow rubbings," she says. "Many of the brasses are very old, dating back to the 14th century, and the vicars are afraid the pressure applied in a rubbing will wear away the brass imprint even more."

They are amazed at how few people, even in England, are acquainted with the brass rubbing process. And they are congratulating themselves that they haven't bumped into any Canadians, or anyone else for that matter, who are interested in producing them.

They admit it's hard work, but it beats washing dishes.

Spring is not too far off, just around the corner in fact, and as the air warms young couples take advantage of the crisp beauty of Victoria Park, a quiet stroll in late afternoon is quite in order. Today's weather became quite a setback.

Shoe Workers to Vote On Union Settlement

Negotiators for the oBot and Shoe Workers Union representing approximately 700 employees at Batawa, Picton and Campbellford, and the Bata Shoe Company have arrived at a tentative settlement for a new wage contract.

The tentative settlement was reached yesterday at a conciliation meeting held in Belleville, and is being recommended to the workers by union negotiators.

The proposed settlement will be presented to the union membership, Local 715 Batawa, Local 740 Picton and Local 464 at Campbellford next Wednesday with workers to vote on its ratification the following day.

Yesterday's meeting was the third attended by J. Greenway, conciliation officer with the Ontario department of labor, since the workers' contract with Bata ran out last October.

No details of the proposed settlement will be released until after it has been considered by the workers.

The Boot and Shoe Workers Union is a member of the Canadian Labor Congress and is affiliated with the AFL-CIO.

Snow Trails Are Linked

MADOC (Special) — The Centre Hastings Winter Sports Area is $1,050 richer from a donation from the Highlands of Hastings Tourist Council.

A winter trail at Tweed now connects with the Centre Hastings Winter Sports Area east of Madoc and snowmobile trails now developed at Bon Echo Park are expected eventually to link up with the Centre Hastings area.

Plans were made at the last meeting of the area committee to hire a trail superintendent for the 1971-72 season to prepare, mark and supervise the trails.

The Highlands of Hastings Tourist Region will buy two snow skimmers for first aid purpose on snowmobile trails.

The decision was made at the last meeting of the region's officers. It is suggested that one should be stored in Coe Hill and one in Gilmour. Signs have been put up on the new trail from Madoc to Tweed.

The Highlands of Hastings and the Madawaska Valley Tourists Regions will hold a joint meeting to discuss common problems, and plans were laid for a seminar for tourist operators in the Hastings region.

OMB Rejects Ward System for Trenton

By KENNETH SMITH
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — After hearing evidence for barely an hour yesterday, two representatives of the Ontario Municipal Board rejected the proposal to establish a ward system form of voting here.

In handing down their decision, R. M. McGuire and S. S. Spiegal said they had receive no evidence of under-representation or neglect of servicing in any section of the town.

Although more than 400 Trenton residents had signed a petition last fall in favor of a ward system, none of these made a presentation at the OMB hearing into the matter.

Only one man, Trenton Mayor Duncan McDonald turned up to advocate the change in election procedure. In a brief statement, Mayor McDonald said he had "felt over the years that a ward system would be a benefit to the town".

He said people would "feel better reespresented if they had a councillor living nearby them", referring specifically to the area of the east side adjacent to the Municipal Offices.

The mayor also contended that there are many "good people", new to the town, who would like to run for council. These, he said, live in recently built subdivisions and are known in their neighborhood but not throughout town.

James Taylor, the Toronto lawyer hired by council to present an anti-ward system case to the OMB, asked Mr. McDonald if he knew of any new Trentonians who had run for public office. The mayor said he did not.

In accepting evidence from Mayor McDonald, hearing chairman R. M. McGuire, said the mayor could speak only as a private individual because the town corporation is evidently against the ward system.

"The municipality acts through its formal council vote and evidently they are against it" Mr. McGuire said.

Basis of the ward system petition had been that the bulk of councillors lived on the west side of the Trent River, west of Dufferin Ave.

As he began his case for the status quo, Mr. Taylor said it seemed the river bisected the town.

He called on the Town of Trenton's clerk - comptroller, O. W. Larry, to tell the OMB how servicing programs had been distributed across the town.

Mr. Larry said that since 1963 a total of $1,069,799 had been spent on new services to the east side, $965,998 to the west.

He also told the hearing parkland was well distributed in the town, where in 1970 population figures show 7,614 living east of the Trent and 6,027 to the west.

The clerk - comptroller said that, at the present time, "80 per cent of the town is served by sanitary sewers and the percentage for water is at least that".

Drawing from Mr. Larry's remarks, James Taylor argued that although the Trent seems like the town's River Jordan "as a political division it does not make sense". The distribution of services and parks shows this", he said.

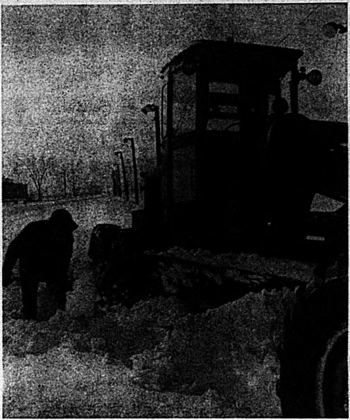
"I do not think we should promote sectionalism here. . . there is no uneven distribution of services and no substantial objection to the status quo" the lawyer added.

Told there are no ethnic ghettos in Trenton, Mr. Taylor concluded that "when a population is large, it may have to be broken down into wards but surely not for a population of 14,000".

Mineral Oil, Not Gas: Farmer

Farley Vermilyea, owner of the pig barn on the 4th Concession of Sidney Township destroyed by fire Thursday night, this morning refuted a firefighter's statement that a full drum of oil and gas was standing against the burning barn.

"I told them it was only mineral oil," he said. "Besides, it was almost empty anyway."



When All Else Fails . . .

Believe it or not, Gordon McInroy had to dig his snow removal grader out of the banks at the fairgrounds when the unit became bogged down clearing a track for tomorrow's snowmobile races. Elbow grease and the shovel eventually cleared enough snow to allow the driver to move the heavy machine.

Rural Mail Carriers Face Difficult Days

Operating a rural mail route most times may be just like another job — except in winter.

And particularly when it is one of the harshest winters in years.

Then the task of getting the mail through can become a laborious, even exhausting, chore.

None the less, no matter how great the weather odds, the rural mail carrier carries on. No matter how bad the climate the mail somehow gets through.

In this they are following the universal tradition of office persistence, says Belleville Postmaster Roy Wainwright.

"You bet your bottom dollar they are and we like the public to co-operate with them by clearing out their mail boxes from snow. Often it's quite a struggle for the carrier to get in there."

There are 40 rural mail routes in Hastings county and all have been hard hit by recent storms. However, says Ken Juby of Shannonville, whose route serves the lower concessions of Tyendinaga, the mail goes out every day.

If it can't go through one day, it goes out the next day and so on until delivered. As long as the carrier has sound equipment he shouldn't have too many problems.

Prime requisite for the job is a good vehicle ,says Mr. Juby.

Suicide Trends

Suicide is not a pleasant topic. Nevertheless figures put out on this subject by the Research and Planning branch of the Ontario Department of Health are interesting.

The statistics cover the five year period 1963 to 1967 and they show that suicide ranked ninth among the chief causes of death during that period, with 3,197 deaths. More than two and one half times as many men (2,306) as women (891) took their own lives, the suicide rate for the former being 13.6 per 100,000 population compared with only 5.2 for females. The rate for males reached its peak in the age group 60 to 64 years (39.0) and among females in the age group 50 to 54 years (13.2).

The report notes a seasonal variation in frequency of such deaths. The largest number were committed in November — 290 deaths or 9.1 per cent of all the suicides during the five-year period. July and December followed closely with 286 and 287 fatalities respectively. The lowest frequency fell in January and February for both sexes. One does not joke about such a subject, but does this indicate people are happiest in the depths of winter? Maybe summer sun, warmth and color are overrated.

The international picture indicates that the suicide rates for Canada and Ontario in 1965 (8.8 and 9.4 per 100,000 population) compare favorably with other countries and were lower than the rates for England and Wales (10.8). France (15.0) and the United States (11.1). The suicide rates for some European countries in 1965 were twice and in several instances almost three times as high as those for Canada and Ontario. Austria for example was 22.8; Denmark, 19.3, Finland, 19.8, Sweden (which, erroneously, is often regarded as top of the list) 18.9, and Switzerland, 18.1 per 100,000 population.

On the other hand the Latin countries are among those having the lowest rates (Italy for instance, 5.4 in 1964). Among European countries the Netherlands and Norway have fairly low rates (6.9 and 7.7 respectively. Among non-European countries, the suicide rates for Japan and Australia, 14.5 and 14.8 per 100,000 population respectively were substantially higher than those of Canada and Ontario.

The figures reflect strange patterns of conduct and doubtless a multitude of motivating reasons. But why the citizens of some countries — particularly countries with similar standards of living — should be so much more prone to self-destruction than others is difficult to understand.

City's Program

Belleville's five-year capital works budget, involving an estimated expenditure of $11 million in new and other services, including just under $2 million in the current year, is a barometer of the community's increasingly strong position.

The expenditure reflects the growth of industry, home ownership, and the increased assessment therefrom. It reflects also confidence in the economic climate of the region as well as in the country at large. Little of this work could have been contemplated if the economy were not in a healthy condition, and while unemployment is currently a serious problem there is no doubt that there will be some improvement at least with the coming of spring and summer.

This year will see a start on a big roadway building program, as well as provision of storm and sanitary sewers, watermains and sidewalks. Long-term projects include construction of a multi-level parking garage, an ice-control dam in the Moira River, and a new rink in the east end of the city.

It is a comprehensive program, completion of which will take Belleville further along the path of progress.

Auxiliary Police

Auxiliary police, as well as one or two policewomen, would certainly be an asset to Belleville. Their recruitment is seen as a possibility by Mayor Russell Scott and with the city growing the way it is additional manpower will certainly be needed.

The auxiliary police would be part time and would be used for traffic control during parades and for other special events. But why should such men be unpaid (which Mayor Scott says is usually the case)? We see little attraction in this kind of part-time work if it goes unrewarded.

The idea of having policewomen on the force is a good one. Police forces overseas have them, as well as here in Canada. Toronto has its policewomen and the city of Brockville had one some years ago at least. As well as traffic duty, policewomen of course have a valuable role to play where members of their own sex are concerned.

NDP Confrontation

Saltsman Alerts Moderates to 'Waffle Group's' Threat

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Let us call this Chapter Two of How a Political Party (or almost any other institution for that matter) Can Be Taken Over.

Captured.

Pulled out like a rug from under the very feet of the people who brushed, vacuumed, groomed, shampooed and cared for and about it as if it were a prized personal responsibility and worth every possible effort to maintain and preserve it.

The takeover is engineered through the old proved - in - the - reform - escalating - to-revolutionary technique of confrontation by dedicated - to - the - point - of - fanaticism militants.

While an ancient practice in the art of institution - busting in older parts of the world, it is a still largely experimental, but increasingly successful methodology in such newer sections of the globe as the United States and Canada.

Max Saltsman, quiet activist in his own way — his way being constructively positive — New Democratic MP for the old Ontario constituency of Waterloo, has been looking at it.

The problem — and it still defies a quick and easy solution — has concerned him, because he fears it is one facing the New Democratic Party.

With its convention upcoming when the NDP in April selects a leadership successor to Douglas, the party is torn between two factions.

The old. And the new.

In sheer weight of numbers, on the face of it there should be no contest.

For there are infinitely more members of the old wing of the NDP than the new.

The old wing comprises many of the originals of the CCF, the orthodox NDP, or, if the word must be employed, the party's establishment, its sheet-anchor, the foundation on which the entire organization was built.

One of the biggest and most powerful of the NDP foundation stones is the trade union movement.

So the old wing has the troops, the delegates and the votes to elect an orthodox leader.

Or that is the way Max Saltsman, the NDP financial critic in Parliament, sees it shaping up.

If.

And "if" is the key.

If the old wing can persuade a large group of sorely perplexed, still undecided and thoroughly worried NDP delegates in the centre of the party's wildly wide political spectrum that the best business in the next federal election can be done at the old stand of moderation, reason and common sense.

But it is not a contest of numbers any more.

It is a fierce competition of ideas.

The new wing, the numerically minor but influentially major "Waffle" group is comprised of a small band of desperately dedicated zealots who are convinced, according to Max Saltsman, in their mind-bending intellectual arrogance that only they know what is best and all others who do not instantly and completely agree with them are born stupid.

Max Saltsman sees them as the "wreckers" — of society which they claim is sick, of the system they brand as rotten— and if they capture the NDP, of the party itself.

They do not have the troops, the delegates, the votes.

And what bothered Max Saltsman and some others in the party like him, and they are in the by-far overwhelming majority, is that the party moderates, the reasonable men most of the time are just "too damn busy" with their own personal and family affairs to give all their time, thought and effort to selling common sense and balance that the "Wafflers" give with such ferocity to marketing militancy and extremism.

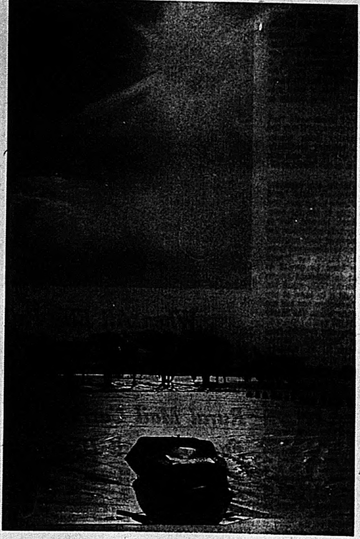
"Take the trade union guys and their delegates," he says. "They are busy making the buck it takes to live. They have homes and cars and mortgages and payments to make.

"Like other Canadians they are almost totally occupied with, like we say 'making it,' and do not have the time nor can spare the effort it takes to engage in the revolutionary political technique of confrontation.

"They are not agitators. They are not mesmerized by their own gross over-assessment of their intellectualism. They are not convinced things are as good as they should be but they do not believe the situation is as bad as the wildmen of 'Waffle' swear it is. And while they are willing to try a few careful experiments and make some cautious changes, they are not about to scrap the whole system before they know what they are going to have to make do with after the wreckers have done their job."

Confrontation is the name of the political game these days in the NDP, Women's Lib, Student Movements, the Organized Poor, and other groups being led and exploited by professional militants.

You can see it happening all over — on the streets, in municipal offices, provincial legislatures, college campuses, and on Parliament Hill — when the "demos" gather for confrontation.



The Aspect of Winter

"Who can explain the secret pathos of Nature's loveliness?" U. S. author Henry Van Dyke (1852-1933) penned these words in an earlier time. They are as appropriate today, as they are for all time (provided we heed the warnings of conservationists and win the battle against pollution.) The ethereal beauty of Zwick's Island in winter, amid the silent snows and frozen expanse of the bay, is of the quality envisaged by Van Dyke. (Picture by Ian Robertson)

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

February 20, 1951

Organization of the Belleville and district civil defence planning committee took place in the council chambers at city hall. Brigadier Fraser Fulton of the Northern Electric was named general chairman of the civil defence planning committee and civil defence officer, while Mayor R. T. Potter, Alderman Duffy and Fraser Fulton will comprise the control committee.

One of the best sales of municipal debentures in the province has been made by the City of Belleville for $27,000, of serial 30 year debentures covering the final expenses in connection with the Collegiate Institute and Vocational School, largely for furnishings. Seventeen bond houses tendered on the issue and the highest price of $101.42 was accepted. At the price received the city's issue sells for $27,383.40, which means a premium of $383.40.

TODAY IN HISTORY

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Feb. 20, 1971 . . .

State Secretary Ellen Fairclough, 53, became the first woman acting prime minister 13 years ago today —in 1958. As senior cabinet minister in Ottawa she assumed the role when John Diefenbaker was away campaigning in Newfoundland.

1964—The federal armory in Montreal was robbed for the second time in three weeks.

1945—Gen. Douglas MacArthur announced the recapture of Mt. McKinlay, in the Philippines.

1930—The federal government transferred natural resources to the province of British Columbia.

1906—An appeal court upheld the conviction of a Woodstock, Ont., Negro woman on a charge of practising voodooism.

1905—105 miners were killed at Virginia City, Ala.

1895—The Cuban revolution began.

1887—Former governor-general Vincent Massey was born.

1839—The United States Congress outlawed duelling.

1521—Ponce de Leon sailed to found a Spanish settlement in Florida.

Full Equality Still Eludes Women in Modern Society

Editor,
The Intelligencer

Scarcely a day goes by without some new and dissentient group laying claim to injustice or seeking to change the status quo. Not the least among these, and certainly one with a bona fide brief for the attention of society is the Women's Liberation Movement.

The distaff side has long remained a silent sufferer of many injustices in a world preoccupied with correcting the inequities which are the lot of so many segments of our society.

For centuries women have been the beasts of burden, and in some parts of the world still are. They are still sold or promised in marriage in some countries — traded into harems, forced into prostitution and over a large part of the earth's surface still amount to little more than chattels.

In the so-called civilized countries, ostensibly they are on an equal footing with men — but we all know, to our eternal shame that this is not true.

Women are still relegated by their male counterparts to the mundane, and frequently soul-destroying slots in society. The business executive relies on his secretary to read, write, spell, remember, wet nurse and lie for him ,while he receives the accolades being handed out.

The housewife, by turn, is counsellor, disciplinarian, bookkeeper, cook, chauffeur, nurse, defender of the family name (including Dad's), do-it-yourselfer, and, above all, a good listener.

In factories women perform the most monotonous and repetitive jobs hour after hour with little or no complaint. In hospitals they uncomplainingly minister to the sick and dying, receiving in return the thanks and blessings of those leaving the hospital well, and all for what the doctor would not accept as pocket money.

Only occasionally are women allowed to demonstrate their talents for leadership and commonsense in the world of politics. When they do, their penchant for plain common sense frequently makes fools of the opposite sex. We have excellent examples on our own city council.

If the parliaments of the world, the courts and law associations and most of the professions catered equally to women I am sure the world would not be in the mess it is.

In this country, the armed forces have gone a long way to equalizing the status of men and women, but as yet we have to see the girls piloting the 707s of the air arm, or leaning over the bridge of our destroyers or perhaps popping up from the turret of a tank.

Of course we are not likely to want to see our gals in the infantry, wielding shovel and pick, hanging on to a jack hammar or descending beneath the earth in mining operations — but the fact remains they should have the equal opportunity to do so if they wish and are capable.

They can certainly, by use of their natural ability, enthusiasm, and stamina frequently outperform men in many fields and despite the ill-concealed guffaws and snide remarks of some sections of the media and society, given the opportunity they have a tremendous amount to offer. The Women's Liberation Movement is perhaps the most genuine cause among the many dissentient factions of the day.

The 'Truth' About Robin Hood!

Vancouver Sun

A retired English schoolteacher has completed years of research into the life and legend of Robin Hood. He has come up with the conclusion that Robin's real name was Alfred de Hunterden, a rebel who lost his patrimony under the reign of Henry II and who never operated in Sherwood Forest at all, did not know the Sheriff of Nottingham or Little John, Friar Tuck or Will Scarlet — to say nothing of Maid Marian.

However, we recall that when quite young we learned with dismay from some scholarly researcher that there had never been such a person as D'Artagnan the Gascon, of whom Alexandre Dumas wrote in The Three Musketeers. Nor an Athos, a Porthos or an Aramis.

Then, years after, another scholarly researcher proved that Charles de Baetz de Castelmore, Count d'Artagnan, really had lived, a servant of Mazarin and Louis XIV, and had died at the siege of Maastricht without becoming a Marshal of France. Yes, and Athos, Porthos and Aramis, too, had lived back in 17th century France.

Which goes to show that not all scholarly research hits the mark. There was for example this man Shakespeare, whose plays were written by Bacon, Marlowe or was it the Earl of Oxford? Well, maybe Bernard Shaw?

In any case, if Robin Hood wasn't Robin Hood he wasn't Alf de Hunterden either. As every television fan knows, he was a chap named Richard Greene.

Slush Month

Kingston Whig-Standard

February has been called "slush month". It is hard to imagine a more appropriate description.

We do not know exactly what compels a motorist to roar along a slushy street spraying everything within 15 feet of his vehicle, including pedestrians. Is it ignorance, carelessness, impatience, or merely a feeling that a man behind a steering-wheel rules the world? Sometimes it would appear that the splashing of pedestrians is a deliberate act of contempt.

Whatever the reason, this kind of disregard for others who use the streets and sidewalks is deplorable. There is simply no excuse for it. Motorists should remember that it is possible for a careless splasher to be charged with an offence.

Teachers and Unemployment Insurance

The following is a copy of a letter addressed to MP Lee Grills by a Belleville teacher.

As a member of the teaching profession I would like, through you, to voice my opposition to the proposal by the Minister of Labor to include teachers in the unemployment insurance scheme.

While the injustice in having to contribute to a scheme which gives practically no opportunity for benefits is a factor in my opposition, I realize that there are other groups with the same valid objection; my principal reason for opposing the proposed step lies in the fact that it will increase costs to the local school boards (and consequently, of course, the local taxpayers) at a time when (a) there is already a heavy burden on property-holders because of education costs, and (b) the Boards have a very narrow (and shrinking) tax base on which to operate. Further, the funds raised will go into the coffers of the senior government which is already getting the largest (and growing) share of the tax dollar. This is really taking from the poor to give to the rich.

The same principal objection also applied to the inclusion of teachers in the Canada Pension Plan some years ago, but the scheme was imposed on the profession nevertheless. I hope that the protests will be more successful this time.

I am confident that teachers are at least as willing as any group to help the unfortunate in time of need, but it seems to me that it would be more honest to impose direct taxation on them for this purpose than to pretend that they are contributing to an insurance fund from which they could receive returns in time of need. The terms of employment for teachers makes this proposition a fictitious one for all practical purposes.

I should be grateful if you can find the means to make this opposition, which, I am sure, is shared by all teachers in Canada, known to the Government.

Knowledge of Judaism Needed For Understanding of Christ

NEW YORK (AP) — A Christian, in reading the New Testament, will "not know what is really going on there" if he doesn't have a thorough knowledge of Judaism of that period, says a Jewish expert on both traditions.

"One can't understand the Gospel without knowing Judaism," Rabbi Dr. David Neiman adds.

Dr. Neiman, one of few American Jewish specialists on Jewism and the New Testament literature about him, has left for Rome to teach for a semester at Roman Catholicism's Pontifical Gregorian University.

The first Jewish scholar to become part of that institution's theological faculty in its 419-year history, he says Christianity is "becoming more and more aware of its Jewish heritage."

Dr. Neiman, 49, who is taking leave from his post at the Jesuits' Boston College, is among an increasing number of rabbis now teaching at Christian seminaries, but only a handful are authorities on Jesus' ministry.

"Jesus was a great Jewish teacher," he said in an interview.

However, he added, it is impossible to grasp the full meaning of Jesus' sayings and actions without knowing Judaism of those times, its thought and conditions, since He and His disciplines were Jews in that Jewish setting.

"He was right in the middle of the intellectual ferment of His times," Dr. Neiman said, pointing out that issues raised by Jesus also are argued in rabbinical discussions of that day, as recorded in the Talmud.

For instance, when Jesus was criticized for plucking grain on the Sabbath and contended that "the Sabbath was made for man, not man for the Sabbath," Dr. Neiman notes that this same position is argued in the Talmud against an opposing view.

There are similar parallels on other issues, such as Jesus' stand against divorce except for infidelity, a position also being argued among other rabbis of the time

"He lived in the world, not in a vacuum and He always took the attitude of a dedicated religious Jew in the real tensions of the times" Dr. Neiman said. "Sometimes He took a conservative position and sometimes He was on the liberal side, but He was always consistent. He always chose the genuinely moral position. He always stuck to His ideal. He never compromised.

"I see Him as a total Jew, a completely religious and devout Jew."

He said some Christians have a mistaken impression Jesus was a soft, flexible teacher, but He actually was a "man of unwavering principle, demanding total commitment."

"That's why people respected Him and put faith in Him."

Dr. Neiman said that while Christianity is becoming more sensitive to its Jewish origins, Judaism also is beginning to study the New Testament and Jesus' ministry as an important "part of Judaism."

French Cardinal May Become Pope

VATICAN CITY (AP) — A Frenchman has a good chance of becoming the first non-Italian Pope in 4½ centuries.

Soundings among Vatican officials and observers show that as things stand now Jean Marie Cardinal Villot is considered the man most likely to succeed Pope Paul on his retirement or death.

The cardinal, 65, is tall and robust He has a reputation for being candid, punctual and open-minded.

Cardinal Villot holds down the Vatican's No. 1 and No. 2 posts under the Pope: secretary of state and chamberlain of the church

As recurrent rumors in Vatican circles have it, the present pontiff is thinking of retiring when he reaches age 75, just 20 months from now.

Others besides Cardinal Villot thought to be "papabili"—in consideration for Pope—are two fellow French cardinals, Gabriel Garron, head of the Vatican Congregation for Education, and Francois Marty, archbishop of Paris and head of the French conference of bishops. Two Italian prospects are Antonio Cardinal Poma, archbishop of Bologna and head of the Italian bishops-conference, and Cardinal Pellegrino.

The last non-Italian Pope was Adrian VI, a Dutchman who held the office 1522-23.

Before the second Vatican ecumenical council, a non-Italian Pope was virtually unthinkable. Now the Roman Curia, or central Vatican governing body, is greatly "internationalized," so Cardinal Villot and the other French prospects stand a much better chance.

Born into a landowner's family in the Clermont diocese, on Oct. 11, 1905, Cardinal Villot was ordained a priest in 1930.

He was named a bishop in 1954 as a coadjutor in the Paris archdiocese. In 1959 he was named coadjutor to the archbishop of Lyon.

The second Vatican council brought him to Rome and he was made a cardinal in 1965.

Churches Neglect Women

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — Women fill the church pews on Sunday, but only seven are on the 120-member policy board of the World Council of Churches. The four attending a central committee meeting in Addis Ababa said it's time for a change.

"You look around for men in church on Sunday like you look for women here," said Pauline Mary Webb, director of lay training for the British Methodist Church. "The problem of sexual discrimination runs far deeper than racial discrimination."

"Patronizing, condescending Western men" are the worst offenders, she said, because they lack even the limited tolerance of the male committee members from Africa and Asia.

GLASS BOTTLES

"There is surprisingly little detailed information about the bottle industry in the past." — Geoffrey Wills.

* * *

Truth, 'tis said, often glitters in a make-believe setting. Thus, for fun, let's eavesdrop on a conversation between a modern Canadian glass bottle and a rare, old English glass bottle which is declaring:

"It's right down alarming to realize there's danger that in this day and age of endless supply of glass bottles "untouched by human hands" in the manufacture, we may be completely wiped out!"

New Glass Bottle: "How do you mean?"

Old Glass Bottle "Why, not only are "empties" being crushed into powder and mixed with asphalt to surface highways, but we glass bottles have a counterpart; namely — plastic bottles."

N.G.B. — "What do we have to worry about? Plastic, indeed!"

O.G.B. — "Plastic, indeed — that are 'safely burnable', that are suitable for food, chemical and beverage containers which chill as quickly as glass, retain flavor and carbonation, even though 80 per cent lighter.

N.G.B. — "Well, that's a bit scarey alright, but I refuse to believe the world can ever get along without us glass bottles."

O.G.B. — "It's been known to happen before. Bottles had been in use in Roman times in England. However, there was an interval of several hundred years, known as the Dark Ages, during which familiar things became lost and forgotten. In England the bottle is believed to have been one of them. The inhabitants had to be supplied from Europe."

N.G.B. — "Where did they store their wine, ale and beer for instance?"

O.G.B. — "Oh, they were kept and transported in wood casks and served in pottery, pewter vessels. The rich and wealthy used silver cups and after the 15th century even used Venetian glasses. Though it is thought the forerunner of the wine bottle was of pottery, with a handle, made around 1637 - 1672, with owners initials or coat - of - arms stamped on them."

N.G.B. — "When did glass bottles appear then in England?"

O.G.B. — "Well information is scant but it is believed they were first made around 1650 - 1690. However in 1696 a list of glass houses was published, compiled by John Houghton, a Fellow of Royal Society. This has been a great help to those studying about our glass family of bottles."

N.G.B. — "Have any old ones been found?"

O.G.B. — "Yes — the earliest known English glass wine bottle: two of which were found in London. And it is interesting to note that one was found in Jamestown, Virginia. In fact a careful excavation has yielded 20,000 fragments of bottles on the site of the former Jamestown, Virginia. All excavated glass is accepted as having been made in England. The successful colonist sent home for bottles. One found bears initial of a keeper of baths in London, built about 1682, and was evidently among the few worldly possessions of a settler from the Old World."

N.G.B. — "Where are you kept?"

O.G.B. — "In a London Museum. For you see, by 1900 the craftsman who made bottles like me had to give way to the newly - invented machinery which could produce numerous bottles "untouched by human hands"."

N.G.B. — "Perhaps it wouldn't be a bad idea if I started looking around for a nice safe museum, for myself . . ."

SACRED HEART CWL

MARMORA — The grandmothers of Sacred Heart Parish, Marmora, were honored at the annual 'Grandmothers' Night' of the Catholic Women's League, Monday evening. President, Mrs. P. J. O'Neill, and director Father T. G. Scanlan, paid tribute to these dedicated women, thanking them for their unselfish efforts over the years in the CWL and the parish.

A program arranged by the executive for their entertainment, included special contest prizes for the grandmothers, and each was presented with a gift during the lunch period. A pleasing choral medley with guitar accompaniment was provided by Mrs. Bill Meehan, Jr. and daughter Suzanne.

A number of decisions were made during the business meeting. In co-operation with Marmora Chapter of the IODE, the CWL will provide a donation for the purchase of underwear for the children in the isolated Canadian missionary community at Davis Inlet, Labrador. This appeal was made by Mrs. Charles Brady. After discussion on the TV program, Sesame Street, by TV convener, Mrs. Paul Brady, a letter is to be sent from the CWL in Marmora commending the CBC for this fine program and recommending that it be continued. A telegram will be forwarded to Prime Minister Trudeau expressing the strong opposition of Marmora CWL members on the proposed legislation concerning abortion-on-demand.

Mrs. Breen O'Connor also discussed the program of the Canadian Catholic Organization for Development and Peace, and generous contributions by members based on one per cent of their personal expenditures for a year, were made to help in the work of the organization in underdeveloped countries.

February coming events include card parties in February and Guide and Brownie mother and daughter banquet on February 22.

Father Scanlan celebrated Mass in the church before the meeting, and Mrs. O'Neill was lector.

DISTRICT WOMEN'S INSTITUTES

MARMORA WI

A talk on citizenship by Mrs. George Mantle was the highlight of the Women's Institute meeting on February 10. Mrs. Mantle's address covered many aspects — "what is a citizen; when do we become citizens; our responsibility as citizens" were just a few.

The meeting, which was held at the home of Mrs. B. Tinsdell, opened with an exchange of Valentines and roll call was answered with a verse from a Valentine. The president welcomed 12 members and one guest.

An interesting paper on public relations was given by Mrs. Harold Nayler. "How to Handle Parents" for the benefit of teenagers, proved to be amusing and thought provoking to WI members. Mrs. Nayler also had some valuable tips for consumers — using wisdom in shopping, keeping sales slips and guarantees, the use of your signature.

She closed her talk with a quote from a motel billboard "Dogs Welcome" and gave reasons why sometimes dogs are more welcome than people.

An open meeting was discussed and held over for planning It is hoped the president Mrs. R. Neal will be a delegate to the officers' conference in Guelph at the end of April. A spring tea and bake sale on April 3 in the senior citizens' room is planned.

The motto "There is Welcome" on the mat was dealt with by Mrs. M. O'Neill. She read "The House by the Side of the Road" which covered the "Welcome" adequately.

A contest and lunch closed the meeting. A Valentine cake, made and decorated by Mrs. George Empey, was served by Mrs. M. O'Neill, Mrs. S. Demorest and the hostess, Mrs. Tinsdell.

Gladioli Topic at Horticultural Meeting

Guest speaker at the Belleville Horticultural Society meeting was Mr. William Crowley of Toronto employed as a meteorologist with the Federal Dept. of Transport. The meeting was held in Tabernacle United Church on Tuesday evening.

Mr. Crowley is at present time vice-president of both the North American Gladioli Society and the Canadian Gladioli Society. He was for three years president of the Winnipeg Gladioli Society and considered an outstanding authority on his favorite flower.

Mr. Crowley showed slides of prize winning glads and various arrangements. He mentioned the three main enemies of these flowers. Thrips are a tiny insect that can be controlled by the use of malathion. White - break mosaic a virus disease which discolors the flowers and foliage and fusarium yellows a fungus disease causing the foliage to turn yellow. It is an interesting fact that glads should not be planted near beans as they are host to a virus disease transmitted to them.

The speaker cautioned that glads do not like to be watered too heavily and take little care other than cultivating and insect control. The bulbs or corms as they are called should be stored in a cool, dry place with good ventilation. They should never be stored in a plastic bag as they will sprout prematurely. A question and answer period followed.

Many beautiful Valentine Day arrangements were on display for which prizes were awarded. The winners were Mrs. Pauline Buchanan, Mrs. A. McDowell and Mrs. Rita Becker.

The evening concluded with a draw for door prizes, and refreshments were served.

CWL Groups Hear Talk on Drugs

Members of St. Michael's and Holy Rosary parishes joined with St. Joseph's C.W.L. at the latter's parish hall on Monday evening to hear Michael Mahoney speak on drug abuse and the search for identity.

Mrs. J. Hanley introduced the guest speaker who is employed as a research technician for the Addiction Studies Unit of Queen's University and spends all his spare time counselling persons who have problems relating to drugs or alcohol.

In recent years, Mr. Mahoney has become very concerned by the abuse of drugs and other substances in today's society, especially by young people. During the course of his talk, he said that 70 per cent of the young people are on drugs looking for a vital identity and purpose for life. They are disenchanted with the establishment and aware of something missing in society. As a result they have lost faith in adults today. They then turned to drugs which he stated was a short cut to confusion and destruction.

He said the drug scene has reached the stage where it is beyond control and noted that there are 5,000 young people in the Kingston area taking drugs. In a time period of five years heroin users in Ontario doubled and tripled with only one per cent of these being cured.

At the conclusion of Mr. Mahoney's talk, a question and answer period followed, with his assistant Mrs. Sheila Howell also answering questions.

U.C.W. Meeting

MOUNT PLEASANT — RAWDON UCW

Mrs. Robert Hoard gave an informative message on the Americas and gave descriptions of Bermuda, Jamaica, Brazil, Mexico and other points in that area during the dinner meeting of the Mount Pleasant - Rawdon UCW held on Tuesday at the church hall with about 50 people in attendance for the noon meal. Mrs. Hoard displayed a large selection of books, pictures and posters to illustrate her talk.

Mrs. Garth Joslin was in charge of the afternoon meeting which was attended by 32 women. The theme of the devotional period was "the perfect foundation" and Mrs. W. C. Cox and Mrs. Harry McAdam were in charge of it.

Mrs. Joslin also conducted the business meeting. Reports were given by Mrs. Douglas Campbell, Mrs. Herbert Smith, and Mrs. Burton Sharpe. A report of the recent sale and banquet was given by Mrs. George Grills, leader of the January group.

Mrs. Robert Hoard spoke of the 4H club and a donation was authorized for the "cereal shelf" project. Money will be available for two persons to attend "Five Oaks" in March and 50 copies of the booklet "Mandate" will be ordered.

Hand Painting Best In Decorating China

Painting by hand has always been the best method for decorating china. The best work requires a skilled artist and repeated firings to be properly finished.

In the latter half of the 19th century the sphere of the skilled china painter was invaded by the amateur. In the '80' the Art Amateur magazine, published in New York by Montague Marks, had a great vogue, both in North American and England. It was a monthly journal, "devoted to the cultivation of Art in the Household". Among other topics it devoted a great deal of space to china painting for amateurs.

Very few amateurs were capable of creating their own compensated for this deficiency by issuing supplements of suggested patterns for decorating. The plate illustrated appears to derive from a series of 12 designs published by the Art Amateur over the artist's name of Professor Camille Piton.

With amateur decorating there grew up a craze for collecting sets of odd cups and saucers, odd plates, pitchers, vases, in fact any object that could show the china painter's skill.

Potteries were used to selling china "in the white" to other potteries for decoration so it was easy to supply a whole range of shapes to the amateur. By 1900 there was a plethora of catalogues of china for amateur decoration.

There was scarcely a marriagable young lady in Canada worth her salt who had not decorated at least one piece of Limoges.

Every help for the amateur was provided, stopping just short of holding the brush while they painted. Patterns that could be traced, decals, transfers, special glazes, kiln facilities, instructional classes were all supplied.

The would-be china painter who couldn't or wouldn't paint at all could buy a commercially prepared article made to look like "genuine hand-painted". Although interest in china painting passed its peak about 1900 there was still enough interest in 1914 to hold the largest exhibition ever of amateur hand painted china in Chicago.

The quality of amateur work is variable. The worst is no worse than the early Victorian china crudely decorated by children. The best is likely to be unique and good indeed. It is often impossible to trace or identify the artist. The backstamp on the china has nothing to do with decoration in pieces done by amateurs. Some artists added their initials, usually with the design.

There is no sure way to determine price. If you see a piece you like and can afford to buy it, do so. If you are selling great-aunt Minnie's collection, hold out for a mint. She might be discovered to Grandma Moses.

Kitchen Tested Recipes

Substitute Squares Answer One's Need

By MARY MOORE

QUESTION: . . . my husband and I are now among the Senior Citizens and although we love sweet things cannot eat nuts and I cannot eat coconut. Will you please tell me a substitute for these things for holding together squares or desserts — which always seem to include them. — Edith H.

ANSWER: I tink the two "squares" recipes below answer your need.

VICKI'S LEMON CHEESE SQUARES

1 "family size" pkge. lemon jelly dessert (or 2 small ones)
¾ cup sugar
1 cup boiling water
½ lb. (8-oz. pkge.) white cream cheese
One 1-lb. can evaporated (not condensed) milk, thoroughly chilled
One 20-oz. can diced peaches (drained)
1 pack honey graham wafers (1 wrapped stack-pack within a box,) rolled fine

Pour the boiling water over the lemon jelly and sugar and stir to dissolve. Beat in beater bowl at medium speed, the cream cheese until light, then pour in the chilled evaporated milk and beat for 3-4 min. longer. Now add the jelly mixture and continue beating until blended and light. Then add the canned, drained, diced peaches and beat for an additional 30 sec. Remove beaters.

Have ready in a buttered 9 x 9" pan the graham cracker crumbs which have been rolled as fine as possible. Cover bottom of pan to nearly ¼" depth, reserving enough crumbs — at least ½ cup — to sprinkle over top.

Spoon mixture over crumbs evenly and carefully. Sprinkle remaining crumbs over top. Chill at least 2 hrs. Cut into 2" squares to serve.

DATE SQUARES

Dough:

1 cup sifted cake flour
1 cup light brown sugar
½ tsp. salt
½ cup shortening
1½ cups quick rolled oats
3 tbsps. milk

Sift the flour with the sifted sugar and salt. Cut in shortening until mixture resembles meal. Add rolled oats and mix, then add milk and blend. Pack half of dough into an 8 x 8" greased pan. Spread Date-Orange Filling (below) over evenly. Cover with remaining dough, patting it on evenly. Bake about 40 min. at 350 deg. Fahr. until pale gold on top. When cool cut into bars or squares with sharp knife, while still in pan.

DATE-ORANGE FILLING

1 1-3 cups sugar
1 1-3 cups water
2 tbsps. butter
¼ tsp. salt
2 2-3 cups pitted dates (well packed)
Juice and grated rind 1 orange

Combine all ingredients in order given and cook over low heat, stirring frequently, until of spreading consistency. Cool somewhat before spreading on unbaked cookie dough.

Successful Living

Discussions Lead to Closer Family Ties

By DORIS CLARK

Do you ever look at your family as they sit around the dinner table and wonder what makes the young people so different from the older ones? Has it ever occurred to you to question whether you are really a family, or just a group of people living under the same roof?

There are some dinner tables where the average meal-time conversations consist of "Pass the salt" and "Is there any more cake?" Each member thinks his own thoughts (the new boy at school, the new system at the office, the new gadget in the kitchen) and keeps his concerns to himself.

A far cry, this, from the table where Junior vies with Judy in an argument over pollution or poor people's rights, and Dad and Mum chip in as indicated, their glances meeting in some delight.

Whichever your role, see what you can do about making your special group of people — the ones you eat dinner with every day — into a family unit. There should be strength here, and a close warm bond to cultivate.

Dear Doris: In a recent column you explained that in our subconscious are stored all our past habits and all our learned skills. You pointed out that our subconscious can be our friend.

I thought what you said was very much to the point. What I might add is that the subconscious mind is constantly changing, with every new experience. Today is tomorrow's past and hence new food for the unconscious. — The Psychiatrist You Consult — About Other People.

Dear Psy: Thank you. It seems that the human subconscious mind is a bottomless reservoir of thoughts, experiences and emotions. And yet it is only a short time that we have been aware that we possess such a thing.

Dear Doris: My mother has just died. My father and I have never had a real father-daughter relationship. How can I get close to him now after 15 years, in which I lived with my mother, separate from him? My dad thinks I'm the greatest and I think he is, but after all this time it is kind of hard to get close to him.

I am living away from him, with relatives. — Solitary Seventeen.

Dear Solitary: When you are not living together you don't have the same chances for little chats over breakfast. But learn to write a letter like you talk.

Start off by saying I suggested that you write. Say you want to see more of him; and that you think he is the greatest. He will prize his own girl's friendship.

Don't be surprised if he feels a bit backward too. Pave the way for a reply by asking if he could come and take you out for dinner? Go a little further and say some of the loving things he is dying to hear.

Then let me know how your friendship flourishes.

• • •

Confidential to Give It To Me Straight: All right, then. I'd say he wants a change of scenery.

You are one of those lucky ones who has a year - older brother. What a natural for opportunities to meet up with a kindred spirit, in his crowd!

About returning chains, let him make the first move. So far nobody has said anything is over. Assume you are still friends.

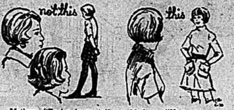
(Doris can help you with that puzzling decision. Write to her, enclosing a stamped, self - addressed envelope for private reply.)

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON



Mother: "Becky is so tall and awkward, and she acts so self-conscious about it. I always thought I would have a cute, dainty little daughter."

Mother: "You wear your clothes with so much style and you have such nice posture. Many famous models are tall girls, you know."

You can help your teen-age daughter make the most of her physical characteristics if you accept them with serenity.

Volunteers Her Help at 81

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — A hospital employee for 40 years, Dollie Long was forced to retire one Friday at the age of 70. The following Monday she showed up ready to work as a volunteer.

Now nearing her 81st birthday, the great-grandmother can be found each day at the Valley Medical Centre doing unpaid work as a chaplain's aid.

Rain or shine, seven days a week Mrs. Long pedals her bicycle to the county-operated hospital to do what she calls "the Lord's work."

"I don't want to be laid up on the shelf," she says. "I wanted to do something. It's menial work but it's work that has to be done.

"Salt loses itself in savoring food and I think we should do the same—lose ourselves in serving others."

Mrs. Long, a widow since 1941, lives with her younger brother—he's 76—and travels the few blocks from her home to the hospital.

Mrs. Long considers herself lucky because "not many people my age get a chance to be useful."

"It would really be to the hospital's advantage to get a younger person than I," she says. "I could die off any day."

The former Sunday school teacher's one worry is that maybe she isn't paying enough attention to her church, although she says she never misses a Sunday.

LA Delegates Meet in Toronto

Five members of the ANAF Ladies' Auxiliary 45, Gladys Fitzgerald, Alice Storms, Mabel Galbraith, Elizabeth Lundberg and Etta Bobiash attended the Provincial Ladies' Auxiliary quarterly meeting held at the Toronto Parkdale Unit.

Among distinguished guests present at the meeting were Mayor William Dennison of Toronto and the ANAF Provincial president Lou Murphy.

While in Toronto the local delegates were entertained by the Toronto Polish unit. At the close of sessions it was decided that the next quarterly would be held in Kitchener on May 29. During the social hour two of the guests from Belleville, Gladys Fitzgerald and Mabel Galbraith were the lucky winners of draw prizes.

It was decided at a meeting, on Sunday, of both the men's and women's executives, that the women's group would co-operate in the sales of gemstone key chains with Alice Storms the chairman and treasurer for this endeavor. The Ladies' Auxiliary also volunteered to make table covers for which president John Browning expressed appreciation.

Chairman of the committee for the sick, Mary Fairborn reported that two members were in hospital, but progressing favorably. It was suggested that members reaching the age of 70 would be made honorary life members of the Auxiliary and this was passed unanimously.

Refreshments were served and a social hour was enjoyed.

Practical Suggestions When Living Alone

ANN LANDERS

DDEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a working girl who lives alone. Like many other such girls I am deeply concerned about the increase in muggings, assaults, rapes, burglaries, and murders. A friend who lives in California sent me an informative mailing which was put out by Bruce Eastley, Deputy Marshall of Sacramento County. I have condenced the piece and hope you consider it worth printing. I know of no better way to get this information before the eyes of millions of women.

"Criminal activity is based on two factors. First, the desire to commit a crime. Second, the opportunity. Most of us can do very little about a criminal's desire. Opportunity, however, can be eliminated or diminished if one is alert and cautious. People who are not alert and cautious set themselves up as victims. Here are some practical suggestions that will reduce the single woman's chances for being victimized:

"When you leave your apartment or home and plan to return after dark, leave a light burning. Darkness is an advertisement that no one is at home. If you leave for dinner, turn on the TV or stereo. Electricity is cheap compared to a break-in.

"Never leave a key under a doormat, over the doorway or in the mailbox. An astonishing number of homes have been burglarized by amateurs who didn't have to break in. They knew where to find the key.

"If you are going on vacation, discontinue the milk and newspaper deliveries. Ask a friend to pick up your mail. Arrange to have the lawn kept up.

"Unless you are proficient at using a gun it is best not to have one. Any weapon can be used against you by an assailant. Chances are good that he is far more experienced with guns than you are. Moreover, if he sees your gun he may use his. More victims are shot by intruders than the other way around." — DAILY READER.

DEAR DAILY: Thank you for sharing this information with my readers. You can be sure millions of women are smarter now than before they read it.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I hope my letter helps others who have the same sickness I am now getting over. It started as a small case of suspicion, then it grew to insane jealousy. Finally I became so distrustful of my wife that I began to imagine all sorts of things. It got so bad I couldn't find a minute's peace. I found myself checking the mileage on her car, looking for tread marks in the driveway, rummaging through the garbage for letters or notes. I measured the liquor in the bottles and kept records. I was up every night listening for the back door to open. I was sure my wife was entertaining a lover while I slept.

What makes all this so hideous is that my wife is a fine person. I had no reason to doubt her. Three months ago she gave me a choice — either pack up and get out of the house or go to a psychiatrist. She said my accusations and continual checking were turning her into a nervous wreck.

Well, Ann, I'm in therapy now and getting well. I feel like the luckiest man alive. What makes it so frightening is that my crazy ideas seemed logical at the time. There must be others who are suffering from this same sickness, so please print this letter for them. It might help. — ANYTOWN, U.S.A.

DEAR A: Here it is, and I'm sure it will.

Youth Dies Hitchhiking

A hitchhiker died on Highway 401 yesterday near the junction of Highway 37, as he was entering a car which had stopped to give him a lift.

James Michael Howley, 20, of 75 Thorneclilf Drive, Toronto, and another youth, Andre Couture, a University of Toronto student from Quebec City, were hitchhiking east on the 401 when a car stopped to pick them at 11 a.m.

Mr. Couture was safely in the car and Mr. Howley in the act of entering when a truck struck the rear of the car, throwing the youth onto the road where he was run over by the second vehicle.

The truck driven by Angus Joseph Lacelle of Scarborough slammed into the car when a second truck, driven by Maurice St. Hilaire of St. Jean, Quebec, collided with his rear.

The youth died in Belleville General Hospital. Identity of the car driver has not yet been revealed by the Belleville OPP.

Village Roads Icy After Winter Rain

TWEED (Special) — Village streets, roadways and highways in the Hastings area were in a treacherous condition this morning as more than a third of an inch of freezing rain fell overnight.

"Cars are getting stuck in the village right on the level," said one Tweed resident.

Main highways, however, were reported in a passable condition.

Tweed weather office reports the normal rainfall for February is .83 inch with .74 inch already having been received this month.

Normal snowfall for the month is 17.08 inches. But this year is unusual — the snowfall so far in February has been recorded at 29.8 inches.

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Jean Peters, wife of billionaire Howard Hughes, may marry a movie studio executive someday if she gets a divorce, sources said Friday.

Miss Peters, 43, and Stanley Hough, vice-president in charge of production at 20th Century-Fox, have been dating steadily for more than a year and marriage "would be a natural conclusion," one close friend of the couple said. Hough is in his mid-50s.

"They have eyes only for each other," he said. "A marriage is on the horizon if she ever files for divorce."

Both Hough and Miss Peters were unavailable for comment.

Miss Peters, a onetime actress, and Hughes were married in 1957. She announced more than year ago that she planned to divorce Hughes—a decision she said she made "with the greatest of regret."

However, friends of Miss Peters say she has yet to file for the divorce.

A source close to Hughes and Miss Peters said Hughes knows his wife is dating Hough and "wishes them the best of luck."

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — President Nixon met briefly with band leader Lionel Hampton to wish him well on his state department-sponsored concert tour of Eastern Europe next month. Hampton will perform in Warsaw, Belgrade, Budapest and Bucharest.

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Actor Rex Harrison, 63, and British film star Rachel Roberts, claiming irreconciliable differences, were granted a divorce Friday in Santa Monica Superior Court.

A court spokesman said Miss Roberts was given $24,000 a year alimony as long as she does not remarry plus $100,000 for living accommodations.

It was Harrison's fourth marriage. His previous wives were Noel Thomas, Lilli Palmer and the late Kay Kendall.

LONDON (AP) — Vociferous applause greeted Ingrid Bergman's return to the London stage Thursday in a 70-year-old comedy by George Bernard Shaw. But the critics panned the play and gave the star mixed notices.

"Without Miss Bergman it would be a write-off," wrote Herbert Kretzmer in The Daily Express.

The opening night of Captain Brassbound's Conversion was a top theatrical occasion for London and for the 54-year-old actress. The audience at the Cambridge Theatre cheered her in her first stage appearance in the capital in five years.

Most reviewers found the play outdated and Miss Bergman's performance came in for a few knocks as well as praise.

Her Swedish-American accent was described by several press critics as hardly in keeping with the role of Lady Cicely Waynflete, an aristocratic Englishwoman caught up in dealings with pirates and sheikhs in Morocco.

BOSTON (AP) — Michael Tilson Thomas, associate conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, was appointed musical director of the Buffalo Philharmonic Orchestra, Friday. He also will continue in his post with the Boston Symphony.

Thomas, 26, will divide his time between Boston and Buffalo and is expected to conduct from 12 to 20 of the Buffalo orchestra's 28 concerts next year.

Melvin Strauss has been conductor-in-residence of the Buffalo orchestra since Lukas Foss stepped down last year. Foss has remained as principal visiting conductor.

Indians Plan Comeback

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — North American Indians are stepping up their demands for a better portrayal of their people on the movie screen and more jobs in the film industry.

Through most of the film industry, the redskin has been portrayed in the worst possible light. Except for rare films such as Broken Arrow and Cheyenne Autumn, the story of the West has been told through white man's eyes. The Indian generally has been shown as the most savage of savages.

"I don't think our people were that mean," says Chief Dan George, the British Columbia Indian patriarch who won the New York Critics Award for 1970 for best supporting actor in Little Big Man.

"Throughout the world the image of the Indian is wrong," says Jay Silverheels, veteran Hollywood actor most noted for his Tonto with The Lone Ranger.

"Movies have always projected the Indian as the aggressor, interested only in acquiring scalps. This is an inaccuracy. Many of the tribes were peaceful people who fought only when their territory was threatened."

A one-girl campaign is being conducted by Sandy Ego, a full-blooded Apache from Albuquerque, N.M., who is starting what could be a promising acting career. Within a year she has appeared in such television series as Bonanza, Men of Shiloh, The Psychiatrist and Adam 12.

"I've portrayed a shameless hussy, a spitfire, a pregnant squaw, a mistreated Indian—everything except a role that shows an Indian can think," says Miss Ego, 21. "This shows the white man's concept of the Indian.

"It's nothing malicious, just a lack of understanding."

Silverheels, the only Indian on the board of directors of the Screen Actors Guild in Hollywood, has been campaigning for greater use of Indian actors.

Says Silverheels:

"The Indian is in the same position the Negro was many years ago when Jackie Robinson was breaking the color line in baseball. The Negroes have been very effective in getting their rights. They can hold out the threat that if they don't get equal treatment, movies can be boycotted by millions of Negroes.

"Indians don't have that power. There are only 600,000 of us. A boycott by Indians would not mean the loss of money that a Negro boycott could bring."

Inflation Rate Low

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nixon administration is congratulating itself about the smallest monthly inflation figure in nearly four years, but the chairman of the Federal Reserve Board says the United States may yet face an inflation emergency.

The bureau of labor statistics reported Friday that consumer prices rose only one-tenth of one per cent last month, compared with five-tenths of one per cent the month before and 5.5 per cent for all of 1970.

Because prices normally go down in January, the seasonally-adjusted increase for last month is three-tenths of one per cent, or a yearly rate of 3.6 per cent.

Paul M. McCracken, chairman of the president's council of economic advisers, sent President Nixon a memo calling the report encouraging.

Peterborough Gains Spot In Games Playoffs With 17-1 Win

SASKATOON (CP) — Lightly-regarded Nova Scotia has stolen the thunder of the hockey powers at the Canada Winter Games, much to the delight of at least 1,500 people in Truro.

Friday was supposed to be the day tenacious-checking Nova Scotia, with a 3-0 won-lost record, got its come-uppance from Quebec, also unbeaten in three starts.

But things didn't work out that way as the Maritimers came up with a 4-2 victory and assured themselves a playoff spot.

Again the hero of the Nova Scotia team was Randy Crowell with his eighth goal in four games—and he's had the winner in every game.

Friday, a telegram signed by 1,500 people arrived from Truro urging the boys on and congratulating them all.

In other games Friday, the big, tough Ontario team hammered New Brunswick 17-1 and assured themselves a playoff berth; Saskatchewan trimmed Prince Edward Island 13-4; Alberta beat Yukon 11-1; Newfoundland scored at 19:59 of the final period to edge Manitoba 5-4 and Northwest Territories and British Columbia played a 4-4 tie.

Going into today's action, three teams are in the playoffs —Nova Scotia, Ontario and Quebec—with the battle for the last berth between Alberta and Newfoundland.

Alberta meets Ontario while the easterners play the Yukon.

The Nova Scotia-Quebec game was one of the best played so far in the tournament. It was 1-1 at the end of the first period and 2-1 for Nova Scotia after two. Just 41 seconds into the third period Crowell scored his second goal of the game, but Quebec began to apply the pressure.

At 11:11 Pierre Richard narrowed the margin to 3-2 and Nova Scotia was fighting to stay alive. At 18:40 Crowell went off with a tripping penalty and Quebec pulled its goalie in an all-out effort to tie the game.

The move backfired as Bill Parker scored into the empty net.

Crowell, 19, rated one of the better junior B hockey players in Canada, says he's too old to make the National Hockey League, but "I would like to play good college hockey."

On taking the penalty at a crucial stage of the game, he said:

"I didn't mean to trip him . . . I was going for the puck."

Coach Hughie Matheson was critical of the penalty.

"It wasn't a good call at that stage of the game. With the score 3-2 and the importance it played, the referee shouldn't have called a penalty unless it was serious."

In the B.C.-N.W.T. game, Dennis Nuyli's second goal of the game at 15:48 of the third period gave N.W.T. the tie and eliminated B.C. from further competition.

Jim Johnson got four goals for Ontario in their romp over New Brunswick and is tied with Crowell as top goal scorer in the tournament with eight.

Centre Ron Logan collected eight points, including five goals, as Alberta whipped winless Yukon which in four games has been outscored 53-7 and outshot 257-72.

For the disappointing Saskatchewan team, Bill Thompson got three goals against P.E.I., but Nova Scotia's win over Quebec snuffed out any chance the host province had of winning a medal.

Win Final Game 4-2

Happiness Is A Strong Fairway Defence

By ERIC EMERSON
Staff Sportswriter

TRENTON — Belleville Fairways coach Floyd Crawford admitted being pleased, up to a point, with the efforts of his team last night as they handed the Trenton Golden Hawks a 4-2 loss.

The Fairway coach was very specific on the "point" where his pleasure ended — the Belleville blue line. "I thought that our goalie and defence played really well last night", acknowledged Crawford, "Mulvihill played his best game defensively in a long time and was looking like the 'old' John. Rick Holmes was playing well and as for Ackerman and Dockrill, they've been playing good hockey all along."

DAVE HORWOOD

Offensively it was a different story, however. "They're not playing as a team, it's just a series of individual efforts", fumed Crawford on the work of his forward lines. "We're in the playoffs now and they're either going to play my system of hockey or not at all."

Both teams missed some good scoring chances in last night's game and at other times the fine work of Belleville's Ron Jury and Tony Minnaker in the Golden Hawk net, thwarted some excellent scoring opportunities.

A pair of third period goals by Danny Lupenette, with the second one sliding into the empty Trenton net with just two seconds remaining to play, gave Belleville the win. They were the 20th and 21st tallies of the season for the Fairway pivot.

"We didn't play nearly as well as we did last Friday," admitted Trenton manager John Yott, whose team handed the Fairways a 5-2 defeat one week earlier, "we made a few defensive mistakes out there tonight."

BIM McFALL

Minaker made two key stops in the first period, beating Lupenette twice on breakaway attempts. Jury's best stop of the scoreless frame came on a close in drive by defenceman Dave Jack.

Trenton's Bim McFall gave the home team a 1-0 lead early in the second period stickhandling the length of the ice to score a picture goal. The tall centre, beat Jury with a low shot as he was falling to the ice after being tripped by Peter Ackerman.

Dave Smith squared accounts with the teams playing four men aside dumping a rebound into the open Trenton net after Minaker had gone down to make a fine save on John Mulvihill.

Dave Horwood made it 2-1 for the Fairways on his first shift on the ice, converting a pass from left winger Joe Clarke.

Defenceman Bob Wade tied the game beating Jury with a 15-foot slapshot between the Belleville goalie's pads at 8.19 of the third period.

Lupenette scored the winning goal on a two - on - one break with Clarke, beating Minaker with a high drive to the glove side.

Jury made the key defensive play, late in the game for Belleville, scrambling almost to the blue line to clear away a loose puck when it appeared that Trenton would have a two - man breakaway.

Belleville is slated to open their semi-final playoff series with the Peterborough Lions next Saturday.

Mo-Hawks Lose Steam In 7-2 Loss to Orillia

ORILLIA — The Mo-Hawks ran out of steam in the later stages of their OHA Senior game with Orillia last night, opening the gates for a 7-2 steamrolling by the second-place Terriers.

"We didn't play that badly," said Belleville coach Dave Jones, "but we missed some good scoring chances in the first two period and then we weren't able to come back when they did get ahead."

Belleville sandwiched two goals around a tally by Orilila's Clare Alexander to give them a 2-1 lead at the end of the first period, but the Terriers were able to count three goals in each of the remaining periods before a crowd of 1,300 spectators.

Les Colligan converted passes from Ralph Plane and Greg Marchen for the opening goal, with Ray Johnston picking up the other Belleville score. Alexander led the winners with two goals followed by Bob Cunningham, Dave Nicholishen, Gary Milroy and Grant Moore with one each.

Orillia held 36-35 shots on goal edge against Belleville goalie Steve Rexe, who went all the way in the Belleville nets.

Doug Senior returned to action after a lengthy lay-off, but the Mo-Hawks were without the services of defenceman Lou Kazowski and Mike Rexe.

There were only three penalties in the game with Belleville picking up two of the minors.

DOUG SENIOR

The same two teams meet at 2.30 p.m. Sunday in Belleville in a return bout. The Mo-Hawks are slated to play a cancelled home ice tilt against the Woodstock Athletics, Tuesday night at 8.30 p.m.

If another game is necessary, the teams will travel to Woodstock Wednesday night to play their other post-poned game.

'Black Friday' For Most OMHA Entries

It was "Black Friday" as far as Belleville's OMHA entries were concerned as the Blake Kerr midgets were eliminated from their playdown series with Trenton, while the Rollins peewees were dropping their match against Trenton 4-2.

Towers Food City Novices presented the only bright spot with a 4-0 win over Kingston in the opening game of their play-down series.

Brian Cook and Drew Stotesbury recorded the shutout for Towers with goals coming from Gary Frederick, Mike MacDonald, Randy Cox and Pat Willman.

The victory gave Towers a 1-0 lead in the best-of-three series.

In the midget game, played in Belleville, the Imperials squandered a 4-1 first period lead as Trenton scored in the final minute of play to emerge with a 5-4 win and eliminate the Imperials in three straight games.

Brian Cousins paced Belleville with a hat trick, while Andy Ricketts added the final score.

Trenton broke open a 2-2 game with the Rollins peewees scoring with less than five minutes to play in the game and then adding another in the empty net as Belleville pulled their goalie in an attempt to get the equalizer.

Ackerman's hat trick took care of most of the scoring for the winners with Hughes adding the other goal.

Rollins scorers were Andy Lupenette and Bob Thompson.

The final game of the series is slated for Trenton next Saturday at 4 p.m.

'Big Three' Collect Senior Wins

The three top teams won easily Friday night, but the playoff picture in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior series remain clouded with just two days left in the schedule.

Barrie Flyers rocked Oakville Oaks 12-3, Orillia Terriers triumphed 7-2 over Belleville Mo-Hawks and first-place Galt Hornets rallied to beat Kingston Aces 8-2.

Friday's action left Mo-Hawks with a two-point edge over Owen Sound Crescents in the fight for the sixth and final playoff spot

The Crescents end their schedule with a game in Galt tonight and a game at home against Kingston Sunday, but Belleville will have two games in hand after they entertain Orillia Sunday.

The two unplayed games result from postponements earlier in the schedule.

Only one other playoff spot is in doubt. Oakville and Kingston are tied for fourth with 37 points, but the Oaks' schedule is finished and the Aces still have to play in Owen Sound Sunday.

Galt defenceman Ron Hergott set his sights on his second scoring championship at Kingston, picking up asissts on Galt's first three goals to move one points before Friday's game, Moore.

Hegott has 75 points on 16 goals and 59 assists, compared to 74 for Moore who picked up a goal and assist against Belleville to run his totals to 41 goals and 33 assists.

A third contender, Galt captain Vance Millar, who had 71 points before Friday's game, suffered a concussion when he was checked by Kingstons Bill Burega.

Warriors Cinch Title

University of Waterloo Warriors clinched first place in Ontario-Quebec Athletic Association western division hockey with a 5-2 win over University of Guelph Gryphons Friday night.

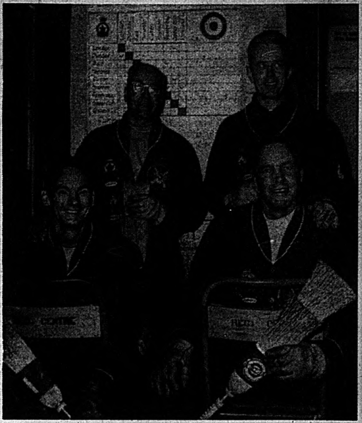
The win gives the Warriors a three-point lead over University of Toronto Blues, who finish their schedule with a game against University of Windsor Lancers today.

University of Western Ontario Mustangs moved to fourth place in Friday's other western division game with a 5-3 win over McMaster University Marlins.

In eastern division action, Queen's Golden Gaels moved into third place with an 11-6 triumph over McGill University Redmen and Carleton University Ravens edged University of Montreal Carabins 5-4.

Greg Sephton, Ian McKegney, Jim Morris, Roger Kropf and Dave Rudge scored Waterloo goals, with Ron Sevigny and Pete Turner scoring for Guelph.

Three third-period goals lifted Western to its win over McMaster, knocking the Marlins out of the playoffs. Windsor could catch the Mustangs by beating Toronto today.



The crucial test for Earl Jesse's Branch 110 host rink, comes today with Sutton Branch 356 providing the opposition. Skipped by George Holborn, Sutton has pressed Trenton from second place since the Ontario championship round robin series got underway in Trenton Thursday. Sutton's record going into today's action three wins, one loss. Members of the rink include, (front row) Jerry Pollock, vice-skip; Keith Dunn, lead; (back row) Bill Stubbins, second; George Holborn skip.

Sutton Rink Only Obstacle To Repeat Win for Jesse

TRENTON — At the half way point in the Canadian Legion Four Day Bonspiel for the Ontario championship, Sutton branch 356 stands between Trenton Branch 110 and the title.

The crucial showdown, scheduled for this morning was delayed by icy road conditions creating transportation difficulties for the entrants.

The chances of Trenton becoming the Provincial Command curling champions for the second successive year, improved yesterday as the rinks from nine Ontario districts continued to compete the CFB base.

So far, Trenton, skipped by Earl Jesse, is the only entry to win all four starts.

Sutton, remained a threat, however in second place with three wins and a loss at the end of the day's play.

London Branch 317, Dundas 36, Kirkland Lake 67 were all tied for third position each with three wins and two losses.

Other results: Pembroke two wins, two losses; Toronto one win, three losses; Galt one win, three losses; Coppercliff one win, two losses.

The final round is being played Sunday morning to decide the championship.

* * *

At the half way point of this morning's contest between defending champion Trenton Legion skipped by Earl Jesse and George Holborn's Sutton foursome, Trenton held a slim 4-3 edge.

A victory by Jesse's rink would assure them of retaining their Provincial title and the right to contest the Dominion Finals, in Charlottetown P.E.I., March 15-19.

Four Teams Battle For Peewee Title

QUEBEC (CP)— Four teams headed into the championship series of the 12th annual Quebec international peewee hockey tournament today after wrapping up divisional titles Friday.

Three teame were from Ontario and the other from Quebec.

Toronto Don Valley won the class AA championship by beating Toronto Shopsys 3-2 in overtime.

In class A, Sault Ste. Marie Ont., also needed overtime to eliminate Oshawa, Ont., by a 2-1 count and take the divisional honors.

Richmond Hill, Ont., won the class B crown with a 3-1 win over Whitby, Ont.

The sole representative of the host province in the grand championship eeries was Donnacona which beat Villeneuve, Que., 5-2 to win class C.

In adition to the final games, semi-final contests were played Friday in groups AA and C.

Shopsys drubbed Quebec Citadelles 9-1 to gain its berth in the AA final while Don Valley whipped Boston 10-3.

In class C semi-finals. Donnacona edged Thornhill, Ont., 4-3 and Villeneuve won a 5-4 overtime contest against Buckingham, Que.

Today's final series pits Don Valley against Richmond Hill and Sault Ste. Marie against Donnacona with the two winners meeting for the grand championship.

In an exhibition game Friday, North Vancouver downed Charlesbourg, Que., 4-2. The British Columbia team was entered in class AA and Charlesbourg in class A.

Chet Checks Pistons, Walt Wallops Royals

Chet Walker of Chicago Bulls is called "The Jet," and he really took off. Walt Wesley of Cleveland Cavaliers does not have a colorful nickname but he flew even higher in National Basketball Association action Friday night.

Walker scored 44 points, 11 in overtime, as the Bulls defeated Detroit Pistons 115-114. It was his field goal with six seconds left that put the game in an extra period. Detroit's Dave Bing led his team with 31 points.

Wesley's super performance of 50 points—20 field goals and 10 foul shots—snapped Cleveland's nine-game losing streak as the Cavaliers downed Cincinnati Royals 125-109.

In other NBA action, Baltimore Bullets took Buffalo Braves 120-113, Phoenix Suns downed Boston Celtics 116-112, Milwaukee Bucks crushed Seattle SuperSonics 128-112, San Diego Rockets dumped San Francisco Warriors 109-103 and Philadelphia 76ers stung Los Angeles Lakers 118-104.

Earl Monroe scored 15 of his 34 points in the fourth quarter as Baltimore rallied to beat Buffalo.

Fourteen straight fourth-quarter points sparked Phoenix past Boston.

Lew Alcindor pushed through a not-unusual 42 points but had a career-high 29 rebounds against the SuperSonics.

Toronto Oldtimers Double Quebec

TORONTO (CP) — NHL Oldtimers, a club made up of former Toronto Maple Leafs, Boston Bruins, New York Rangers and Chicago Black Hawks, scored an 8-4 win over Quebec Oldtimers made up of former Montreal Canadiens at Maple Leaf Gardens Friday night.

The big winner was the Charlie Conacher cancer research fund which picked up all proceeds from the game attended by about 13,000 fans.

Toronto held a 2-1 lead in the first period on goals by Ron Hurst and Pete Conacher. Fleming Mackell replied for Montreal. The only goal of the second period came when Mackell scored his second of the night to tie the score 2-2.

Cal Gardner with two, Gaye Stewart, Ivan Walmsley, Sid scored for Toronto in the third period. Maurice (Rocket) Richard and Elmer Lach replied for Montreal.

Referee Red Storey, former National Hockey League official, called 12 penalties with Montreal getting seven. Goalie Johnny Bower of the Toronto club was given a penalty when he fell while skating to the goal, for "deliberately injuring the ice."

Sport Briefs

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — National Hockey League President Clarence Campbell has suspended Jude Drouin of Minnesota North Stars for three games as a result of misconduct on the ice last Sunday, the team said Friday. In addition to the suspension, the misconduct carries a $150 automatic fine. Drouin will miss Sunday's game against Toronto ,next Wednesday's game against Los Angeles, both at Minneapolis, and next Thursday's match at Toronto. Drouin was involved in a dispute with referee Bruce Hood in the North Stars' 5-4 victory over Pittsburgh. The rookie is Minnesota's leading scorer with 52 points and is fourth in the Western Division of the NHL.

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — DeWitt Weaver and J. C. Snead, nephew of Sam Snead, matched six-under-par 66s and slammed into a tie for the rain-delayed first-round lead in the Tucson Open Friday. Weaver and the drawling 29-year-old Snead held a two-stroke lead over George Archer after completion of this round delayed a day by heavy rains Thursday. Defending champion Lee Trevino knocked in two monster putts — one for an eagle — and led a group of five at 69. The others are Dale Douglass, Don Bies, club pro Paul Harney and Joe Kirkwood.

* * *

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Veteran shortstop Maury Wills signed his 1971 Los Angeles Dodgers contract Friday for slightly less than the $90,000 he is reported to have received in 1970, Dodger sources said. The shortstop has played on all four championship Dodger teams since the club moved from Brooklyn to Los Angeles.

* * *

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Montreal Expos went through their second day of conditioning drills Friday with more of the same scheduled for the 23 batterymen in camp. Two pitchers, Mike Marshall and Bob Reynolds, and catcher Terry Humphrey have been given permission to report late. Third baseman Bob Bailey is the only unsigned player, but he is not to report until March 1.

* * *

DERBY, England (AP) — Derby County of the English Soccer League bought Colin Todd from Sunderland Friday for $408,000, a British record for the transfer of one player. Martin Peters was priced at $480,000 when he moved from West Ham to Tottenham Hotspur last year, but that deal also involved Jimmy Greaves going to West Ham.

* * *

NEW YORK (AP) — Rod Laver, winner of 10 straight Tennis Champions Classic matches for $10,000 each last month, was named winner Friday of the January award in the Hickok Pro-Athlete-of-the-Year poll. The Australian left-runner-up Lew Alcindor. The centre of basket-hander received 216 points and a big margin over ball's Milwaukee Bucks collected 81 points. Phil Esposito of Boston Bruins of the National Hockey League, and golfer Tom Shaw tied for third with 75 points each.

Gymnasts Share Games Spotlight With Firth Skiing Sisters

SASKATOON (CP) — Gymnastics shared the spotlight with skiing Friday as the Canada Winter Games moved into the last two days of its 10-day competition.

While the fabulous Firth sisters of Inuvik, N.W.T. were doing what comes naturally in sweeping the five-kilometre cross-country skiing events at man-made Mount Blackstrap, teen-aged gymnasts Wendy Nicholson of Toronto and Jean Gagnon of Montreal were putting on spectacular shows before overflow crowds at the 1,500-seat university of Saskatchewan Auditorium.

Miss Nicholson won three gold medals, Gagnon two as Ontario and Quebec waged their traditional battle for gymnastic honors.

Nova Scotia provided the surprise in hockey by beating a strong Quebec entry 4-2 to establish themselves as a serious contender for the gold.

With the games due to end Sunday, Ontario appears headed for the medals title, having already amassed 33 golds, 27 silvers and 15 bronzes, well ahead of British Columbia with a 19-13-21 record. Quebec, on the basis of 17 gymnastic medals, moved ahead of Alberta into third place with 19-13-21.

Only six sports remain on the 16-sport calendar, but only skiing will produce medals today. Winners in all other events will be declared Sunday.

Gov.-Gen. Roland Michener will officiate at closing ceremonies in the Saskatoon Arena at 8 p.m. Sunday.

About 5,000 spectators lined a frozen-over lake at the foot of Blackstrap, 25 miles south of here, to see a field of 30 compete in the cross-country event in 30-degree temperatures. A light fog covered the course but there was little, if any wind.

Gold medal winner Shirley Firth averaged about 10 miles an hour with a time of 19 minutes, 56.4 seconds. Her twin-sister, Sharon, took the second-place silver in 20:8.8.

It turned into a family affair with the Allen sisters, Roseanne, 16, and Anita, 19, also of Inuvik, finishing third and fourth respectively.

Skiers will compete for medals today in the 10-kilometre relay.

Quebec Proves Class Of Gymnastics Field

SASKATOON (CP) — Jean Gagnon, a teen-age Montreal salesman, amassed two gold, a silver and two bronze medals to lead all medal winners at the gymnastics competition of the Canada Winter Games.

Gagnon, 19, and his six-man Quebec team were the class of the men's events, although Wendy Nicholson, 14, of Toronto, was a show by herself, gathering in three of Ontario's six gold medals.

"I don't compete for medals, just for the titles," said Miss Nicholson, who captured the coveted women's all round title, as well as the balanced beam and the uneven parallel bars.

She also picked up a second-place silver in the women's floor exercise, as Ontario amassed a total of 14 medals, including seven silver and one bronze.

Gagnon, who hopes to enter University of Michigan this fall on a gymnastics scholarship, was the men's all-round champion and also took the men's floor exercise. He and two of his Montreal team-mates, Conrad Vincent and Pierre Leclerc, are members of Canada's national team. Gagnon's silver came in the still rings. He got a bronze in the men's parallel bars and shared a bronze with Vincent in the men's vault.

But the highlight for the 1,500 partisan fans who filled a University of Saskatchewan auditorium to overflowing for the two-day event, which ended Friday, came in the men's vault when Saskatoon's Tim Sedgewick, 20, beat a field of seven to give Saskatchewan its second gold medal of the games.

Judges gave him marks of 8.9 and 8.6 for his two vaults—10 is perfect—highest scoring of the gymnastics competition. Vincent, the favorite and silver-medal winner, scored an 8.8 on his first vault, but in the second he slipped to the low-sevens.

Tim Sedgewick, 20, was the darling of the Saskatoon gym fans, winning the men's vault to give Saskatchewan its second gold medal of the games.

Miss Nicholson, who got half of Ontario's six gold medals, was excited about winning but admitted she doesn't compete for medals, "only for titles".

She rapped the judges for marking too low, but Robert Blanchette, 20, of Calgary, who brought gasps for his high-voltage performance on the still rings, didn't agree.

"The judging was good," he laughed, "because I won."

Both Miss Nicholson and Gagnon won golds as the best all-round performers. Miss Nicholson's other golds came in the balanced beam and the uneven parallel bars. She also won a silver in the women's floor exercise, as Ontario picked up a total of 14 medals.

Gagnon, Canadian junior champion, also won a gold in the men's floor exercise and added a silver and two bronze medals to his collection as well.

Territories Sweep Cross Country

SASKATOON (CP) — Two attractive Indian girls who haven't been home for more than two months showed the Canada Winter Games Friday how to be winners at cross-country skiing.

Seventeen-year-old twins Shirley and Sharon Firth of Inuvik led a Northwest Territories' sweep of all medals in the five-kilometre event, the first women's Norid competition of the games.

Shirley took the gold with a time of 19 minutes 56.4 seconds; Sharon the silver with 20:08.8 and team-mate Roseanne Allen the bronze with 21:01.9.

Originally from Old Crow, Y.T., the Firth girls go to school at Inuvik, N.W.T. where they are coached by Bjorger Pettersen of Norway.

"He was very happy with our time today," said Shirley.

"It was really more than five kilometres. It was 5.3 or something like that because they had to route the course across the road."

The girls and the rest of the territorial team have been away from home since the first week of December and most of them won't be home until at least March.

"We're going to the Swedish ski games next week," said Sharon, a pretty, Raven-haired carbon copy of her sister. "It will be the third time we've been."

The race was run in 30-degree temperatures over a fogged-in course with little wind. Despite the weather about 5,000 persons paid to watch the race and the other competitions Friday, the second round of the dual slalom.

This features two side-by-side slalom courses on the steep north face of 300-foot Mount Blackstrap. The final of five rounds will be held Sunday.

After four runs—the two first-round runs were held Thursday Rick Merriam of Calgary was in first place with a total time of one minute 46.73 seconds.

Richard Todd, also of Calgary, was second with 1:48.87 and Patrick Lynch of Ottawa third with 1:51.03.

In women's dual slalom after the second day, Sandra Kotyk of Levack, Ont., led with 1:51.61.

Kathy Young of Smithers, B.C. was second with 1:52.93 and Val Watson of Ottawa was third with 1:53.04.

Today is the busiest day for skiers at the games.

Rounds three and four of the men's and woman's dual slalom were scheduled as was the men's 30-kilometres cross-country relay and trial ski jumping.

Sunday, the final round of the dual slalom begins, the jumping on the 50-metre hill will begin and the women's cross-country squads will attack a 15-kilometre relay.

David Cook, 17, of Fort Good Hope, who attends school at Inuvik with the rest of the Northwest Territories team, said the biggest threat to a territorial sweep of cross-country competition will be the Ontario team, particularly Malcolm Hunter of Ottawa.

Hunter, a lanky 20-year-old, won the men's 15-kilometre even Thursday.

"They're going to be tough," said Cook, a member of the Hair Indian band.

He agreed Hunter and most of the other Ontario team had had more experience than the northern squad.

"But, give us a few years".

Ryun Blazes Back to Form With World Record Performance

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — Jim Ryun credited the last-place finisher and Kerry O'-Brien credited the track as both raced to world record victories Friday night in stunning displays of distance running. Ryun with an incredible 3:56.4 mile run, tied the seven-year-old world indoor record of Tom O'Hara, and returned as king of the mile.

He sat out 1969 and 1970 after the pressure of an Olympic Games defeat wrecked his mental timing.

But the feet flashed with the old Ryun sting in the San Diego Indoor Games, despite a planned "runaway" by Chuck LaBenz of the Pacific Coast Club and teammate John Mason.

"Dick Quax really helped me," Ryun said of the New Zealand star who finished last in the field of four. "He started picking it up and I didn't know if I could get him or not. When he moved, I tried to go with him."

Shortly afterwards, O'Brien of Australia ran two miles in an astounding 8:19.2, surpassing the previous world indoor mark by eight seconds and also surpassing the best ever run outdoors, an 8:19.8 by countryman Ron Clarke.

"Unbelievable. I'm stunned," said the effervescent O'Brien, the world outdoor 3,000-metre steeplechase record holder. "This is a fantastic track and the way things were going half way through, I knew I had a chance."

The pace - setters were O'Brien and countryman Kerry Pearce, co-holder of the old world mark with George Young of the U.S. Pearce and O'Brien raced head and head until they completed one mile in 4:09. At that point the pair left the field behind.

The mile had a bigger build-up, though.

LaBenz, star of the outdoor season a year ago, blazed a 54.6-second first quarter and was leading by nearly 100 yards when he passed the half mile in 1:57. Mason was second and closing with Quax far back and Ryun trailing.

Mason caught the fading LaBenz, who said he had hoped to set a hot pace, and Quax made a move with three laps left in the 11-lap race.

Ryun began his move and caught LaBenz and Mason with two laps to go.

Ryun sprinted home effortlessly as Mason made a late bid but finished second in 3:58. LaBenz was next, 3:58.1, and Quax 3:58.9.

The track at the San Diego International Sports Arena is a firmly anchored, wooden surface that's banked high on the turns. Seagren won the pole and Randy Matson captured the shot put at 68-4, highlighting other portions of the meet.

Boston Blanks Seals 5-0

Bruins Big Guns Maintain Firepower

By NICK FERRIS

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Phil Esposito broke into one National Hockey League club Friday night only to find himself on the doorstep of another.

The all-star Boston Bruin centre became the 30th National Hockey League player to score 250 or more goals when he notched his 49th this season as Boston blanked California Golden Seals 5-0.

In the only other game, Philadelphia Flyers nipped Vancouver Canucks 3-2.

In tonight's action, Chicago Black Hawks meet the Canadians at Montreal, St. Louis Blues tangle with the Maple Leafs at Toronto, Pittsburgh Penguins play host to New York Rangers, Boston travels to Los Angeles to play the Kings.

Toronto travels to Minnesota Sunday to play the North Stars, Detroit goes to New York, St. Louis travels to Buffalo and Chicago plays host to Los Angeles.

Esposito's goal against Oakland moved the Sault Ste. Marie Ont., native to within one goal of becoming the fourth member of the NHL's 50-goal club.

Only three players have scored 50 or more goals in one season. Maurice Rocket Richard became the first with Montreal in the 1944-45 season. Team-mate Bernie Boom-Boom Geoffrion equalled the mark 16 seasons later.

Bobby Hull did it four times with Chicago, his best coming in 1968-69 when he notched 58 goals, an NHL season record that could fall this year under Esposito's torried pace.

Esposito's goal and his 111th point, came in his 57th game this season. The Bruin centre set the NHL record for most points in one season when he counted 126 in 1968-69.

Bobby Orr, Esposito's team-mate, picked up one goal and added three assists in Friday's win.

The Bruins were never in any trouble at Oakland, taking a one-goal lead in the first period, adding three within a five-minute space in the second.

The Bruins increased their Eastern Division lead over New York to 11 points while California remained in the West Division cellar eight points back of Los Angeles.

At Vancouver Simon Nolet broke a 2-2 tie with a 10-footer with less than 84 seconds remaining in the middle period.

Ottawa 67s Regain Share of Lead

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The shutout goaltending of Michel Larocque moved Ottawa 67s back into a first-place tie with Peterborough Petes in Ontario Hockey Association Junior A action Friday night.

Larocque chalked up his fourth shutout of the season as 67s blanked last-place Niagara Falls Flyers 4-0.

In Friday's other games, St. Catharines Black Hawks moved into a third-place tie by outscoring London Knights 8-6 and Kitchener Rangers climbed into seventh place with a 7-4 win over Hamilton Red Wings.

Montreal and St. Catharines are seven points back of the leaders, but the Canadiens have two games in hand over the Hawks, who entertain Oshawa Sunday night.

At Niagara Falls, Bryan McSheffrey, Blake Dunlop, David Lee and Wayne Merrick scored for Ottawa. Larocque and Flyers' goalie Keith Pallett each stopped 41 shots.

Bill Barber scored his 30th and 31st goals at Kitchener to help the Rangers move one point in front of London and to within two points of Hamilton.

The Rangers led 5-1 after the first period but saw their lead dwindle to 6-4 in the second. Barber's unanswered goal at 14:51 of the third put it out of reach.

Chuck Blair also fired two for the winners, with Jerry Byers, Chris Ahrens and Ted Scharf adding single goals.

Rick Kehoe scored a pair of goals for Hamilton and single goals went to Ron Leblanc and Russ Friese.

At London, the Knights led 4-1 after the first period, were tied 4-4 midway in the third period, and then came back with two goals in 40 seconds to take a 6-4 lead.

St. Catharines countered with two more goals in less than a minute to tie the score 6-6 and went on to score two more for the win.

Bob Peppler scored three goals for the Hawks, with Marcel Dionne, Bob MacMillan, Jerry Andreatta, Clyde Simon and Paul Shakes adding one each.

Dennis Ververgaert scored three goals for London, which lost its fourth straight. Randy Osburn had two and Reg Thomas one.

Canadians Have Chance For World Titles

LYON (CP-AP) — New world champions in figure skating will be named in the women's and men's singles next week at the Sports Palace in this French city.

Canada has a couple of strong candidates in Karen Magnussen, 18, of Vancouver, the North American women's champion, and Toller Cranston, 21, of Toronto, runner-up for the men's North American title this month in Peterborough.

"Everyone on the Canadian team is skating very well," Miss Magnussen said Friday.

"We're coming along just great. We're well organized and we know all the people."

The 5-foot-3 blue-eyed blonde was speaking of the eight Canadians who will skate in the world championships starting here Tuesday. Ruth Hutchinson, 19, of Vancouver, and Diane Hall, 18, of Toronto, will compete in the women's event along with Miss Magnussen.

Sandra and Val Bezic, a sister-brother team from Toronto, will be in the pairs and Louise Lind and Barry Soper of Vancouver will compete in the dance event. In both pairs competition the Soviet Union's entries are favorites.

The draw for skating order and an opening ceremony will be held Monday and competition starts Tuesday with the first group of compulsory figures for the men, and compulsory figures for pairs and dance couples.

Scoring Leaders

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Boston Bruins' Bobby Orr dominated the score sheet as Boston Bruins coasted to a 5-0 win over California Golden Seals Friday night.

Orr scored a goal and added three assists, bringing his season total to 98 points on 28 goals and 70 assists.

Phil Esposito of the Bruins scored his 49th goal of the season.

The high-scoring centre leads the NHL's scoring race with 111 points on 49 goals and 62 assists.

Have 2 doors kept you out of a Volkswagen?

For some people, even the world's most practical car just isn't practical.

Which meant that up to now, if you wanted a car with four doors and you wanted a Volkswagen too, you were out of luck. (And so were we.)

But not any more. Now there's a big Volkswagen with four doors.

The new VW 411.

Because it's a big car, it can give you everything a big car can:

A luxurious interior.

A big engine.

And scads of trunkspace.

But, because it's a Volkswagen, it can also give you everything a big car can't:

Like mileage: around 27 mpg.

Volkswagen craftsmanship.

And dependability.

So when you get a 411 you get a big car without getting any big car problems.

Because remember: even though it says 411 on the back,

It still says Ⓥ on the front.

Which Day
Is Best?

☐ MONDAY ☐ THURSDAY
☐ TUESDAY ☐ FRIDAY
☐ WEDNES. ☐ SATURDAY

Advertisers frequently ask this question. Fortunately, there is no best day to advertise. Each day new wants arise, bringing new readers as old ones satisfy their wants. We recommend that you start your ad tomorrow and cancel it when you get results. After many years of experience with millions of want ads, we know tomorrow is the best day to start your ad and every day is the best day to advertise in The Intelligencer want ad leader.

Babies Die

Italy Reviews Adoption System

ROME (AP) — A judge in Rome has ordered a nationwide investigation into Italy's muddled adoption system because of the deaths of two babies in private nurseries.

Both children apparently died of natural causes although they entered the nurseries in good health. Officials said they were trying to determine whether they had received improper care.

Prompted by the deaths and reports of maltreatment and fraud in nurseries and orphanages, Judge Luciano Infelisi launched his investigation Friday and police began inspecting 286 children's homes in Italy.

Police with search warrants investigated the quality of food and sanitary conditions at private and state-run facilities in the Rome area. Infelisi said that some very "serious, sensational" abuses were found, but he did not elaborate. Other sources said food in at least one orphanage was inadequate and that police discovered several cases of child-beating.

The judge said he also wants to determine why thousands of children are not being adopted despite applications from thousands of couples.

He said that in several cases adoption proceedings had been grossly mishandled by the institutions.

In one case, a 16-months-old girl changed parents five times in the last year, he said. The child's future remains unsettled.

The Union for the Promotion of the Rights of Minors and several other private organizations have accused orphanages and nurseries of trying to prevent adoptions.

They said would-be foster parents often were shown a selection of sick babies to discourage adoptions so subsidies to the institution would be continued at high levels.

Subsidies average about $3 a day a child. Recent statistics show that about 300,000 children are receiving subsidies in Italy. They are orphans, abandoned, poor or handicapped children.

Oshawa-region Study Presented

WHITBY (CP) — A report on regional government for the Oshawa-Whitby area suggests that the eastern boundary of Metropolitan Toronto be expanded to include the West Rouge area of Pickering Township.

The report by consultant Donald Paterson was presented to the Oshawa-area planning and development study Friday. It provides a study with recommendations on political structure and boundaries for the Oshawa.

Regional government is scheduled to be implemented in the area next Jan. 1.

The report rejects giving all of Pickering Township to Metro Toronto because "a significant portion of the total east-area development would greatly weaken the Oshawa-centred region if transferred to Metro.

Mr. Paterson recommends that Oshawa become the only city in a region which would include eight other municipalities, each of which would be called a town.

The region, which would tentatively be called the Regional Municipality of Oshawa-Ontario, would include all of Ontario County plus the three southwestern municipalities of the United counties of Northumberland-Durham-Bowmanville, Darlington and Cartwright townships.

Reeve John Williams of Pickering Township said the township's objections to being split in half were ignored, and he was unhappy with the report.

He said the township had wanted to join Metropolitan Toronto as a borough.

Mayor Desmond Newman of Whitby said he was satisfied with the recommendation to leave his town's boundaries intact against the wishes of Oshawa which had sought a Whitby-Oshawa merger.

Mayor Edward McNeely of Oshawa said he was unhappy the report had suggested that Oshawa, with 46 per cent of the new region's population, would have only seven of 18 members on the council.

Anglers Get Maps

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Anglers will be able this year to get maps from the department of lands and forests of some 200 Ontario lakes listing the species of fish in each, the depth, water temperatures and volume oxygen content and other statistics.

Department biologist Frank Maher told the 43rd annual convention of the Ontario Federation of Anglers and Hunters Friday that the department hopes to survey most of the province's 250,000 lakes, but to date only 2,000 have been completed. Information has been gathered on another 8,000.

G. H. Bayly, deputy minister of the department, told the convention on behalf of the minister, Rene Brunelle, that 23 lamprey producing streams flowing into Lake Ontario will be treated this year with a reduction in lamprey expected by 1972.

The department also expects to stock Lake Ontario with rainbow trout, chinook, coho and kokanee salmon.

Loader Heads Employment Body

Reginald Loader, Canadian representative of the International Jewelery Workers Association, has been elected as the new chairman of the Belleville and District Employment Committee.

Reginald Tucker, Administrator of Welfare for Hastings County and former chairman declined nomination. Mr. Tucker said that the position should be a circulating one. He said that this would ensure that all members of the committee could realize the benefits of leading a group of this kind.

Russell Sills, Reeve of Huntingdon Council was elected vice - chairman and James Staveley secretary -treasurer.

Petition Would Halt Divorces

ROME (AP) — Roman Catholic laymen's groups are intensifying a campaign to have Italy's divorce law submitted to the voters for a final "yes-or-no" action.

Three anti-divorce organizations have been formed on a national scale. They say they are confident the people in a referendum will reject this Roman Catholic land's new controversial divorce law.

One of the three groups, the Catholic Alliance, has applied to courts for permission to start collecting 500,000 voter signatures, a requisite for a national referendum. The other two plan to follow suit.

"Even some bishops have told us they will support our movement," says Agostino Sanfratello, president of the Catholic Alliance. The Vatican has yet to take an official stand on the referendum issue, although it had attacked legal divorce ever since legislation was introduced in the parliament five years ago.

When the bill became law Dec. 1, Pope Paul was on his Asian-Pacific trip and the Vatican reported the pontiff's "profound suffering" over the law.

The Holy See contends that the law violates the 1929 concordate between the Vatican and Italy. The pact gave religious marriages a civil status, but also left the matter of divorce within the jurisdiction of the church's Rota.

Drug Overdose Centres Needed to Ease Hospitals

TORONTO (CP) — Establishment of two or three treatment centres to deal exclusively with cases of drug overdoses was recommended Friday to the executive committee of Metropolitan Toronto council.

John Pollard, Metro's commissioner of emergency services, told the committee the emergency wards of Toronto hospitals are being overloaded with people suffering from drug overdoses.

He said about 1,200 drug cases were transported to hospital in November and again in December by his department's 24-hour emergency ambulance service.

OTTAWA (CP) — Compulsory treatment of marijuana users in special centres under the Mental Health Act is recommended by the United Church board of evangelism and social service.

A brief by the church body to the Le Dain commission on non-medical drug use Friday says fine or imprisonment is not "an appropriate solution" to casual marijuana use.

A user "should be given compulsory treatment in a suitable specialized therapeutic centre under the Mental Health Act, in a controlled non-punitive environment."

"More advanced drug users should have similar but separate treatment facilities."

The brief was presented at public hearings of the commission, nearing the end of its inquiry under Dean Gerald Le Dain of Osgoode Hall law school.

The church board diagnoses addiction as "a spiritual problem."

"People who find life so difficult that they need a crutch or who want to get away from the despair engendered by a feeling that life is meaningless will continue to take the 'cop-out' of their choice, whether it be marijuana, hard drugs, alcohol, tobacco or commercially marketed tranquillizers."

Borowski Draws Wide Criticism For Comment on Crippled Veteran

WINNIPEG (CP) — Public Works Minister Joe Borowski drew criticism Friday from a cabinet colleague, the Royal Canadian Legion and an opposition MLA for reported remarks about a war veteran working at the legislature as a security guard.

Mr. Borowski earlier suspended security guard T. P. Jones for five days over a missing key, which since has been returned anonymously by mail.

Discussing the incident at a Wellington NDP constituency meeting Wednesday, Mr. Borowski said the guard would have been dismissed instead of just suspended if he had worked for any other employer.

He was reported as saying he had received some criticism for not dismissing Mr. Jones because the "man is 70 per cent disabled. What kind of security can we get from a person who's a cripple because of the war?"

Labor Minister A. R. Paulley said he is "disgusted" by the alleged remarks. He added that if Mr. Borowski was quoted correctly, the remarks are "immature and derogatory" and the minister should apologize.

Ed Hodgert, executive secretary of the Manitoba and Northwestern Ontario Legion Command, termed Mr. Borowski's remarks "a form of persecution."

Leonard Claydon, Conservative member of the legislature for Wolseley, said he had written Premier Ed Schreyer demanding Mr. Borowski's suspension from the cabinet.

Federal Bill on Clean Air Is Called Weak Legislation

OTTAWA (CP) — As motherhood bills go, the opposition pronounced Friday, the proposed federal clean air act is somewhat over-rated.

The legislation, designed to give the federal government power to take a national initiative against air pollution, is up for second reading in the Commons.

While most opposition spokesmen approved the bill in principle, many contended that it is a less formidable anti-pollution weapon than would appear.

Fisheries Minister Jack Davis, to become environment minister upon passage of the government reorganization bill, said the clean air bill would effect research into air pollution, arrangements for the establishment of air pollution abatement projects, and the enforcement of air quality standards nationally.

There would be national emission standards for smokestacks, automobiles, and so on, with fines of $200,000 provided for violators shown to have constituted "a significant danger to the health of persons."

Air quality objectives would be established, so air could be rated as "desirable," "acceptable" or just "tolerable" and so the various levels of government could be prepared to move in with all their resources when the air was designated "intolerable."

Ran Harding NDP — Kootenay West, his party's environment critic, was not impressed despite his concession that the bill represents "a step forward".

The bill, he said, would not give the minister responsibility for automobile pollution, which represented 60 per cent of all air pollution. That field would be left to the transport department, and thus the federal approach to air pollution would be as "fragmented" as its approach to water pollution.

The bill depended on the cooperation of the provinces because the federal government insisted on "hiding behind the constitution."

Canadians said Mr. Harding, "are sick and tired of having the solution of pollution problems delayed because of mixed jurisdictions."

Mr. Davis agreed that considerable emphasis would have to be placed on co-operation with the provinces, including formal agreements to designate air quality problem areas and to develop special air control measures and enforcement procedures.

The provinces had all welcomed the federal clean air initiative and were prepared to accept national emission standards.

"All they ask is that they be consulted, that they have some say in the development of these particular objectives, guidelines and standards."

Mr. Harding's strongest complaint was that industries would not be subject to emission standards unless they constituted a significant danger to people's health.

Nobody need worry about emission causing "a little bit of discomfort, a little bit of nausea or some skin irritation."

Gordon Aiken PC — Parry Sound-Muskoka said that prosecutions would be very difficult using the criterion of significant danger to health — the headlines about $200,000 fines didn't really mean much when considered in that light.

The bill also failed to provide any instrument to distribute federal funds to the provinces.

"We might as well be honest about it. The provincial legislatures are interested in working with the federal government in such areas when money is to be provided."

James A. McGrath PC — St. John's East continued his running battle with Mr. Davis over what the minister's department-to-be should be called.

Mr. McGrath has an amendment to the reorganization bill before the House that would have the department to be created called "the department of fisheries and the environment" instead of just "the department of the environment."

On the grounds that his amendment has not reached a vote, the Newfoundland member said that the clean air bill's references to the environment department were premature.

Acting Speaker Russell Honey refused to allow a vote that would have given the clean air bill second reading until he has come to a decision on Mr. McGrath's procedural point.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Woman Handled Pair of Problems

The following letter is an interesting case history recently sent me by a woman who solved two problems.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Here's how I lost weight and regained my mind. I have a cup of coffee with my husband in the morning, half - and - half with lots of sugar. At noon I have a knockwurst sausage or a piece of Polish sausage, which I really prefer for its flavor, and drink some skimmed milk.

For dinner, I have everything and anything I want. Mashed potatoes, loads of lettuce and tomatoes, salad with garlic dressing made with oil and spices, all kinds of vegetables as I desire, all the meat I want and dessert if it's unusual and to my liking. If I get hungry between meals I may have more coffee or skimmed milk or tomato juice.

Believe it or not, I have lost over 20 pounds in two months on this diet. Probably someone else would gain on it. I am off all tranquilizers which I had been on for 10 years.

I couldn't feel better. I am 49. I have two sons, 10 and 11. My husband says I am a different person since I lost weight. He gets a kick out of my energy and spunk. My 10-year-old couldn't keep up with me when shopping one day.

I'm jolly and have lots of fun, enjoy reading, take care of three beds of lilies in the back yard. My husband has classes after work two nights a week and doesn't get home until midnight or later so I have the kids on my hands a lot. But they have fun with me and I enjoy them more because I am patient and understanding.

I had an unhappy youth, in and out of a state mental hospital for 13 years since I was 23. I was upset for two years before I was committed. Some doctors didn't think I'd make it.

When I was a child Mom couldn't express affection for me, and she used to criticize my dad all the time. She told me I should never get married. I grew up on a farm, but was not permitted to know anything about sex. When I was in my teens I couldn't believe that intercourse could possibly happen. It just couldn't. I thought I menstruated by osmosis. I couldn't believe I had female parts. Boy, did I have a lot to learn and unlearn.

I was 35 when I married. Met my husband in the state hospital. He was there two years. So you see it's almost 15 years since we were married. Neither my husband nor I have had any breakdowns since. And our two boys are as normal and happy as you'd see anywhere. We're a close-knit family.

I hope you'll print this, Dr. Steincrohn, for two reasons. The first is that anyone can lose weight if they put their mind to it, even though it seems to be a peculiar diet like mine.

And second, it is not inevitable that a broken mind cannot heal. In our case two broken minds joined to make two healthy ones. And we're bringing up our youngsters in such a way that their minds won't bend or break either. I pray many other "hopeless" persons read what I've written. — Mrs. L.

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I have been taking high-blood pressure pills for four years. I keep refilling them without seeing my doctor. I haven't gone back for a checkup in two years.

My trouble is that I get terribly depressed. I should have no worries, financial or otherwise. Could it be the high blood pressure? — Mrs. R.

Comment: It's time for your checkup. It's long overdue. It's possible that the medicine you are taking is causing the depression. One or two high blood pressure drugs act that way on some patients and need to be exchanged for another medication.

• • •

For Mrs. V.: I doubt that garlic and parsley are making your blood pressure "very low." Neither do I believe that they are good for "virus." Check with your doctor. What seems like very low blood pressure may actually be normal.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For February 21

Your birthday today: It is unlikely that at the end of this year you will wind up headed in the same direction as you're now going. Be willing to adapt to changing conditions and new personal needs.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Concentrate care and attention on the present. Emotional sharing, mutual support between you and your loved ones is important.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Some stress exists in family, neighborhood matters. You help most by remaining unruffled. Wait before offering suggestions.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): You are on your own in most things. Expect changes of schedules, unplanned incidents. Avoid too quick a reaction.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Encouragement of those near you is needed. Observers may draw wild conclusions from your choice of associates.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Take the simplest drift pattern through this day; jump to no conclusions. Consider your own projects.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): You have the chance to observe a special form of tantrum: "I don't know what I want but this is not it" or something of the sort.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Settle on a simple timetable of home-centred activities. You help just by being yourself.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Departures from custom may be necessary. Neither close agreements nor open disputes produce results. Wait for a middle course tomorrow.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): It now develops you neglected to announce pertinent details, and like as not, haven't heard enough of others' plans. Strive for moderation.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): You are probably your own greatest obstacle today. Find a comfortable level and try taking it easy for a change.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 19) Your theories encounter exceptions, subjective personal expressions people offer beyond logic. Make notes rather than trust memory.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Feelings, attitudes, behavior patterns all surge in strong unexpected patterns today. Relax early.

For February 22

Your birthday today: A year opens in which you are likely to have put into your hands more work and responsibility than you are prepared to carry. Much personal preparation is indicated, including experiences you've gotten yourself into by accident or whim. Two temptations are to be met and conquered: self-indulgence, and holding on to material resources too desperately. Emotional development comes in leaps with occasional brief reverses. Today's natives often know many things without having to study them.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Go directly to the main point in your work; waste no time on side issues. Whatever you do, proceed with optimism.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Original presentations are first nature — use what comes from intuition. Improvise experiments are strongly favored.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Be a little hesitant to buy partnership share, you may do somewhat better than today's terms.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Chores you've been dodging turn out to be easier than feared, some of them even enjoyable.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): It's beneath your natural dignity to quibble over money, but look twice at today's budget and related matters.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept.: 22) Select routines you can do alone or with little collaboration, and get a fresh perspective.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Make the most of the varied offerings the world has for you. Romance is indicated for the eligible.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): After recent squalls in relationships, the turn is back to smooth, co-operative practicality — do it gracefully.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Be just a trifle cool, let others come a little closer before reacting. Aid somebody less fortunate.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Organize business affairs thoroughly; but let romantic and social relations go in whatever directions they drift.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Your persuasive powers are at a peak. Use every means to work yourself up in the world.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Open the door for newcomers. It's merely a short time until the same on a grander scale comes to you.

Cottage Owners in Southern Ontario May Face Spring Woes

By NORMAN GRAHAM
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Cottagers in southern Ontario could be in for a shock this spring if they have not made arrangements to have snow cleared off their cottage roofs.

A survey of provincial police detachments in resort areas disclosed that the above-average snowfall this winter has already caused some roofs to cave in.

And the worst damage could come with the next heavy snowfall, says Bernie Floyd, secretary of the Federation of Ontario Cottagers Associations.

Mr. Floyd said the current mild spell is creating problems because higher temperatures packs snow on the roofs and it won't blow off. Then it turns to ice.

"Another heavy snowfall on top of the ice will cause a lot of roofs to give in," Mr. Floyd said.

The Ontario department of labor has warned that snow piled on the roofs of arenas could be dangerous. H. Y. Yoneyama, executive director of the department's safety and technical services division said that heavy snow should be removed from all arena roofs immediately.

The Minden OPP detachment in the Haliburton region said its men have been hearing about "quite a few cave-ins."

One Minden officer said in the Apsley provincial police area north of Peterborough there have been reports of "one in five cottages damaged by snow."

The Owen Sound provincial police detachment said there is concern in the Sauble Beach area on Georgian Bay north of Owen Sound about the amount of snow on roofs.

"We're getting reports from officers and the public of snow up to three and four feet high on roofs," an officer said.

An officer at the Bracebridge provincial police detachment in the Muskoka region said he had not heard of any cottage cave-ins but the heavy snow caused a shed belonging to a Bracebridge planing mill to cave in and the roof of a new motel in Huntsville to collapse. Mr. Floyd said most cottages are not built to take a heavy snow load on the roof.

"Prefabricated cottages are especially susceptible to cave-ins."

Mr. Floyd said he is worried about the cottages belonging to members who live in the United States.

"Many of them don't realize the amount of snow there is up here," he said. "But it's a fact that the snowbelt runs through much of southern Ontario's resort area."

Girls as Rover Scouts Might Shake B-P

OTTAWA (CP) — Acceptance of girls into Rover scout troops is one of the changes that might shake Lord Baden-Powell if he were still alive.

But the founder of the Boy Scout-Girl Guide movement would also have to accept the fact that both are having some recruiting problems today.

However, the emphasis is on the new as the Boy Scouts and the Girl Guides of Canada prepare to celebrate Scout-Guide Week next week. The Scouts are 63 years old and the Guides 61.

There's far less importance placed apparently now on uniforms, salutes, ranks and marching. Personal development, through concern about topical issues such as conversation, is in.

Bob Milks of the Boy Scouts says scouting has turned from rigid structure to informality in order to "encourage the boys to develop interests, not to force them to come out alike".

Scouting today involved "learning how to live."

Mrs. Doris E. Whiteside of the Girl Guides of Canada, says "we're for girls, not to make them stand at attention but to make them better citizens."

One change is the recent experimental acceptance of girls into Rover crews as associate Rovers.

Before the program was officially begun, Rover crews had already admitted young women and the official move was formal recognition of the desire of the boys for co-ed scouting, Mr. Milks says.

The guides have not returned the favor by extending membership to boys. But a January news release said that the Girls Guides encourages joint activities of Guides and Scouts.

Clinton School Mooted

OTTAWA (CP) — Defence Minister Donald Macdonald told the Commons Friday that no decision has yet been reached on the possible establishment of an air services training school at Clinton, Ont.

He had been asked by Robert E. McKinley PC—Huron whether the defence department will operate such a school in co-operation with the transport department.

When Mr. Macdonald said a decision has not been reached "as yet," the Conservative MP asked that it be speeded so the former RCAF Clinton base, if not to be used for this purpose, can be put to other use.

McClelland Voices View

Independence More Important Than Publishing

WOODSTOCK (CP) — "Canadian independence is much more important than publishing to me and I hope to you," the president of McClelland and Stewart Ltd., which went on sale Thursday because of financial troubles, told high school students here Friday.

Jack McClelland encouraged the students and their parents to become members of the Committee For an Independent Canada.

The government, he said, could assist the publishing field through the industrial development branch by making loans available at a low rate of interest on a long term basis.

By Friday afternoon, Mr. McClelland said he had had numerous callers but there were no "serious prospective investors."

"I hope the company will be sold in Canada," he said.

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — W. C. Heine, editor of The Free Press, is personally offering $500 and asking "economic nationalists" to put up money to buy the McClelland and Stewart Ltd. publishing house which went on sale in Toronto Thursday.

"If enough people pledge to buy common stock in McClelland and Stewart this fine book-publishing company might be preserved as a purely Canadian book-publishing firm," Mr. Heine writes in an editorial page column.

He said he will undertake to buy $500 worth of the firm's common stock at par value under Ontario Security Commission regulations, if and when the stock is issued.

Proper Girl--Before Drugs

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Wearing a bright yellow mini-dress and in bubbly good spirits, Leslie Van Houten told the jury that convicted her in the Sharon Tate murders that she was "a proper little girl" until she started taking drugs.

"I like winning, and I always did," the 21-year-old defendant testified Friday, recalling a middle-class childhood in which she was active in clubs and was elected high school homecoming princess.

Then Miss Houten said, her parents were divorced and "at first that shattered me because I thought people were supposed to be happy when they got married. . . . "

"I found out that nobody has a typical, normal family. They're all weird."

At 15 she fell in love with a boy who taught her to smoke marijuana and take LSD, she said.

"I lost interest in competing, period," she said. "It was pointless."

Larger Classes Feared

OTTAWA (CP) — Larger classes and a reduction in special programs may be a result of provincial ceilings on education spending, says Wilfred Book, the new chairman of the Ontario Secondary School Headmasters Council.

Both Mr. Book, principal of Fort Frances secondary school, and the council's new vice-chairmen, Karl Webb of South Porcupine and John Skew of London, said in interviews that the most urgent concern for Ontario principals in the next year will be the effects of provincial ceilings.

The chairmen were chosen at a two-day conference ending here Friday at which more than 300 Ontario secondary school principals were warned that their role has changed drastically from the day when a principal was an unchallenged authoritarian in the school.

Rail Snowplow Somersaults

GRANTON, Ont. (CP) — Two trainmen in the cab of a somersaulting Canadian National Railways snowplow pushed by three diesel engines, escaped injury Friday when the plow hit packed snow drifts, reared up then fell back on the first engine and rolled off.

Two of the units pushing the 30-ton plow were derailed in the accident which occurred about 20 miles north of London, a CNR spokesman said, and attempts to clear the wreckage would likely be made today.

Tony Vertulia and Murray Atwell, who had a bump on his head, were the two men riding the plow. The five other crew members of the train escaped injury.

"We were flying through the air all of a sudden and I didn't know where we were," Mr. Vertulia said. "I thought we must have rolled at least twice.

"I got up on my feet and I saw my buddy lying on the floor . . . or was it the roof. I thought he had had the biscuit, but all of a sudden he sat up and told me to turn off the stove.

"I did that but then I couldn't turn off the oil . . . Geez I couldn't turn off that oil."

Stock Prices Fall Despite Interest Rate

By ART JOHNSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Canadian stock markets dropped lower again this week, despite interest-rate reductions early in the five-day period.

The Toronto Stock Exchange's industrial index, a key indicator of market movement, lost 1.18 points to 176.50.

At the Montreal and Canadian exchanges, the composite index dropped 1.09 to 174.11.

On Monday, markets responded to a reduction in the Bank of Canada's rate to 5.75 per cent from six per cent by moving upward. A bank rate reduction is generally taken to mean easing monetary conditions.

However, markets began to fall into a losing pattern Tuesday. A reduction in the Toronto Dominion Bank's prime rate to 6.75 per cent from seven per cent apparently had no effect on markets.

Prime rate is the interest charged on loans to a bank's best customers. Canada's other chartered banks did not make similar reductions in their interest rates.

It was the third consecutive week that Canadian stock markets have moved downward.

Wall Street showed similar erosion this week. The Dow-Jones average of 30 industrial issues dropped 10.27 points to 876.56. Volume at the New York Stock Exchange was 74.58 million shares, compared with 110.61 million last week, the busiest five days in the exchange's history.

However, the exchange was closed Monday, George Washington's birthday.

Canadian stock markets started 1971 with a rally extending to several weeks but observers say corrections may now be in order.

Babson's February Canadian Investment Letter says the rally in stock prices "is based mainly on psychological factors, rather than the prospect of dramatically-higher earnings and profits over the new term."

The investment letter says "a near-term correction in stock prices is likely," but after the dip, prices should "resume their upward pattern."

On index at Toronto, base metals were down 2.50 to 92.44 and western oils 5.00 to 204.96.

Volume dropped to 10.95 million shares from 11.50 million last week.

At the Montreal and Canadian exchanges, combined volume was 5.07 million shares, down from 6.04 million last week.

Losses outnumbered gains 217 to 157.

74 Are Killed, Hundreds Hurt

JACKSON, Miss. (CP) — Dozens of tornadoes tore across the flat lands of the Mississippi River Delta Sunday night. Authorities said today that 74 persons were killed, hundreds of others were injured and thousands of homes and businesses were destroyed.

Sixty-eight of the deaths were in Mississippi and the other six in Louisiana. Twisters also hit two cities in east Texas, but no deaths were reported.

And another section of the Midwest was hit Sunday with a heavy snowstorm. Five persons were killed in Oklahoma, Kansas and Missouri and many travellers were stranded, including two lanes of cars more than four miles long on the Kansas Turnpike.

The death toll climbed sharply early today when authorities reported additional victims in Mississippi's LeFlore County and in Inverness, Miss.

Mississippi officials reported 19 killed in rural LeFlore County, including 16 at Pugh City where, a deputy sheriff

The twisters also struck Tennessee and Texas, causing many injuries and considerable property damage.

The National Guard was called in to help rescue operations in two of the Mississippi towns.

Most of the damage was in the fertile cotton and soybean producing areas of the delta. This area is covered mainly by small farms, although there are some large plantations left.

At least nine towns in Mississippi were hit by the big winds.

One of the hardest hit areas was the town of Inverness, which was destroyed.

The storm swept out of the Texas Panhandle. A few twisters were reported in Texas, where there was damage and several injuries reported in the small town of Athens.

The twister then hit the ground in Louisiana as it headed east, skipped into the delta area and then to south central Tennessee.

In Louisiana, near Delhi, six persons died when a tornado lifted a frame house from its foundation and splintered it over a wide area.

A spokesman for the University of Mississippi at Oxford said 40 students were taken to hospital after a tornado struck a trailer park on the edge of the campus. He said 50 trailers were destroyed and 50 others damaged.

Some trailers were wrapped around huge pine trees like pieces of wire.

At Inverness, a community of about 1,100 persons about 90 miles northwest of Jackson, authorities said a Negro section was flattened and all homes in a four-block white residential area were either destroyed or heavily damaged. Nine persons were killed there.

Israeli Reply Seen Keeping Door Open

JERUSALEM (Reuter) — Israeli's reaction to the latest Egyptian peace proposals left the way open for full and detailed negotiations while handing the invitation back to Cairo, diplomatic observers here said today.

The Israel response — yet to be officially communicated — after a four-hour cabinet meeting Sunday welcomed the Egyptian move as positive, although it rejected the idea of any prior commitments before detailed negotiations began.

The Israeli statement clearly reiterated its determination not to withdraw to the pre-1967 war borders, while at the same time declaring its readiness to start negotiations on this and other outstanding issues.

In Cairo, a statement attributed to an Egyptian official source and distributed by the Middle East news agency, described the Israeli statement as a clear and categoric rejection of the peace proposals by UN envoy Gunnar Jarring.

The Israeli response was to an Egyptian offer to conclude a formal peace agreement providing the Israelis evacuated Sinai and other Arab territories occupied in the 1967 war.

It appears likely Egypt now will launch a new diplomatic offensive against Israel within the UN before March 7, when the current ceasefire expires.

A statement by Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban, while discounting the possibility of a quick solution to the conflict, was seen here as showing restrained optimism.

It was the first time Israel ever has welcomed an Egyptian move as positive, while Eban said that it was the first time Egypt had ever suggested the idea of a peace agreement.

Until now Israel has refused to define what it considered to be the borders necessary for its security or enter into details on other subjects until Egypt declared its readiness for peace.

This obstacle now has been removed.

Black Foster Homes Sought

TORONTO (CP) — A weekend conference of Canadian black students passed a resolution to form an organization to find black foster homes for black children without parents, a conference spokesman said Sunday.

Rocky Jones, a conference organizer, told a news conference the resolution was passed because "there is no reason why black children should be in white foster homes."

White reporters had been barred from the three-day conference, and Mr. Jones said he would comment only on resolutions that directly affected the white community.

He said another resolution called on the black community to help black students in their education and follow their progress to see their needs were served.

Mr. Jones said other resolutions included:

—One condemning Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia for what the conference termed the massacre of Ethiopian students and peasants;

—One recommending that black countries in the Commonwealth withdraw and form their own organization.

Six Policemen Slain in States

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Six policemen in four U.S. cities were shot and killed in incidents during the weekend. The police commissioner of Philadelphia blamed citizens who he said "are promoting anarchy" for the two killings there.

The other deaths included a marshal and state trooper killed during a shootout with two men in St. John, Ind., and an officer shot dead in a gunfight in Greenville, S.C.

A policeman was killed in Silver Springs M.D., when a fellow officer's gun discharged during a struggle with a kidnap suspect.

News Briefs

LONDON (Reuters) — Foreign Secretary Sir Alec Douglas-Home said today Britain would allow the export of Wasp helicopters if the South African government placed orders for them.

Laotian Traffic Doubled

SAIGON (AP) — More heavy North Vietnamese attacks stalled the south Vietnamese drive into Laos today for the fifth successive day. Forward elements of Saigon's 16,000-man force were still only 17½ miles from the border they crossed two weeks ago.

Military sources said the campaign also had not achieved its objective, to cut the flow of Communist supplies down the Ho Chi Minh trail. Instead, these sources said, the North Vietnamese had doubled the truck traffic, from 1,000 to about 2,000 "movers" a day, and diverted them to the west to routes beyond the South Vietnamese advance.

"The enemy conducted at least 10 indirect fire attacks with rockets and mortar rounds against South Vietnamese fire bases and field positions in the southern panhandle of Laos Sunday, causing light over-all casualties," a South Vietnamese communique said.

A spokesman said they were the heaviest attacks since Saigon's troops moved into Laos Feb. 8. He would not disclose specific casualties, but "light over-all casualties" indicated some units may have suffered moderate or heavy losses.

The U.S. command announced the loss of two more helicopters to enemy anti-aircraft fire in Laos, and said four Americans were missing and two were wounded.

Duality Vital

Trudeau Warns Quebec To Retain Bilingualism

MONTREAL (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Sunday Quebec would plunge itself into continuing self - improvement" if it did away with existing English-language rights.

Addressing about 3,000 federal Liberal party supporters at a fund-raising dinner, Mr. Trudeau said Quebec must preserve its bilingual and bicultural character.

"Quebec experiences the Canadian duality where it lies," he said. "It is part of its deepest self.

"If Quebec were to deny, or to claim to lesson or neglect this vital dimension of its being, it would commit an injustice, a betrayal of its responsibility which would result in continuing self-impoverishment."

In a question-and-answer session following his speech, Mr. Trudeau said that whether minority language rights would be entrenched in a new constitution would depend upon the provinces' attitudes.

He said, however, that Quebec should not have to undertake any more "obligations" toward its English-speaking minority than the other provinces do toward French-Canadian citizens.

Canadians from other provinces were becoming more aware that the English-speaking provinces must do as much for their French-speaking minority populations as Quebec does for its English-speaking group.

Mr. Trudeau said "significant progress" was made at the constitutional conference earlier this month toward general application of the principle of equal treatment of linguistic minorities across Canada.

In his speech, Mr. Trudeau called on English-speaking Canadians to ensure the participation of French-Canadians in "every aspect of national life" in order to "strengthen Quebec's influence and authority throughout the world."

The survival of the French language and culture in English-speaking North America meant that Quebec had to become a "dynamic link in a vigorous Canada."

Mr. Trudeau said the Canadian federal system guarantee Quebec's ties with the rest of the world.

"Nowhere in the world can Quebec's voice be more readily heard or better understood than here as part of Canada," he said.

Mr. Trudeau also called on Quebecers to destroy the "ancient myth that we, as a minority in this country, cannot be other than subjugated, dispossessed and humiliated" and to participate to a greater degree in all aspects of Canadian life.

He said Quebecers should overcome the "fatalistic attitude" that they have no place in such fields as trade, industry, business and technology.

Lortie in Contempt At Paul Rose Trial

MONTREAL (CP) — Bernard Lortie was found in contempt of Court today when he refused to testify at the kidnap-murder trial of Paul Rose, charged with the slaying of Pierre Laporte.

Brought to the witness box, Lortie refused to be sworn and said: "I am not making any statement. I am not going to testify."

Mr. Justice Marcel Nichols declared: "I find you in contempt of court and will pronounce sentence March 1."

Lortie nodded and was led from the court.

Earlier two police witnesses testified they had given Paul Rose copies of the stenographic notes of Friday's court proceedings and had shown him all the exhibits produced, including firearms, photographs, maps and articles of clothing.

Rose had been asked whether he had anything to say and had replied in the negative.

Lortie is one of three other men accused with Paul Rose in the Laporte death. His trial is scheduled for March.

The judge adjourned the Rose trial Friday after Lortie refused to add anything further to his testimony.

Lortie, who peppered his testimony with statements that the trial was a "big farce" and that "the witness is hostile to the court" said the adjournment "won't change anything" as he was led from the courtroom.

Uruguay Terrorists Free Brazil Consul

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay (AP) — The Tupamaro guerrillas freed Brazilian Consul Aloysio Mares Dias Gomide late Sunday night, and he and his wife flew to Brazil today. But the terrorists still hold an American Agronomist and the British ambassador.

The 41-year-old diplomat was released near the end of a day on which the government restored civil liberties, the final requirement set by the guerrillas for his freedom after nearly seven months in captivity.

"I feel very good; they treated me very well," Dias Gomide told reporters as an embassy car brought him to a friend's apartment where his wife was waiting. Police said the diplomat told them he had been kept in four different places during his confinement.

A little later he made a brief appearance on a sixth-floor balcony and was applauded loudly by a crowd below.

Brazilian Ambassador Luiz Bastian Pinto said the consul was "very tired" but in "relatively good health."

The Brazilian's wife was reported to have paid at least $250,000 in ransom for her husband. The New York Times during the weekend received a letter renewing a demand of $1 million ransom for Dr. Claude L. Fly, the American agricultural expert kidnapped Aug. 7.

THE WEATHER

The start of one of the many races held at the fairgrounds on Sunday. It was no day of rest for the 142 participants that were competing for prize money awarded by the Quinte Exhibition. A crowd of 1,500 was there to see the races that covered most of the afternoon. Considering the danger of this sport, it is remarkable that there were just two accidents during the course of the day and only one of these involved a snowmobile.

Three Killed in Highway 7 Accidents

THREE indent en ma t1.2

Two separate collisions on Highway 7 north of here killed three people over the weekend.

Two Ottawa men, John Temponeras, 28, and George E. Katinas, 38, died shortly after noon Sunday five miles west of Madoc when their late model car was in collision with a car driven by Peter Tuttelburg, 38, of 302 Dufferin Ave. Belleville.

The Temponeras vehicle was eastbound on Highway 7 at 1:50 p.m. Sunday when it came in collision with the Tuttelberg car which was proceeding west. Mr. Tuttelberg was taken to Belleville General Hospital with severe head and right leg injuries and transferred immediately to Kingston General Hospital. He was reported unconscious this morning and in critical condition.

His wife, Donna, 33, was admitted to Belleville General Hospital with a fractured ankle and arm lacerations. Two of the couple's four children, aged 8 and 9, were treated and released. Eric, 3 and Kira 2, were hospitalized with head injuries.

Lynnette Phain, 19, Warkworth, died this morning in Kingston General Hospital, where she was taken with head injuries following an accident west of Marmora on Highway 7 at 7:20 p.m. Saturday.

Miss Phain was a passenger in a car driven by Glen Martin Deline, 20, Marmora. Mr. Deline suffered injuries to his hip, ankle and chest and was taken to Belleville General Hospital.

The accident occurred when the Deline vehicle came in collision with a department of highways sander driven by Donald William Garden, 22, Norwood.

Company Spokesman Complains of Holdup

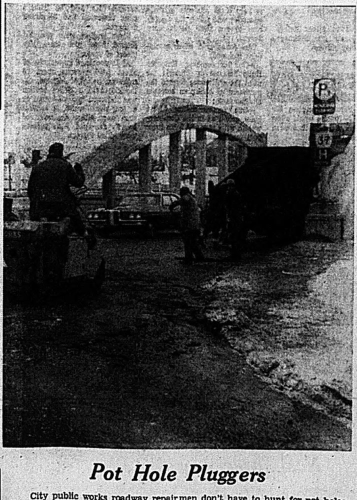
TRENTON (Staff) — As early as 1969, Proctor and Redfern, consulting engineers for Dufferin Developments, approached the town of Trenton and the Public Utilities Commission for subdivision specifications, Hugh O'Neill of Dufferin says in a press statement.

These were supplied without mention of a water pipeline from Dufferin Avenue. Plans were drawn up based on specifications and approved by the town, PUC, and subsequently, the OWRC, Mr. O'Neill says.

"Our tenders have already gone out for the first phase of the subdivision (56 homes) based on approvals received from all these bodies," he adds.

At last Thursday's PUC meeting, it was revealed that the water servicing arrangements incorporated in draft plans for Dufferin Developments may be unsatisfactory and that a 4,850 - foot line may have to be built from Dufferin Avenue to accommodate the development.

"We cannot understand the actions of the Mayor or Commissioner Hilton. Hopefully, it is not personal," Mr. O'Neill says. Mayor Duncan McDonald and PUC Commissioner Charles Hilton have not signed the PUC portion of the subdividers' agreement which would allow the company to proceed with construction.



Pot Hole Pluggers

City public works roadway repairmen don't have to hunt for pot holes to fill these days with many Belleville streets in a state of disrepair as result of one of the most severe winters in recent history. Icy Road Accident Injures 3

PICTON (Staff) — Three persons were taken to Prince Edward County Hospital this morning following a two-car collision on Ridge Road, approximately 1¼ miles south of Cherry Valley Road.

Injured were Shirley Hennessy, RR 1, Picton, and William Steele, 52, of RR 1, Picton, drivers of the cars and Mrs. William Steele, a passenger in her husband's car.

Miss Hennessy sustained a minor head injury while Mr. Steele was treated for rib injuries. Barbara Steele received extensive head lacerations.

The accident occurred shortly before 8 a.m. today.

A spokesman for the Picton detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police said that icy roads were a contributing factor.

Police estimated damage at more than $1,000.

Peace Park Seeks Essays

TWEED (Special) — The Lester B. Pearson Peace Park, incorporated as an educational organization for the purpose of world peace, is sponsoring an Anthology of Peace which will be a collection of the views of well-known political and religious leaders, as well as lay persons, on how peace may be obtained and preserved in our time. This is the first time that such an anthology has been prepared in Canada.

"Anyone who would like to express his or her views in 500 to 1,500 words, on peace is invited to contribute," said Roy Cadwell, chairman of the park. "Credit will be given for all articles used and a copy of the anthology will be sent on request. What we want is a cross section of Canadian opinion".

Contributors are asked to send a brief outline of their background with a 3" x 4" photograph which will be printed with the article. The anthology deadline for this year is June 1.

The anthology will be distributed at cost by the peace park and will be available at the park and other places of distribution including book stores and libraries.

School children are also invited to contribute. Articles should be sent to the Anthology Committee, Lester B. Pearson Committee, Peace Park Inc., Tweed, Ontario.

IN MEMORIAM

DAINARD — In loving memory of a wonderful husband and father, Alva who passed away Feb. 22, 1970.

When we are sad and lonely,
And everything goes wrong,
We seem to hear you whisper,
Cheer up and carry on,
Each time we see your picture,
You seem to smile and say,
Don't cry, I'm only sleeping,
We'll meet again some day.
Treasure him Lord in Your garden of rest,
For when on earth Alva was one of the best.

—Lovingly remembered by his wife Eva ,son Glen and daughter in law Pattie and grandsons.

DAINARD — In loving memory of a dear uncle.

In our hearts your memory lingers,
Always tender, fond and true,
There's not a day dear uncle,
We do not think of you.

—Sadly missed by niece Mild[illegible] Ross and the Dainard Family.

CARDS OF THANKS

I would like to express my sincere appreciation to my family, friends and relatives for the lovely flowers, gifts and cards, during my stay in hospital. A very special thanks to Dr. J. Birchard, and Dr. R. Bateman, nurses on fifth level for their kind and thoughtful care. Again may I say thanks.

Dolores Wright.

County Road Budgets Strained by Winter

PICTON (Staff) — Hallowell reeve George Vincent has predicted that this winter's high cost of snow removal will strain the township's summer spending on roads.

"I'm afraid we're going to have to cut back someplace else to balance up at the end of the year," he remarked.

Mr. Vincent noted that all municipalities in Prince Edward County will be faced with a similar strain on their budgets.

More than 35 ratepayers attended a recent meeting of Hallowell township council to protest road conditions. Several complained that they had been isolated in their homes following last weekend's storm. Others said that they had been forced to drive their children to meet school buses when school attendance was possible.

Reeve Vincent, who with deputy reeve Keith MacDonald and councillor William Rutherford has operated snowplow equipment since last weekend's storm, commented that it is easier to complain than to act. He referred to this winter's snowfall as "an extreme condition we haven't seen in 24 years."

Hallowell townshio's snowplowing equipment has been in operation around the clock since Prince Edward's roads were plugged by heavy snow last weekend. The roads foreman and his two-man crew have remained on shiftduty 24 hours a day.

Mr. Vincent said that even taking this all-out effort into account, some roads will remain snow-blocked "until the sun opens them."

Hallowell township owns one plow-equipped truck, a maintainer, and a second truck equipped with sanding equipment. A second maintainer has been ordered but delivery is not expected this winter. Two bulldozers were hired by the township recently to aid in clearing the roads. Two others are also being used on a part time basis to wing back snow.

"There isn't much that can be done about the narrowness of some roads or the banks that make them look like tunnels," observed Mr. Vincent.

He reflected that the township's road crew this winter has succeeded in clearing roads only to have them refilled before all the snow could be shoved back.

Workmen Active In District Parks

TWEED (Special) — Crews of men at Bon Echo Provincial Park, north of Cloyne are cutting right-of-way for a road into the west portion of the park, preparing new snowmobile trails, constucting additional outdoor privies and developing a short canoe route for youngsters by cleaning up a tree-jammed creek bed from the group camp grounds on Little Bon Echo Lake to the expansive south beach on Mazinaw Lake.

The snowmobile trail development at Bon Echo will make possible a cross-country link-up with the 320 miles of trails in central Hastings County already in operation as a public service by the Winter Sports Committee of the Highlands Regional Tourist Council.

Including the work program at Bon Echo, a total of 46 seasonal workmen are now engaged in Tweed District provincial parks. At Black Lake Park just west of Sharbot Lake, a crew is removing unsafe and fallen trees from the park extension.

Near Picton, at Outlet Beach Provincial Park, workmen are prefabbing a large number of outdoor privies and north of Sydenham Village, workmen are busy developing a park interior access road and a snowmobile trail.

The Department reminds snowmobile operators to refrain from using Sandbanks and North Beach Park areas in Prince Edward County for at least another year or two until such time as the young planted trees get established.

Outlet Park snowmobile routes are still ideal due to regular snowfalls.

It is a good safety practice to wear protecgive goggles at all times while operating a snowmobile and by all means while going through the woods.

Surrealist 'Heralds Rebirth'

An artist whose work is acclaimed as heralding a rebirth of figurative painting in Canada is having an exhibition of her works this month at Agnes Etherington Art Centre, Kingston.

Seventeen works by Esther Warkov, a young Winnipeg surrealist painter are hanging in the centre until Feb. 28. The collection was prepared and circulated by the Beaverbrook Gallery, Fredericton.

Miss Warkov's work is described as surrealist and nostalgic and is unusual in the use of multiple canvases to form one painting. The strong humanism in her work is apparent in her portrayal of racial inequality, the plight of the aged and the loneliness of the loveless.

Coroner's Inquest Opens Tuesday

NAPANEE (Staff) — An inquest into the death of OPP Constable Jan W. Lutgendorff, 32, of RR 7, Napanee, has been called for tomorrow evening at the Lennox and Addington Courthouse, Thomas Street, Napanee.

Coroner Dr. Stuart Patterson of Kingston will preside over a 5-man jury commencing at 7.30 p.m. Constable Lutgendorff was killed instantly Jan. 12 when his late model car was sliced in half at the gate-protected 4-track level crossing north of town on Highway 41.

Debris was strewn for more than 80 feet up the track following the accident, which involved a 100-car, CNR Montreal - Toronto freight train.

The last fatal accident at the crossing was in 1954 when eight persons were killed. CNR records show the last accident to have taken place at the crossing was in 1966 when a man was slightly injured when the car he was driving was struck.

CUPE Members Attend Classes

The Canadian Union of Public Employees (CUPE) held administration classes at the Ben Bleecker Building over the weekend.

The three-day seminar was to better inform members of the union in leadership and the handling of men.

Classes were held covering Man's Needs and Motivation, Duties of Committees, the Meaning of Participation, How to Conduct a Union Meeting and a brief History of the Labor Movement.

The classes were for level-one students. Levels are used as a credit system whereby the student can gain enough credits to apply to the union for a scholarship, which will pay all of his expenses at the Labor College of Canada.

Union locals included in the seminar were the Hastings School Board, Ontario Hydro, Picton Public Works, Belleville Public Works, Belleville City Hall, and Cobourg Public Works.

Murray Gray, Ontario education representative, was in town to conduct the classes along with Doug Lindsay, national representative of CUPE.

These Drivers Total 160 Years Without Accident

Area Safe Drivers Receive Awards

"Welcome fellow double-clutchers," was the opening statement made by Bob Newell, area representative of the Transportation Safety Association of Ontario at their annual meeting held in Club Canara Saturday night.

"The achievement of 186 commercial drivers from the Bay of Quinte area who have accumulated 1,481 years of accident - free driving is an outstanding record worthy of great praise," he said.

Following the annual banquet, Inspector Ralph Blatchford of the Belleville Police Department and Sgt. Alvin Parry of the OPP, presented the award - winners with their bronze, silver and gold badges and certificates.

More than 240 people representing Picton, Grafton, ton and Belleville commer-Campbellford, Cobourg, Trencial driving firms, attended the event.

One guest explained that "for many of the drivers, this is the biggest event of their year."

The Transportation Safety Association of Ontario was formed in 1942, with awards being presented since 1944, said Mr. Newell. The association is authorized by the Workmen's Compensation Act of Ontario.

Although many of the drivers were up for awards of a short period of safe driving, a handful of older drivers received recognition for 20 or more years. John Henderson of Belleville topped the record with 34 years of accident - free driving.

Mr. Henderson began driving coal delivery truck for the Schuster Co. Ltd. on Oct. 4, 1929 and is quick to point out that before handling motorized vehicles, he drove a horse - drawn delivery wagon.

Ameliasburg Has Own Trash Pickup

AMELIASBURG (Special)— This Prince Edward County township, which in past years has been credited with several municipal firsts, will chalk up another beginning tomorrow.

Commencing Tuesday, Feb. 23, the township will inaugurate its own municipal garbage collection service, taking over from a private collector who had the contract 1.st year.

The township will make pickups on Tuesdays and Thursdays — the same collection days as under the previous outside contractor.

A few years ago Ameliasburg was the first township in the county to adopt 100 per cent valuation for assessment and last year was also the first in the township to establish its own fire department.

To provide its municipally - operated garbage collection service, Ameliasburg has purchased two trucks, one a reconditioned garbage packer.

To man the trucks, the township will hire two regular men and a part-time spare man.

Garbage collection in the township was done last year by Quinte Sanitation, which bid $14,256 for the job.

This year the same company tendered $14,900 to continue the undertaking but township council decided not to renew the contract, and to set up its own service.

A township spokesman last week said council had no fault to find with service provided by Quinte Sanitation but felt the township could provide its own service at little extra cost while employing local residents for labor.

Cost of the collection service will be born by the residents through taxes — the same as last year.

City Hall Cools It

Anyone receiving the cold shoulder at city hall this morning wasn't on the receiving end of poor public relations. The truth of the story lies in the fact that the heat wasn't on. City hall employees were bundled up in overcoats and hats until warmth returned shortly before 9.30 a.m.

One employee explained that an electric eve occasionally cuts the heat off for a while.

Snow Clearance Petition Prepared

TRENTON (Staff) — Council tonight will consider a petition from residents of Coleman Drive, requesting the town to clean snow from driveways while municipal snow plows are clearing the streets.

The town already clears out the driveway entrances of doctors, firemen and policemen. People on Coleman Drive indicate they would prefer this service to having the town clean their sidewalk.

Why Suicide?

Recently we were discussing the suicide rate in Canada and noted that it was not as high as that of other countries, in fact was a good deal lower per capita than countries like Austria (which had the highest, according to figures released by Ottawa) and Australia.

Since then we have noted a further report from British Columbia that suicides and attempted suicides among young people in that province represent a distinct health problem.

Psychological factors, according to Dr. Hamish Nichol of the University of British Columbia, have become a leading contributor to death in the ten to 19 age group over the past 15 years.

This is a disturbing revelation, that kids as young as ten and on through the teens are finding life intolerable.

What is at the root of such trouble? Quite apart from the materialism of modern society, its impersonality and pressures, psychological strain in the young is common. But if they would only recognize this, and realize that their whole life lies before them — and usually with increasing strength to cope — the temptation toward self-destruction could be controlled.

We note also an Ottawa report pointing out that since September 1, 1969 there have been 23 suicides in federal prisons and 80 attempts. All but two of the suicides took place in aging maximum security prisons, scene also of most of the attempts.

The maximums hold about 2,800 of the 7,150 prisoners, indicating what is described as a "stunning suicide rate within their walls of more than 500 per 100,000 population," or close to 50 times as high as the Canadian rate of 10.9 in 1969.

What can be done in these circumstances? Maximum security is the place of custody of criminals of the most dangerous calibre. If the prisons themselves are grim edifices indeed, nevertheless there can be no relaxation of the restrictions on the men held therein. Ultimately, though, the people who design and build these depressing institutions will have to come up with something more humane, something that will combine the necessary requirements of maximum security with aesthetic considerations. Such improvements could go some way toward turning even hardened criminals toward more civilized conduct.

Life and Death

People are living longer, we are told, and of course there is no doubt that this is so. Antibiotics and other wonder drugs are helping to maintain human life in a manner not possible in times past.

Yet heart disease continues to take its toll. Heart and circulatory ailments are responsible for some 77,000 deaths annually; this represents 51.4 per cent of all deaths in Canada annually, while living victims number no fewer than 2,500,000.

How important then is the current campaign on behalf of the Canadian Heart Fund. Money contributed by the public goes toward the all-important research into this crippling and all too often killer disease.

Life goes on, but let us help medical research to make life more meaningful for many sufferers, while recognizing that the lifespan of every individual is limited to one degree or another. Recently, in our obituary columns we read of one citizen who passed on after a lengthy illness, another after only a short illness, and there was one poignant notice of the death in hospital of a youngster who was in his 11th year.

Stamp's Message

The Americans have issued an attractive new stamp which has a message very pertinent to our day. One half of the six-cent stamp shows the earth as an astronaut would see it, while the other half depicts a fish in the ocean depths. On top, in bold letters are the words, "Save Our Water." It is a salutary message which, along with the warnings of television performers like Glen Campbell and Carol Burnett concerning pollution, should go a long way toward creating greater concern for the environment.

Business, Industry, and the Pollution Problem

U.S. Dilemma: Environmental Values Versus Growth

By ROD CURRIE

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Nixon's moves to shape up administration policy on environmental protection has finally forced business and industry to start taking a stand in its own defence.

Until last week, ecology, like motherhood, was sacrosanct; only the black-hearted would utter a disparaging word.

In his long-awaited environmental message to Congress Nixon promised a "national commitment to find solutions" to pollution problems. He followed up with a package of 14 bills and three recommendations for tax legislation, the 300-page collection containing some tough and costly proposals.

The parcel represented a pretty sweeping change of heart for Nixon, who a year ago had threatened to veto the National Environmental Policy Act which created the White House council on environmental quality—the body that put together the proposed legislation.

But while outlining these stern measures Nixon also was at pains to assure industry that the administration was not on the hunt for "scapegoats," and wouldn't "beat business over the head."

It was this apparent effort to be on both sides of the debate that had a disillusioning effect on both business and conservationists.

Critics charged that Nixon had done the country a disservice by attempting to suggest the whole environmental crisis can be ironed out with a minimum of pain and controversy.

To diehard conservationists, this is a war situation, time is running out and someone—mainly industry—will need some beating over the head.

Meanwhile, industry has pretty consistently turned the other cheek. It has long been fashionable for the ecology cult to rub industry's nose in its own mess, and industry generally has behaved like a helpless giant.

But when Nixon put his package to specifics on the table last week, the lines finally were drawn.

Early indications are that industry, however, will move cautiously in finally coming to its own defence.

As a first step, the national industrial pollution control council, a group of more than 60 industrial leaders, gave Nixon a report complaining of the administration's overly enthusiastic response to the "public concern" of environment. It was promoting environmental standards "incompatible with the economic health" of the country and "unachievable with present available technology."

Indeed some of the suggestions—restrictions on ocean dumping, pre-testing of toxic chemicals before marketing, the tax on sulphur in fossil fuels—are shattering news for industry. William D. Ruckelshaus, administrator of the environmental protection agency, had some straight follow-up talk for business leaders, warning "they must change, they must adapt, they must accommodate to changes in public attitudes or they will surely die."

The big test will come when Congress starts work on the Nixon proposals. It is here that industry, with behind-the-scenes manoeuvres and as the prime financial contributors to Nixon's Republican party, will show the real muscle. It will be a testing time, too, for Nixon who will be forced to demonstrate how hard he is willing to fight for his program.

In the interim, many observers feel Nixon is on a flight from reality in painting such a rosy picture of harmony between business, conservationists and government in the environmental field.

Says the New York Times: "No such reconciliation is likely to evolve if the president and other leaders believe that the conflict between environmental values and growth-as-usual can be evaded or papered over."

TODAY IN HISTORY

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Feb. 22, 1971 . . .

Barricades went up in Paris 123 years ago today—in 1848—when the French government forbade public demonstrations by the parliamentary opposition against corruption and for electoral reform. Two days later Louis Philippe, the last Bourbon king, abdicated and the workers were in control of Paris. Success of this revolution sparked similar outbreaks in every European country except Spain and Russia. Protests ranged from peaceful petitions in England and the Low Countries to full-scale revolution in Vienna and Berlin. More violent actions brought more violent repression as the months went on. However, the universal character of the revolutions of 1948 formed Karl Marx's idea of coming proletarian uprising.

1963—Two earthquakes followed one the day before in Libya, destroying the homes of 15,000 and leaving an estimated 300 dead.

1959—The British administration of Cyprus declared the end of a four-year state of emergency on the island.

1929—The Kellogg-Briand pact to outlaw war was ratified by the Canadian Parliament.

1901—128 died in the wreck of the Rio de Janeiro at San Francisco.

On Individual Responsibility—And The Politics of Biblical Doctrine

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

Bernadette Devlin on one of her tours in Canada made the statement that she "neither condemns nor condones" the kidnap-murder of Pierre Laporte. She blames society for what had happened. In a roundabout way she seems to imply that if an innocent person is mudered for political or economical reasons, society is at fault, therefore society should be punished, while the one who commits the crime should go free

But if society is at fault, are we all guilty or our leaders only? Have we all contributed to the unsatisfactory living conditions of the less fortunate ones? Who is to be blamed? Should it not be taken into consideration that while some people are hard workers and are thrifty, other are just the opposite by choice? While one person may spend his time at home in the family circle improving himself and his way of living, another one would rather sit in a pub with a beer bottle. There are exceptions of course, not everyone is responsible for the poverty he is forced to endure. But more often than not it is up to the individual the kind of future he will face.

To change the subject, I would like to say a few words in response to a letter in the Feb. 13 issue of The Intelligencer. Here the writer made this statement: "It is interesting to note that most of our avowed supporters of the capitalistic system take time out on Sundays to go to church and with blatant hypocrisy profess to accept the teachings of the world's greatest socialist, Jesus Christ."

If our good friend would take a little more time with his Bible he would discover that Christ was neither a Socialist nor a Capitalist. He was little interested in economics or politics.

The doctrines of Christ are revolutionary indeed, but He never advocated social upheaval by force or any other way. Those who are preaching Christ as a socialist or as a dreamer with ideas to establish a Utopia on earth are preaching the "other gospel" of which St. Paul speaks in his Epistle to the Galatians 1-9, and are definitely on the wrong track.

On one occasion only did Christ ask a rich man to give up his wealth and to distribute it to the poor. He did this because He knew the man was a slave to his wealth.

Others are telling us that Christ was a Communist. This is not quite accurate. True enough His followers have tried to live a communal life because of persecution by outsiders and for the purpose of propagating the Gospel. This they did voluntarily and in love. Christians did not fight the "establishment," instead Peter exhorted his fellow brethren to obedience.

Russia's Growing Fleet Causes Concern in the West

By STEPHEN SCOTT

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Expressions of concern by NATO officers to Canadian correspondents over the Soviet naval buildup in northern waters is another chorus to a song of woe that is being heard in some Western capitals.

The concern was expressed last week to correspondents who accompanied Defence Minister Donald Macdonald of Canada during a tour of NATO facilities in Norway.

They could have heard similar stories elsewhere. Few weeks go by when somebody is not delivering a warning about Soviet ships.

In recent months, there have been United States charges that the Soviets were building a naval base in Cuba. Britain almost wrecked the Commonwealth with its plans to arm the South African navy to help guard the Cape of Good Hope sealanes against the growing Soviet fleet in the Indian Ocean.

On Tuesday, the British head of the NATO military committee in Brussels said the Soviets have more submarines than all NATO countries combined.

Judging from recent remarks of a retired U.S. admiral, this concern is just what the Soviets want. For the admiral, Arthur W. Radford, former chairman of the U.S. joint chiefs of staff, said a fleet can be a diplomatic instrument without firing a shot.

Warnings about Soviet naval buildups are not new. But the big crunch came last April and May when four Soviet fleets held manoeuvres in the Pacific, Baltic, Arctic and Black Sea.

The fact that a Soviet fleet could turn up almost anywhere was a far cry from 1956 when Admiral Sergei Gorshkov took over a navy that was primarily made up of coastal-defence forces.

Estimates last year were that the Soviet navy had grown to 25 cruisers, 100 destroyers, 1,500 smaller craft (including the well-known spy trawlers), 355 submarines (including 75 nuclear-powered) and two helicopter carriers.

Gorshkov said after the manoeuvres that his navy had shown a "high level of preparation, tactical maturity and ability to carry out complicated multi-stage combat actions."

"Ships of the Soviet navy are systematically present in all oceans, including areas of the presence of navies of NATO," he said.

"Such a situation is undoubtedly not to the liking of imperialist hawks."

He could have added that the doves were not particularly full of joy.

Radford wrote in the New York Times about the U.S. 6th Fleet in the Mediterranean. s related to the Soviet Middle East fleet. But his remarks could be applied to any navy of size.

He said the job of the fleet is to protect American lives and safety and to support the southern flank of NATO. But that mission could not be successful without "due regard to the diplomatic, political and psychological implications surrounding all aspects of fleet operations in time of tension."

In that context he talked of the "repositioning" of the 6th Fleet during a recent Jordanian crisis.

He added that the role of the fleet is clearly military and diplomatic—"the two could hardly be separated."

Radford was talking of the 6th Fleet. But surely Gorshkov has much the same thoughts about his Mediterranean fleet.

His little Indian Ocean presence is of concern mainly to the British and South Africans.

But, with Soviet-built port facilities in countries such as Somalia, Southern Yemen and Tanzania, he has done as much as anybody to make it clear that the Soviet Union must be considered in the Southern Hemisphere.

Assistance Discussed For Nomad Indians

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. (CP) — Helping migrating Indians in Canada has been made difficult by a lack of co-operation between white and Indian groups, says a paper discussed by the Indian-Eskimo Association of Canada Sunday.

The working paper, discussed at the association's semi-annual conference, was financed by the department of the secretary of state. It is the basis of a report to be presented to that deparmen.

"Each organization, whether it be social agency, friendship centre, university, or Indian union, wants to do the project itself—alone," the paper says.

"Each group believes that they are the only ones capable of tackling the problem."

The paper also says no agency has been appointed to tackle the problems facing migrating Indians.

"In the city, the new arrival is shuttled between agencies by workers who know nothing of Indian history and can offer little understanding and kindness. Often they are referred to friendship centres which are understaffed, underdefinanced and ill-equipped to deal with the range of problems referred to them."

Friendship centres, court programs, recreation programs, universities, welfare offices and family counsellors seemed to be competing with one another for funds and recognition.

This was because there is no government policy, and the government ends up partly financing many different programs.

Ottawa May Help 'Averages'

TORONTO (CP) — Health Minister John Munro says the federal government is considering ways to relieve pressures on middle-income wage earners with large families.

He told a community conference Saturday that two measures being considered are increased income tax deductions for dependent children and relaxation of the proposed $10,000 income ceiling for family allowances.

Mr. Munro also said he hoped to see a significantly stronger policy regarding day care centres.

He said there were "obviously injustices" in the proposed cutoff line of $10,000 income after which allowances will not be paid under the government's white paper on income security.

He cited a hypothetical situation in which a man earning $9,900 received assistance for his two children while a next-door neighbor who earned $10,000 received no payments for seven children.

"We're trying to find a technique whereby we can be more equitable in cases like this," he said.

He also said the government is studying proposals which would boost income tax deductions for dependents.

Bad Night For Picton Family

PICTON (Staff) — In the winter of his discontent, Picton resident Gordon Arnold has developed an understandable respect for "things that go bump in the night."

His rest was interrupted Saturday when a thunderous crash brought him to his front door. He discovered that his car, parked beneath an ice-laden carport had been almost demolished when the carport collapsed under the weight of its burden. A second car, owned by his son-in-law, was also parked beneath the carport and was dented in the mishap.

The destruction of Mr. Arold's car was only part of a practical joke played by Old Man Winter. Shortly after the carport collapsed, the roof of the Arnold's car was only part eral leaks. Apparently it had been damaged as the carport was torn from the side of the house. The living room flooded swiftly and Mr. Arnold was forced to rescue all furniture in the room.

Deprived of his car and menaced by floods, Mr. Arnold has moved with his family to a downtown hotel where he intends to remain until, weather permitting, he can return home.

Snowmobile Drowning Inquest Is Called

DESERONTO (Staff) — Dr. D. C. McVicker, coroner for Deseronto, has called an inquest into the Feb. 6 drowning death of 41-year-old Alfred Uens of 187 Farley Avenue, Belleville. The inquest will commence at 7.30 p.m., Tuesday, March 2, in the Hastings County Courthouse, Belleville.

Mr. Uens drowned in Telegraph Narrows near the Skyway Bridge when the snowmobile on which he was riding with his wife Barbara, went through the ice, 1½ miles west of here.

Riders on a second snowmobile, Donald and Peggy File of 179 Haig Road, Belleville, also went through the ice, but were rescued, together with Mrs. Uens, by Point Anne fireman Leo Maher.

Mr. Uens remained in the frigid water while pushing his fellow travellers onto the surface of the ice.

Mr. Maher, travelling closer to shore than the other machines, immediately went to their rescue when he saw their trouble. Crawling across the ice, he was able to reach the trio.

The snowmobilers were travelling to the Deseronto Winter Carnival to participate in an inter-fire department broomball game.

U.C.W. Meeting

TRINITY ROSLIN UCW

Despite the snowy conditions, a fair attendance was meeting of Roslin UCW held in the church hall.

Due to the absence of the president, the past president Mrs. S. Colden presided and reports of the secretary and treasurer were given.

Mrs. Harrison introduced the two volunteer workers from Lifeline in Belleville. The history of the organization which now world-wide was given, showing that it first started in 1963 by a minister in Australia and in 1967 Belleville was the second city in Ontario to use this service. It is entirely supported by donations from generous citizens and by those who have been helped. In the past month 192 calls were received and this service is given 24 hours a day. Those having various problems are referred to the proper medical care or whatever their particular situations require. It was noted that the organization is staffed by volunteer laymen and this service is as near as one's phone.

Mrs. Kerr thanked the speakers and presented them with tokens of appreciation.

The devotional was conducted by Mrs. Don Sills assisted by Mrs. Ken Cranston and Mrs. Douglas Sills using as their theme "Take Time". Mrs. Harrison and Mrs. Dickens favored with a duet.

A considerable amount of business was dealt with. It was announced that Roslin Trinity Church will host the World Day of Prayer service with neighboring churches to be invited. The group will cater to a banquet on Apr. 3 and in the meantime will provide a hot meal at the Sunday School for 50 young people on Sun. Feb. 21 to mark International Youth Week. The purchasing committee reported that table cloths and a new heater had been obtained. Mrs. Kerr was made a life member of the organization.

Bride Fees Raised In Turkey

ANKARA (AP) — Inflation is raising the price of brides in Turkey.

Traditionally, the fee is paid by the bridegroom's family to the family of the bride. Huseyin Koc, mayor of a village northeast of Ankara, says the going price is 15,000 lira, equivalent to $1,000.

"When I was married 30 years ago it was 260 lira," he recalls.

Other villagers put the current price betwene $600 and $1,200. All agree it has jumped sharply from last year. The practice is illegal and punishable by six months in jail. But if all Turkish families who paid or received one were arrested a large percentage of Turkey's 36 million population would be behind bars.

Two-thirds of the people live in rural villages, where the bride price is a deep-seated tradition.

Nermin Abadan, professor at the political science faculty of Ankara University, says:

"Woman is considered an economic commodity in rural society. She is an asset that can procreate and do the work that is unpleasant, that men prefer not to do, in the house and in the fields."

In rural families the father exerts absolute ownership of his daughter, giving him the right to turn her over to the boy of his choice.

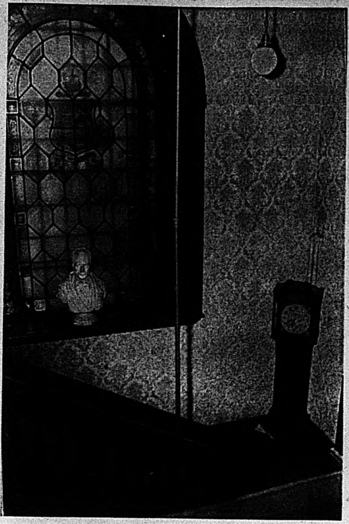
The law against bride price is unenforceable, Mrs. Abadan says:

"Only when the woman can support herself and has a social standing of her own will she be able to change her status from that of an object to be sold."

The price is usually the subject of heavy bargaining. The two fathers haggle over the amount, whether money or goods, and whether cash on delivery or the instalment plan.

The high price results in thousands of illegal elopements. Some grooms or their families are forced to sell their land or animals to buy a bride. If a young man wants to marry a girl but cannot afford her, he is driven to carrying her off.

If the bride is under 18 — most rural Turkish girls marry at 15 or 16 — the girl's family can have her brought back by police. The groom is liable to a three-year jail sentence. Normally, the errant groom's family agrees to pay the bride price and the girl's family drops charges.



HOUSE OF PUZZLES — This stairway graced by a stained-glass window is in The Grange, the original home of the Art Gallery of Ontario in Toronto. The Grange is to be restored to its original state and curator Margaret Machell says the house has many puzzles to be solved before work begins. (CP Photo)

Board Has Multilingual Problem

TORONTO (CP) — When it comes to communicating with pupils and their parents, the city's school board probably has it tougher than most — at the last count it took 42 different languages.

That's the number spoken in the board's attendance department where a staff of social workers, "translater counsellors" and secretarial personnel serve as a multilingual clearing house in addition to their regular work as modern - day truant officers.

But even the 42 languages spoken there do not match the number used in the homes of pupils, says departmental head Bertha Reynolds.

"For instance, we don't have anyone here who can speak Cree and I'm more than certain that we have parents and pupils out there who do. But the need hasn't been great enough for it."

Stirling Couple Observe 65th Wedding Anniversary

STIRLING — Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Stevenson were "At Home" in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church hall to mark the occasion of their 65th wedding anniversary, last Sunday.

Despite bad road conditions over 100 persons attended. Guests were present from Toronto, Belleville, Peterborough and nearby points.

Mrs. Stevenson was the former Estella Fleming and the couple was married in the Methodist parsonage at Tweed by Rev. E. White. For several years they farmed in Thurlow Township and they moved to Stirling in 1948 where they operated a ladies' shop until 1969.

They had two daughters Mrs. Clarke (Mae) Rodgers of Stirling, and the late Mrs. Sheldon (Eva) Calver. There are four grandchildren and nine great grandchildren.

The honored guests received congratulatory messages from the various government levels as well as being recipients of numerous cards and gifts from relatives and friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Stevenson reside on Gore Street in the Village of Stirling.

WEDDINGS

HOLMES — JONES

TWEED — St. John's United Church, Tweed, Ontario was the scene of the recent wedding, when Karen Marlene Jones, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Jones of RR 1, Tweed, was united in marriage to William Gordon Holmes, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Holmes, RR 3, Madoc. Rev. I. E. Munro officiated at the ceremony. Frederick Porter was organist, and Mrs. Clive Kingston was soloist.

The bride wore a street-length "A" line white velvet empire styled gown with scooped neckline and full length bishop's sleeves. The skirt was trimmed with sequined braid. Her headdress was a shoulder length white tulle veil which was attached to a white velvet ring. She carried a cascade bouquet of yellow roses with ivy.

Miss Audrey Jones, sister of the bride was maid of honor. Miss Bonnie Holmes, sister of the bridegroom was bridesmaid and they were attir in plum velvet gowns, designed in a similar style to the bride's, with empire waists, accentuated with sequined braid, and matching accessories. Both carried bouquets of yellow roses and carnations.

The best man was Garnet Holmes of Amherstview, Gordon Jones, Whitby, was usher.

A reception was held at the Tweedsmuir Hotel dining lounge following the wedding. A dance and reception took place in the evening at the Hungerford Township Municipal Building.

The bride's mother received the guests, attired in a turquoise crimplene dress, with black accessories and a corsage of yellow roses and white carnations. The briegroom's mother assisted, wearing a red and navy suit with black accessories and a corsage of red roses and white carnations.

For travelling, the bride chose a purple and white crepe dress with matching sleeveless coat and black accessories.

Upon their return, the couple took up residence in Roslin.

The Grange House To Be Restored to 1835

TORONTO (CP) — Once houses in Canada were taxed on the basis of the number of fireplaces and doors there were in them.

Because of that, assessment records might hold a clue as to when the main staircase was changed in The Grange, says Margaret Machell.

The Grange is the original home of the Art Gallery of Ontario. It was built in 1817 as the home of D'Arcy Boulton, an Upper Canada judge. It was a country house then, about a mile and several unbridged creeks away from the town of York, Toronto's parent. The area now is a rundown part of downtown.

The Grange is to be restored to about 1835. Miss Machell, who is its custodian, says it will be a living museum and host to special functions. In the meantime, she says, there are puzzles for architect Peter Stokes to solve before work begins.

"We're looking for evidence of what that staircase was like, for instance. We're hoping to find a letter or a diary in which Mrs. Jones said she came to tea and this was what the staircase was like, or that they were thinking of taking one out or putting one in."

The present staircase is heavy, and has a blank door at the top, both indications that it was put in as an alteration. A graceful, light banister on the servants' stairs may have belonged to the original main staircase.

Miss Machell says there are hints all through the house of where changes might have been made during the century the Boultons lived in it. A bump in a wall suggests another wall once met it. A blank door, plastered in on one side, obviously once led somewhere.

The restoration search leads through old correspondence, old city records, old photograph albums and into the walls of the house itself.

Members of the Boulton family are being approached to find out if they have any record of earlier days.

The house passed from D'Arcy to his son, William Henry Boulton. He was, at various times, attorney-general of Upper Canada, chief justice of Newfoundland and a member of the Upper Canada legislature. In 1875 his widow married Goldwin Smith, a scholar. She willed the house to the then-new Art Museum of Toronto which took it over in 1911.

A photograph dating back to about 1900 indicates the gallery moved some upstairs windows to create a studio window. The original arrangement will be restored, but there will be panes missing. The gallery is looking for old glass and old bricks, which were larger than modern bricks.

The fireplaces have been investigated, as other parts of the house will be, by stripping top layers of paint and plaster to show what's underneath. One fireplace has attractive tile trim that must go because it is Victorian over something older. Miss Machell says the tiles will find a new home.

"Probably somebody's just dying to have them — some other museum."

The search for appropriate furnishings has also begun under the direction of historian Jeanne Minhinnick. A few pieces of furniture and elderly kitchen equipment have been stored in The Grange for years because its restoration is an old dream.

Goldwin Smith's bath chair is there as a result of a call from a relative of a former servant who knew it was to be sold at an auction.

Money for the restoration is being raised by the gallery's women's committee. Their goal is $200,000.

The old house now is part of the gallery, which has grown, wing by wing, from its back wall. Plans now call for detaching the house and closing its wall. The gallery itself is scheduled to be renovated and enlarged again and an enclosed court will join it to The Grange.

KITCHENER (CP) — Frances L. Denny, women's editor of The Record, is the new president of the Kitchener - Waterloo Press Club.

She is one of the few women to be elected president of a mixed membership press club in Canada. Rae Sunder, now Mrs. Rae Foshay, was president of the Nova Scotia Press Club in 1969.

Miss Denny, elected to the post Tuesday night, succeeds Edward J. Hayes, managing editor of The Record.

The press club, organized 18 years ago, amended its constitution last November to admit women members from the press, radio and television. Eleven women are included in the 443 - member club.

Miss Denny has been women's editor of The Record for 21 years. Prior to that she held a similar post with the Woodstock Sentinel-Review. Her husband, Richard S. Sutton, is a photographer with The Record.

Mother: "Laura, you forgot to say 'please.' Where are your manners? Grandmother will think you don't know how to behave."

Mother: "Laura, would you please hand me that magazine on the coffee table? Thank you, dear."

"Please" and "thank you" and other courtesies are learned easily and naturally in a family where adults use these words automatically to the children as well as to other adults.

There Is A Moral to This Fish Story

By DORIS CLARK

A naturalist divided an aquarium with a clear glass partition. He put a lusty bass in one section and minnows in the other. The bass would strike every time a minnow approached the glass partition. After three days of fruitless lunging, which netted him only bruises, he ceased his efforts and subsisted on the food that was dropped in.

Then the naturalist removed the glass partition. The minnows swam all around the bass, but he did not strike at a single one. He was thoroughly sold on the idea that business was bad.

The moral: Take another shot at the glass partition. Maybe it isn't there any more. — Author Unknown.

• • •

Dear Doris: We have friends that visit us for three or four days, three or four times a year. Much as we like to see them, how can we let them know that this does not mean their pet dog? It scratches in our flower beds and must be in and out of the house, and at night sleep in the basement.

Our own dog does not get all these privileges. We have visited them but never take our dog along. We pay a neighbor's boy to look after him.

We have dropped hints but to no avail. These people would tolerate no one else's dog for a visit. Are they spoiled? — Baffled!

Dear Baffled: Spoiled, yes. Also unconscious! Some people see their own pets as members of the family and in a completely different category from any other dog or cat or canary.

If you cherish their friendship, bring the dog-gone thing out into the open. Suggest (in a letter) a boarding kennel for Fifi, pointing out that the confusion and strain of having two dogs in the house is more than you can take; that this is why you always leave your own dog in someone else's care when you go visiting.

• • •

Dear Doris: I am 16. I like this neighbor boy (20), but every time he talks to me he asks me if I want to go all the way.

I've told him no many times. Every time he asks me, it hurts more and more. I don't know what to do.

I don't want to forget him, but I don't want to do what he wants to, either. Please tell me what I could do. — Hurting But Hopeful.

Dear H But H: If we could just separate our Handsome Harry's from their Unseemly Urges life would be simpler, wouldn't it? But that's the way the cookie crumbles.

Better stop yearning over such a Single-track Stoop. He is neither trustworthy nor sensible and would make poor date material.

Next time tell him to stop asking stupid questions and walk away.

Cooking Takes Second Place to New Arrival

By MARY MOORE

Cooking took second place for nine days while I was a proper grandmother to five little angels while their mother was in hospital for a sixth.

Polly Victoria is her name and she provided Margaret and Peter with an even three girls and three boys.

I know there are plenty of very happy households in this wonderful country but none could be happier than Margaret's and Pete's (my son) over this precious arrival.

While I was there and while three of the children were in school in the mornings I had a few spare minutes to test cook and a hungry crowd to feed.

Does anybody have two-thirds cup of leftover mincemeat or cranberry sauce or cherry jam they would like to use up?

Here is what I made.

FRUITY SQUARES

((9 x 9")

BASE:

5 tbsps. margarine

5 tbsps. butter

1 cup unsifted all - purpose flour

2½ tbsps. icing sugar

TOP:

2 eggs

1 cup granulated sugar

⅓ cup stirred but unsifted all - purpose flour

¼ tsp. salt

1 tsp. baking powder

1 tsp. almond extract

⅓ cup light raisins

½ cup desiccated coconut

½ cup slivered almonds (2-oz. pkge)

⅔ cup thick mincemeat or cranberry sauce or cherry jam

To make Base measure into beater bowl all base ingredients and cream together. Pack smoothly into bottom of 9 x 9" pan.

Do not wash the beaters or bowl, and measure into it the eggs, granulated sugar, 1-3 cup flour, salt, baking powder and almond extract. Beat well to blend. Remove beaters. Stir in raisins, coconut, almonds and mincemeat or cranberry sauce or cherry jam. Spread evenly over base. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. at dead centre of oven about 50-60 min. Top should be a deep gold. Let rest in pan but while still warm cut into 1¼" squares. When cool store in covered cookie tin. Lovely with fresh fruit for dessert.

Ann Landers

Undesirables Answer Ad in Newspaper

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I lost both parents recently and am now living alone in a three-bedroom flat. I want to remain here but it is too expensive unless I get someone to help with the rent. A few days ago I ran an ad for one or two parties to share this apartment. The responses were unbelievable. My phone rang like crazy. Nearly all the calls were from homosexuals. The few normal people who called were elderly folk who said they were looking for companionship. That's the last thing I want. I am not lonesome. I just want someone to help out with the rent.

ANN LANDERS

Please tell me, Ann, how can I advertise for a roomer or two without attracting homosexuals? — NO ODD COUPLE WANTED.

DEAR NO. O.C.W.: Some newspapers will co-operate printing the line "Only straight males need respond." The gay world understands this vernacular and will respect it. Most homosexuals have no desire to go where they are not welcome.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a 13-year-old girl with a problem I don't know how to think about. I was looking through some family pictures and found a snapshot of my mother in her wedding dress. She had her hands folded over her stomach and she looks sure enough pregnant. Should I tell my mother I know I was born a little early and ask her how come? Please hurry your answer. This is bugging me. — SASKATOON DOUBTS.

DEAR SASS.: You weren't born a little early, honey — your folks may have been married a little late. And if you are 13 and don't know "how come" I hope you will run, not walk, to the nearest library and get my book, Ann Landers Talks to Teen-Agers about Sex, or send for a paperback from Prentice-Hall, Englewood Cliffs, N.J. It costs $1.00.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My four-year-old child was invited to a birthday party yesterday. I took him and several other youngsters in our station wagon. When it came time to cut the cake and blow out the candles I witnessed something I had seen dozens of times before, but I never thought much about it until now.

When the birthday boy tried to blow out the candles he couldn't quite do it, so his grandmother "helped" him. It suddenly occurred to me, as she stood there blowing out the candles with her ugly moist breath, that she was spreading germs all over the cake.

I tried to think of a way to keep my child from eating the cake but it was useless. Please say something about this health hazard. — I.E. of S.F.

DEAR I.E. of S.F.: Unless the woman had an infectious disease, it is unlikely that her breath would be a health hazard. These days with industrial pollution threatening our very existence it seems almost ludicrous that a person would write in about a kindly grandmother breathing on a birthday cake.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a 15-year-old who needs your advice. Our club is giving a boy-girl party. I haven't dated very much but I know who I'd like to ask. My question is this: Should I telephone the boy myself? Would it be better if my mother telephoned him? Or should my mother telephone his mother? I have an older brother who is friendly with his sister. Should I ask my brother to call his sister? Rush your answer. The dance is in three weeks. — A BLUSHER.

DEAR BLUSH: Do you want your mother to take the boy to the dance? Or do you want your mother to take his mother? Or would you like your brother to take his sister? For cryin' in the grog, Girl, if you want to invite the boy, call him and leave the relatives out of it.

World Can't Live Without Railways---Can't Make Them Pay

LONDON (AP) — The paradox of railways is that the world can't do without them but still can't make them pay.

In most industrialized countries the government runs the lines, or some of them, such as in Canada. In the United States the taxpayer soon will be underwriting many passenger runs of private companies.

An Associated Press survey of seven industrialized countries which run nationalized railways show they lose more than $1,500 million a year. Canada comes out better than some but still shows figures in the red.

None has found a way to move the bulk of its freight without railways, and the rails still beat any other means of moving masses of people on short hauls.

The seven countries surveyed were Canada, Britain, France, West Germany, Switzerland, Italy and Japan.

Switzerland alone didn't dip into the taxpayers' pockets to pay rail deficits in 1969. Britain did some book-keeping sleight-of-hand to show a paper profit, but the government still was out millions.

The 1969 figures are the latest available for most countries, but there is no sign any of the figures changed radically in 1970.

The Canadian National Railways lost $25 million in 1969, $18 million less than in 1959, a better record than most.

The competing privately-owned CP Rail received $35 million from the government last year as payment for services ordered continued by Ottawa after the railway wanted to scrap them.

This amount was the margin of CP Rail's profit of $35 million, which was roughly the same as 10 years ago.

Only four per cent of CP Rail's income came from passengers, making that a money-losing business. It wants to drop its cross-Canada passenger train, The Canadian, because it loses $15 million a year. The federal government is studying a plan to co-ordinate the CNR and CP Rail transcontinental lines.

In Italy, the government rail system had a $504 million deficit, compared with a $72 million loss 10 years ago.

Japan, which has captured public fancy with "bullet" trains, didn't do much better even with colossal concentrations of passengers on short-haul and commuter lines. Japanese National Railways lost $365 million and private railways dropped $88 million. Ten years earlier the national line had a profit of $9.6 million.

French railways, rated among the best in the world, lost $355 million against $40 million in 1959. West Germany paid out $273 million to balance its railway books; the Germans lost less than $4 million a decade earlier.

The state-owned British Rail claimed profit after taxes of $35.28 million, first book profit since 1953. This paper profit didn't take into account $36 million the government granted for eliminating surplus track or $146 million it shelled out to subsidize uneconomic commuter and rural passenger services.

Switzerland, a compact country favored by geography and government restrictions on road freight, recorded a $200,000 profit, similar to that shown for each recent year.

Wages are the single biggest expense—55 per cent in Canada, 63 per cent in Britain, 64 in France, 65 in West Germany, 60 in Switzerland and 52 in Japan. Only Italy, which reported 12½ per cent of income going for wages to 160,000 employees, fell below 50 per cent.

Passenger fares in general are four cents a mile in West Germany, 32 cents in France and Switzerland, six cents in Britain, between two and five cents in Japan and three and five cents in Canada.

Child Became Blind In Tonsil Operation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Washington Hospital Centre was ordered by a jury Friday to pay $294,777 to the family of an eight-year-old boy who entered the hospital to have his tonsils and adenoids out and came home blind and crippled.

The jury, which has been hearing the case since Jan. 7, ordered the payment to the family of George W. Rose.

Testimony said the child entered the hospital Fed. 21, 1968, to have his tonsils and adenoids removed. While on the operating table, the jury was told, he suffered a cardiac arrest, and in the recovery room after the operation he suffered convulsions.

The father charged that because of improper care during the operation and afterwards the boy now is permanently blind and crippled in all four limbs.

An out-of-court settlement was made previously by the surgeon and the firm of anesthesiologists involved. Meanwhile, the hospital, the doctors and the firm have filed counter claims against each other.

Quebec Branch of NDP Drops Provincial Role

MONTREAL (CP) — Members of the New Democratic Party's Quebec branch voted this weekend to drop out of Quebec polities and concentrate on efforts at the federal level to ensure Quebec's right to "self-determination."

About three-quarters of the nearly 200 delegates meeting in Montreal Saturday approved a resolution recognizing Quebec's right to decide its own future, despite strong opposition from some English-speaking members and federal leadership candidate David Lewis.

The action means the NDP, which entered a Quebec election for the first time last April 29 and did not elect a candidate, will not run candidates in future provincial elections.

The resolution, to come before the national NDP convention in April, read:

"Quebec has an absolute right to self-determination, that is, to decide for itself the degree of sovereignty which suits it in all fields."

Another resolution called for development of closer ties between the Quebec NDP and English-speaking socialists for "a new alliance between the two peoples who make up Canada."

And a third resolution called for an independent constitution for the Quebec branch while the party would continue to collaborate with the federal NDP "in all which does not come into conflict with" the Quebec NDP's principles.

Also passed by the delegates were resolutions calling for:

—Legalization permitting marijuana and hashish to be sold through government-controlled dispensaries;

—Provincial government financing for additional birth control information clinics, pregnancy tests, free abortions on demand and maternity care clinics;

—A federal research program to determine safe birth control methods for men and women;

—The department of consumer and corporate affairs to establish an inspection and testing service for all products marketed in Canada.

Stephen Lewis Repudiates Waffle Group Policies

WATERLOO, Ont. (CP) — Stephen Lewis, leader of the Ontario New Democratic Party, Sunday repudiated the position taken by his party's Waffle group on self-determination for Quebec and widespread nationalization of industries.

Speaking to 130 top party officials at the NDP's provincial council meeting and without mentioning the Waffle group by name, Mr. Lewis said there were "new whispers in the party which seem to suggest that self-determination for the province of Quebec is one of those principles to which the NDP pays homage."

Mr. Lewis said he was passionately opposed to such self-determination, and believed "the overwhelming majority of New Democrats in Ontario" also were.

The NDP leader said any position that would recognize such self-determination was "perverse" and "almost indefensible" and should be rejected.

"Surely the priority is for a government in Ontario to help create the kind of Canada in which Quebec feels equal and comfortable."

The Waffle group is a radical, ultra-nationalist minority wing of the NDP, composed largely of university professors and students.

Mr. Lewis described the Waffle group's economic policy as "hopelessly deficient" and said the NDP's policy of economic nationalism should "not be diffused, reinterpreted or distorted" by the Waffle wing.

"Those who propose widespread and almost indiscriminate nationalization ... are presenting Canadians with programs which are not only beyond the ken of our collective experience, history and instincts, but in simple economics are hopelessly deficient."

Gordon Cleveland, a Waffle member and provincial secretary of the New Democratic Youth, indicated that Mr. Lewis' attack had not changed the thinking of the Waffle group or its determination to have Waffle politics adopted by the party at its national leadership convention in April.

Canadians Drift Ashore

WHANGAREI, N.Z. (CP) — After fighting storms the captain described as "pure hell," the crew of the crippled Canadian sailing ship Endeavour II lashed themselves to a life raft and drifted ashore in heavy seas after running aground on a sandbar near the northern tip of New Zealand today.

The 15-man, one-woman crew of Endeavour II abandoned ship after battling easterly gales for three days, and were in the water for more than an hour before landing in Parengarenga harbor.

The woman crew member was reported to be suffering from exposure but all her companions were well. Geoffrey Berry, master of the three-masted vessel, broke an arm during the storm, but retained command.

Endeavour II is a replica of the ship in which Captain Cook discovered Australia and New Zealand 200 years ago.

Caught in a severe storm just after rounding North Cape she ran for shelter in the harbor. Her crew sent a Mayday distress signal when her topmast chains snapped and she began to drift ashore.

Two tugs, a police launch and a helicopter went to her aid, but were forced back by the gale.

Captain Berry said later that the 138-foot square-rigged vessel was hard aground and listing at a 45-degree angle when the crew abandoned her. He thought she might still be salvaged.

Davis Won't Keep Education Portfolio

TORONTO (CP) — Premier-elect William Davis said Sunday night "there is no way" he will hold on to the education portfolio after he is sworn in as premier of Ontario.

Mr. Davis said on radio station CFRB's pre-taped public affairs program Let's Discuss It that the education portfolio is one of the most creative and demanding of all departments and that he would not be able to handle it fairly as premier.

Retiring Premier John Robarts continued as education minister for some time after assuming the leadership of the Ontario Progressive Conservative party.

Mr. Davis, who is also minister of university affairs, said he will make a decision "over the next few days" whether that department and the education portfolio will continue to be headed by one minister.

Discussing the "new wave" slogan that was part of the recent leadership convention, Mr. Davis said his approach to government issues will be different from that of Mr. Robarts. But he said his assessment will take some time.

Asked whether an ombudsman will be appointed in Ontario, Mr. Davis said he did not have "a clear mind or fixed position on it," adding there was always the danger that such an office could become another "layer of bureaucracy."

On medical care, he said the plan is still not entirely satisfactory and that some improvements must be made.

Publishers Ask Loans

TORONTO (CP) — A group of 17 Canadian book publishers has asked that the federal government provide short- and long-term loans to Canadian publishers to make up for a shortage in working capital.

The group, in a statement released Sunday, said the proposed sale of McClelland and Stewart Ltd. was "damning evidence of the threat now facing Canadian ownership of publishing houses."

A majority of the publishers in the group, which has not yet given itself a name, were members of the Emergency Committee of Canadian Publishers, set up when Ryerson Press was first put up for sale.

Members are:

Clarke Irwin and Co. Ltd., McClelland and Stewart, House of Anansi, Fiddlehead Books, University of Toronto Press, Black Rose Books, Prism International, Burns and McEachern, Tundra Books, Book Society, Fiddlehead Press, New Press, James Lewis and Samuel, Sono Nis Press, Peter Martin Associates, Readers Club of Canada and Progress Books.

Wilson Predicts Bad Recession

LONDON (AP) — Former prime minister Harold Wilson said Sunday Britain is heading toward a serious economic recession.

"All the signs are that we are spiralling into a serious recession and that unemployment will get a good deal worse," Wilson said in a radio interview with the BBC.

Only eight months ago, just before his Labor government was defeated in last June's election, Wilson was claiming that Britain had achieved its strongest economic position in years.

Under Conservative rule, he charged Sunday, there is a general atmosphere of industry drawing in its horns and cutting down investment.

One Senior A Weekend Provides Enough Headaches for Season

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The final weekend of the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A schedule has given OHA president Clarence (Tubby) Schmalz enough headaches to last a whole season.

Schmalz and the OHA executive now must decide what to do about two protests and four unplayed games.

Their decisions could affect four of the eight teams' positions in the final standings.

The schedule wound up with only three weekend games. Sunday Owen Sound Crescents kept alive their playoff hopes by upsetting Kingston Aces 5-4 and Belleville Mo-Hawks upset Orillia Terriers 10-1.

Saturday night, Galt defenceman Ron Hergott clinched the league scoring title with a goal and four assists as the first-place Hornets pounded Owen Sound 10-4.

Schmalz said Sunday night in Walkerton he hoped to handle both protests today with a conference telephone call involving members of the OHA executive.

Both protests involve the use of allegedly ineligible players. Owen Sound protested Woodstock's use of a player Feb. 12 and Kingston objected to Owen Sound's use of alternate goaltender Tom Coughlin Sunday night.

Under OHA rules, Sunday's protest could be kept out of the hands of the association until Thursday, but Schmalz said he would contact both clubs by telephone and try to have the case ready for hearing today.

"We can't afford a delay," said Schmalz. "Most of our clubs depend on playoff money to finish in the black financially, and any delay might force us to shorten our series."

If Owen Sound's protest is upheld and Kingston's rejected, a tie would be created for the sixth and final playoff spot. Any other combination of rulings would leave Owen Sound in seventh place.

Once a ruling is made on the protests, Schmalz must decide what to do about two unplayed games involving Woodstock and Belleville. He said two other unplayed games involving Woodstock and Belleville. He said two other unplayed games involving Woodstock and Orillia and Barrie would have no effect on the final standings and would not be played.

"Only the top three places are decided," said Schmalz. Galt finished first, Orillia second and Barrie third.

Under group rules, Galt will play the fourth-place finisher in a semi-final series while Orillia plays the fifth-place team and Barrie the sixth-place team in quarter-final series.

Depending on what's decided, Kingston or Belleville could finish fourth, Oakville, Kingston or Belleville fifth, and Oakville, Belleville or Owen Sound sixth.

Sunday's game in Owen Sound took 3½ hours to play and produced 218 minutes in penalties, most of them coming from a wild first-period brawl.

Owen Sound led 2-1 after the first period, and 4-2 after the second but the Aces came back to tie the score in the third before Mayo Paquette's second goal of the game at 16:21 gave the Crescents the win.

Playing coach Dave McComb added two goals and Dale Watson one to the Owen Sound attack. Bob Clayton scored twice and Tom Thurlby and Rod Graham once each for Kingston.

At Galt, a crowd of 2,081 saw Hergott score one goal and earn four assists to raise his season's total to a league leading 80.

Ron Smith scored three goals for Galt and John Beechey had a pair. Single goals were scored by Hergott, Bruce Reier, Dave Cressman, Howie Dietrich, and Billy Hway.

Paquette scored twice and Watson and Don Vipond once each for the Crescents.

Mo-Hawks Use 3 Hours To Undo as Many Years

By MAURICE SWITZER
Sports Editor

It took Belleville Mo-Hawks three hours to do something they hadn't done in three years, and it may take the Ontario Hockey Association three days to sort out the consequences.

The Mo-Hawks humbled defending league champion Orillia Terriers 10-1 here Sunday afternoon, and that's no typographical error. The Terriers had enjoyed a string of 14 straight wins over Belleville stretching over the past three OHA Senior A seasons.

But while they were basking in the Sunday evening glory of their incredible accomplishment — and comparing point totals from the scoring spree — the Mo-Hawks still realized their immediate playoff future remained a horrendous muddle.

An OHA decision was expected from Toronto today to clear up two protests — one by Owen Sound against Woodstock, the other by Kingston against Owen Sound — and the fate of two postponed Belleville - Woodstock games. Until the decision is handed down, the final standings position of Belleville, Kingston, Oakville, and Owen Sound is in doubt.

As of this morning, the Mo-Hawks were preparing to play Woodstock here Tuesday night at 8.30 in the event the league ruling went against them.

Everything seemed to be going for them Sunday.

Playing only his second game after a month-long injury layoff, Doug Senior sparked the ten-goal outburst with three goals. Wayne McConnell and Ray Johnston each had a pair, and Mike Rexe, Les Colligan and Ralph Plane also hit paydirt.

A second - period power-play goal by Grant Moore spoiled Steve Rexe's shutout bid.

The Mo-Hawks and 393 paid customers — second - smallest crowd of the season — had as much right to be surprised about the lop - sided win as the Terrier victims. They were without the services of Lou Kazowski and George Godson and Senior, Al Ferguson, Colligan and Mike Rexe all played with some form of handicap.

DOUG SENIOR

Orillia backup goalie Brent Pennington didn't think so after McConnell, Rexe, Colligan and Plane pumped four pucks past him in the opening 20 minutes.

"We were getting some breaks for a change," admitted coach Dave Jones. "But we've had lots of nights when nothing went in."

Senior's hat trick goal in the third period was a case in point. Mike Rexe's point shot hit the centre in the pad, then somehow came right back to him, and he slid it under Pennington.

Senior's third goal was one of four the Mo-Hawks scored in the final period as the Terriers abandoned any form of two-way game and played wide open. Sometimes it works, like Friday night when they pasted the Mo-Hawks 7-2 in Orillia.

Sunday, nothing the Terriers did worked against a strong Belleville back - checking effort, typified by the steady play of winger Ray Johnston.

Johnston's two goals, along with one in Friday's loss, equalled his output for his first 35 games.

"But watch how many his checks score over the year," observed goalie Steve Rexe, "I'll bet Ray comes out ahead."

Rexe was, despite the score a major factor in the win, stopping three Terriers in one - on - one situations, and actually having Moore's shut-out - breaker pegged.

Moore tore in on the right wing with the Mo-Hawks playing a man short but Rexe stood his ground and the Orillia winger went sprawling over his stick as he tried a deke. Rexe lost sight of the puck which barely had enough momentum to cross the goal line.

Rexe stopped 34 shots, but was particularly pleased with his work against Moore. "He must have had ten shots at me for that one goal," the redhead said. "And he only got two points in Orillia Friday. That cost him the league scoring title."

A five-point by Galt's Ron Hergott Saturday enabled the Hornet defenceman to overtake Moore.

Other Mo-Hawk standouts Sunday included the entire defence corps of Mike Rexe — who got his second goal of the year and the eventual game-winner — Lionel Botly, Bob Wilson, and Greg Marchen. The quartet kept loose pucks down to a minimum.

The game was a relatively tame affair, with the Mo-Hawks drawing four minors and a misconduct to Les Colligan for slapping his stick in disgust over an offside call.

Three of the Terriers' five minors went to captain John Chasczewski. The former Belleville senior drew two late in the second period for trying to sever Greg Marchen at the waist with his stick. Each player drew roughing minors for the subsequent shoving match, and referee Sandy Proctor gave the Orillia defenceman a two-minute slashing penalty that some officials would have seen as a major infraction.

Depending on the word from the OHA office, the next Mo-Hawk game could be against Woodstock here Tuesday at 8.30, in Barrie Friday night, or in Galt Saturday.

Got that?

Jesse's Happy Gang with Provincial Prize

The rink from Trenton Legion Branch 110 has a particular reason to be exuberant. From left, Carl LaGroix, skip Earl Jesse, Wayne McCreadie, and Hec McIntosh, display delight at winning the Ontario title and trophy for the second year in a row. Also the Trenton foursome earned the chance to compete for the coveted Dominion Legion championship at Charlottetown in March.

Jesse Rides Again

TRENTON — Skip Earl Jesse retained the Provincial curling championship for Trenton Branch 110, Royal Canadian Legion with a 7-1 record over foursomes from nine Ontario districts vying here since last Thursday.

Trenton's task was not an easy one after the halfway mark and in the eighth round Friday afternoon underdog Coppercliff handed them their first defeat.

Trenton still needed Saturday's win over Dundas because rinks from Kirkland Lake, London and Dundas were chasing hard right down to the last rock. They finished regulation play tied in second place and extra ends were necessary to decide Kirkland Lake runner-up.

It was noticeable, however, the branch 110 quartet had regained control early in their ninth game, starting off with a two point lead and adding to it as the action shifted back and forth from end to end.

By virtue of the win Trenton qualified to represent Ontario in the Dominion finals scheduled for Charlottetown, March 15-19.

Hometown fans, tense until they knew Jesse's success was assured, sent up a cheer that shook the CFB Trenton clubhouse. They congratulated each player as he left the ice. Before joining in the celebration staged for them, the Trenton rink talked about the high quality opposition the provincial bonspiel provided this year, as well as mentioning the schedule they'll follow to keep in condition for the biggest prize of them all — the Canadian Legion Dominion title.

And skip Earl Jesse repeated the foursome's objective: "to go to the east coast in March and return with the championship for Trenton branch 110." Jesse went all the way to last year's Dominion final before losing in sudden - death.

In the meantime the Quinte curling public will be able to watch the provincial titleholders tune up in the Bay of Quinte men's bonspiel next weekend and the Brighton Steer 'spiel in March. They're timing activities so they'll be up and ready for the crucial Charlottetown contest.

Final results for the four-day meet: London won 5, lost 3; Dundas won 5, lost 3; Galt won 2, lost 6; Toronto won 2, lost 6; Sutton won 4, lost 4; Trenton won 7, lost 1; Pembroke won 2, lost 6; Copper Cliff won 4, lost 4 and Kirkland Lake won 5, lost 3 (runner-up).

Towers Novices Brightest City Playoff Lights

The Towers Food City Novices refused to open the door to Kingston in the first round of their play-off series recording their second consecutive shutout to win the best-of-three series in straight games.

Sunday, the Belleville club came out on the long end of a 6-0 count with Brian Cook and Drew Stotesbury sharing the goaltender duties.

Danny Duffy's pair of goals were tops for the winners with others going to Andy Plane.

Klumeneic and MacIntosh Gary McInroy, Nelson Frederick and David Harris.

Other Belleville entries in OMHA action didn't fare so well in their weekend playdown series.

The Kinsmen Bantams were eliminated by Trenton losing the third and final game of their series after the teams had split the first two.

Three goals in the final period gave Trenton all the room they needed to record a 6-3 win.

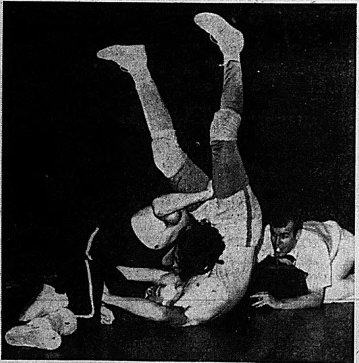
fired two goals each for the winners with Ayres and Roberts completing the scoring. For Belleville it was Peter Crawford, Steve Kirby and Cowan with one goal apiece.

Trenton juveniles grabbed a 2-1 lead in their best - of - five series with Belleville's Western Tire all-stars by coming up with a 3-1 win Sunday night.

The winners grabbed a 2-1 lead at the end of the first period in the penalty - studded contest before clinching the win with just over a minute left to play with their third goal.

Chris Long found the corner with a long drive in the first period that proved to be the winning goal for Trenton. Belleville had grabbed an early 1-0 lead, but were unable to hold it against last year's Ontario finalists.

Fred Stickle was the lone Belleville marksman.



Kicking Up His Heels

Moira Secondary School wrestler Mike Kumpf prepares to apply the finishing touches to Centennial's John Dwornik as referee Phil Meeks prepares to call a pin. Kumpf won the bout to give him the 123-pound title at the Bay of Quinte wrestling championships held Saturday at Quinte Secondary School, Belleville. The Moira competitor was one of eight from the school who captured individual championships at the meet.

Take Team Wrestling Title

Trojans Still Top Twisters

Bay of Quinte COSSA grapplers were "wrestling" with a major problem Saturday — the Moira Trojans.

The perennial high school wrestling power proved once again to be the class of the Bay of Quinte league as Moira piled up 134 points to take the team title, while walking off with eight of the 14 individual championships.

Two brother combinations provided half of the winners' first place output with Bill and Jim Hinchey winning the 106 and 115 pound titles, while Canadian champion Harold Brant's win in the unlimited class was matched by brother Audie in the 194 pound division.

Other Trojans to cope Bay of Quinte championships were Neal LeForte (98 pounds), Mike Kumpf (123 pounds), Dick Spencer (148 pounds) and Stan Reston (157 pounds).

The Moira team total of 134 points was far in advance of BCI's second-place accumulation of 80 points.

The Collegians dominated the middleweight events, winning three titles to give them second place in the competition.

Rob McNevin of BCI won what was undoubtedly the toughest match of the competition with an overtime decision over Moira's Tony Goncalves in the 130-pound class. Other Collegian titlists included 136-pounder Herb Uddenberg and Duane Carmichael in the 141 pound class.

Centennial Secondary School finished third in the competition with 50 points. Dave Dzwolak provided their only individual title with a victory in the 90-pound division.

Other titles went to Jim Gendron of Napanee in the 168 pound class and Quinte's Bill Cook in the 178 pound division.

The top four qualifiers in each event are eligible to compete in the Central Ontario Secondary School championships to be held at Sir Thomas A. Stewart Secondary School in Peterborough, next Saturday.

Grappling Grad Earns Bronze Medal

SASKATOON (CP-Staff) — Although Ontario and British Columbia wrestlers dominated their portion of the Canada Winter Games by winning four gold medals each, there were other provinces who managed to get in on some of the medal action.

One of those who managed to break up the monopoly was Bellevillian Allan McLuskie. The former Moira Secondary School student took a third-place bronze medal in Sunday's 132-pound competition, after being pinned by gold medallist Tim Wenzel of Kitchener.

McLuskie, a second - year student at College Militaire Royale in St. Jean, Quebec, won the 132 - pound Quebec title to qualify for the Winter Games, and had the distinction of being the first CMR student to be a Canada Games competitor.

While wrestling for Moira, McLuskie won the 98-pound COSSA championship in 1967 68, and the 106-pound title the following year. His home is 31 Golfdale Rd. in the city.

Even Weatherman Hospitable For Second Canada Winter Games

SASKATOON (CP) — The second Canadian Winter Games ended Sunday, leaving a mountain on the flat prairie as a lasting legacy and showing that western hospitality includes near-perfect weather.

Long-underwear weather of a normal Saskatchewan winter never materialized during the 10-day spectacle—average temperature was 21.4 degrees—which brought together more than 2,100 athletes from 10 provinces and two territories to compete in 16 sports.

Officials were still counting tickets but they confidentally predicted that attendance would top 150,000 at the Games which cost $1.6 million to stage of the total, $400,000 went to building Mount Blackstrap, 25 miles south of the city.

Besides the 300-foot mountain, which became a Games symbol, a three-storey department store filled with tents and trailers to house athletes was another unique feature.

While older competitors found it diffuculty to sleep in the village because of the noise, the kids had a ball.

Ontario athletes, with their blazing red and white uniforms, dominated competition as they did at the first Winter Games in Quebec City in 1967.

But tiny Prince Edward Island got a share of the glory, being named winner of the Centennial Trophy, awarded for the first time to the province which shows the greatest over-all improvement from the previous Games.

Gov.-Gen. Roland Michener closed the Games Sunday before a packed house at the 3,500-seat Saskatoon Arena. The Games had been opened by Prime Minister Trudeau.

Burnaby-New Westminster, B.C., will be the site of the next national sports competition, the Canada Summer Games in 1973.

Ontario took 93 of the 317 medals with British Columbia winning 64. The champions earned 41 golds, 31 silver and 21 bronzes. B.C.'s breakdown was 24-15-25 and Manitoba earned third spot with an 11-7-8 count.

After the top three, the order of finish was Quebec, Alberta, Saskatchewan, New Brunswick, Northwest Territories, Newfoundland, Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island and the Yukon.

In aggregate province-by-province standings, based on a complicated scoring system which reflects the performance of all athletes in all sports, Ontario took first place, followed by B.C., Quebec, Alberta, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Newfoundland, Prince Edward Island, Northwest Territories and the Yukon.

Top individual gold medal winner was Wendy Nicholson, 14-year-old gymnast from Toronto. Wendy got three golds by winning on the balance beam, the uneven parallel bars and as best all-round performer.

However, the big winner outside of athletic competition was Tom Eversben of Oakville, Ont., who won the $60,000 first prize in the Lucky Dog Lottery, first legal lottery in Saskatchewan.

In skiing, the spotlight sport, Ontario gained the most gold medals with four but the Northwest Territories had its day also, picking up two gold, one silver and two bronze medals, all in cross-country.

The Firth twins, Shirley and Sharon, from Inuvik, finished one-two in the individual cross-country while the N.W.T. team, anchored by Shirley, won a gold in the relay.

An average crowd of 12,000 fans showed up on each of the four skiing days and conditions were dscribed by experts as exceptional.

The superb weather which began shortly before the Games opened caused early concern that skiing conditions would be poor, but a light snow improved the slopes in time for the competition.

Westerners were the hot shooters in curling with Alberta taking the men's title and Manitoba upsetting Ontario for the women's crown.

Lions' Scores No Indication Winning Tough

SASKATOON (CP) — If you believe the Ontario coach, the opposition was tough during the Canada Winter Games hockey tournament.

But you couldn't tell by the scores the classy Peterborough Lions racked up in winning seven straight games while outscoring their opponents 69-12.

Ontario took the gold medal Sunday with a 7-4 triumph over Calgary Oilers as centre Jim Johnston, 17, scored a goal and three assists before 4,200 fans.

Alberta received the silver medal with Quebec's Thetford Mines Braves, who defeated Nova Scotia All-Stars 7-2 earlier Sunday, getting the bronze.

Asked about the calibre of the opposition in the 12-team, six-day tournament, Ontario coach Bill Twist said:

"Most of the teams were tough. Who said it was easy?"

Twist, 37, who directed Peterborough to first place this year in the Eastern nOtario Junior B league, said Alberta gave Ontario "the toughest fight. Because they were so big and they try to wear you out."

However, Ontario also defeated Alberta 7-2 in Saturday's round-robin competition, although the hard-skating Peterborough boys were outshot 29-27.

"I really thought the opposition would be better," said Johnston, who led the tournament with 13 goals and eight assists for 21 points.

"In our own league everybody hits. . . . They didn't hit us much in this tournament," said the 145-pounder who centred a line with left winger Bob Gainey, 17, and right winger D'Arcy Jenish, 18.

Gainey had seven goals and eight assists and Jenish picked up five goals and seven assists while the line combined for 25 goals and 23 assists.

Ontario had its closest game against Manitoba All-Stars, winning 5-2 while outshooting the losers 35-26.

In Sunday's final, it was 1-1 after the first period before Ontario scored four goals in the second, two coming 18 seconds apart.

Alberta added a goal in the second and two more in the third but the Oilers were outhustled most of the game.

Gainey and Jenish each scored twice for Ontario with Johnston, Jim Jones and Gord Rodin getting the others. Ricki Alexander, with two, Ken Knight and Jim Chaytors scored for Alberta. . .

Ontario also won 10-1 over Newfoundland, 16-2 over the Yukon, 17-1 over New Brunswick and 7-0 over Quebec.

The champions had five wins in A section to finish three points ahead of second-place Alberta. Nova Scotia took B section with four wins and a tie but lost 2-1 to Alberta in semi-finals and 7-2 to Quebec in the battle for the bronze medal.

In the Nova Scotia-Quebec game, Renaud Perron, Jean-Roch Lessard and Pierre Richard each scored two goals for Thetford Mines with Marcel Charette adding the other.

Randy Crowell, 19, from Truro, one of the best players in the tournament, scored both goals for Nova Scotia. Crowell, with four game-winning goals, had 10 in seven games.

Other results Sunday were Manitoba 11, Saskatchewan 8; Newfoundland 7, New Brunswick 0.

Saturday, Nova Scotia and Saskatchewan tied 4-4, the Northwest Territories defeated Prince Edward Island 6-3, Manitoba whipped New Brunswick 8-1, Newfoundland blanked the Yukon 11-0, B.C. edged Quebec 6-5, P.E.I. downed the Yukon 7-2 and N.B. beat N.W.T. 9-4.

In over-all standings Ontario was first, and Alberta second followed by Quebec, Nova Scotia, Newfoundland, B.C., Manitoba, Saskatchewan, N.B., N.W.T., P.E.I. and the Yukon.

Unlucky 13

Cathy Young of British Columbia takes a spill at gate 13 but the B.C. team led with 28 points after two days of competition in women's dual slalom at the Canada Winter Games in Saskatoon.

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Fergie Jenkins, star pitcher with Chicago Cubs of the National Baseball League, signed an $87,000 contract with the club Sunday for the 1971 season, he said in an interview. Jenkins, a native of Chatham, Ont., and a 20 game or better winner in the last four seasons, had said earlier this year he wanted a $100,000 contract because of his record. In a telephone interview from Scotsdale, Ariz., he said the new contract represents a $25,000 increase from last year's pact. The new contract contains no bonus clause, he said.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two girls who live a world apart provided the highlights of the Achilles Indoor Games before 9,876 spectators here Saturday night. Canadian champion Debbie Brill of Haney, B.C., and Snezana Hrepenik of Yugoslavia both attempted a world-record height of six feet 2½ inches in the women's high jump but both failed on three attempts. They both had cleared six feet one inch earlier, establishing Canadian records. The world record is six feet two inches and they broke the Canadian record set by Miss Brill earlier this year by one-quarter of an inch. Miss Hrepevnik was given the victory because she cleared six feet one inch on her first attempt while it took Miss Brill two tries to get over.

PORT ST. LUCIE, Fla. (AP) — Ruth Jessen Sunday won the richest-ever ladies' golf tournament in the $60,000 Sears Women's World Classic. The veteran from Seattle shot a one-under-par 72 on the windy Port St. Lucie course for a 54-hole total of 220, one over par for the 6,394-yard layout. Miss Jessen had rounds of 76-72-72 and beat second-round leader Sandra Palmer to claim the $10,000 winner's cheque, highest women's tour payoff in history.

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Royal Canadian Golf Association Friday announced the formation of a Canadian golf Hall of Fame and named two professionals and four amateurs, all from Eastern Canada, as its first members. The announcement was made at the association's annual meeting during which Patrick C. Osler of Toronto was elected president of the organization. The two professionals named to the new hall of fame are the late George Cumimng of Toronto and the late Charles R. Murray of Montreal, who dominated the Canadian golf scene at the turn of the century. Amateur golfers honored by selection to the Hall of Fame are: Ada Mackenzie of Mississauga, Ont., five times winner of the Canadian Open and Closed ladies titles; Mrs. Marlene Streit of Fonthill, Ont., 10 times winner of the Canadian women's amateur title and the only woman to have won the Canadian, British, Australian and U.S. Ladies open crowns; The late George S. Lyon of Toronto, who won the Canadian amateur crown eight times and the Canadian senior title 10 times; and Ross Sandy Sommerville, of London Hunt Club, 1957 president of the RCGA, six times Canadian amateur champion and the first Canadian to win the U.S. amateur title.

Pistons Black AND Blue

It's Blue Monday for Detroit Pistons . . . after a black weekend in the National Basketball Association.

The Pistons are alive today, but not quite well, after blowing three games in less than 48 hours, losing a player to injury and skidding to fourth place in the Midwest Division.

Detroit started out the weekend Friday in second place and with forward Terry Dischinger intact. But the weekend losses included Sunday's 125-112 walloping by Chicago Bulls in which Dischinger suffered a torn kneecap. Dischinger appears to be out for the rest of the season.

Elsewhere in the NBA, it was Baltimore Bullets 121, Atlanta Hawks 119; Portland Trail Blazers 123, Cleveland Cavaliers 105; Milwaukee Bucks 125, Phoenix Suns 97; Seattle SuperSonics 135; Philadelphia '76ers 128 and Los Angeles Lakers 124, Boston Celtics 116.

In Saturday night's NBA results, it was Atlanta 122, Baltimore 115, New York 108, Detroit 94; San Diego 128, Baltimore 118; Milwaukee 104, San Francisco 96; Philadelphia 118, Portland 105 and Cincinnati 120, Buffalo 94.

Everybody Has Good Bawl

SASKATOON (CP) — "I always bawl," said Maureen Jackson, 17, tears streaming down her face after leading her Manitoba rink to a first-place gold medal in women's curling at the Canada Winter Games.

It was an emotional scene at the Granite Curling Club when the Winnipeg girls thumpe Ontario 12-6. Ontario had beaten them 13-4 in preliminary rounds.

Girls from both rinks embraced each other on the ice, all of them weeping.

"I don't know whether I'm crying because we lost, or because we won a silver medal," said Cris Bodogh, 17, skip of the St. Catharines rink, Ontario junior champions.

The third-place bronze meal went to a Saskatchewan rink skipped by Pauline Thomasso, its 6-4 victory over British Columbia decided on a measurement on the last rock in the 10th en.

Miss Jackson's rink of teenagers counted three in each of three early ends to build an insurmountable lead. Ontario conceded after nine ends.

"Our games just broke apart," said Miss Bodogh, whose rink has been curling together for three years. Both she and her third, Holly Graves, 17, were off the mark on every key shot.

Manitoba's first three-ender in the third came when Cris, with last rock, was heavy on a draw and her stone rolled out of the house. It set the tempo of the match.

Miss Jackson joined her rink as skip only 1½ months ago. Her third, Donna Baldwinson, 18, and 17-year-old twins Cathy, second, and Chris Pidsarko, lead, had curled together but with a different skip.

Other members of the Ontario rink were second Marilyn Bodgogh and lead Heather Graves.

Ontario entered the semi-finals with a 5-0 record and beat Saskatchewan to qualify for the final. Manitoba was 4-1 before beating B.C. in the semi-finals.

Marlies Score Above Heads

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Goaltenders in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series probably find it difficult to believe Toronto Marlboros are only a fifth-place team.

The Marlboros, a source of concern to opposition goaltenders all season, continued to make a nuisance of themselves in weekend play.

They scored 20 goals in scoring two victories, 15-7 against Kitchener Rangers Saturday and 5-2 over Niagara Falls Flyers Sunday, both games played in Toronto.

The wins gave the Marlboros 51 points, 13 back of fourth-place St. Catharines Black Hawks.

In other games Saturday, Montreal Junior Canadiens and Peterborough Petes played to a 3-3 tie at Peterborough while Oshawa Generals trounced Hamilton Red Wings 6-2 at Oshawa.

Sunday, St. Catharines downed Oshawa 5-2 at St. Catharines, Kitchener Rangers took Ottawa 67s 4-3 at Kitchener and Montreal nipped Peterborough 3-2 at Montreal.

Five goals by Steve Shutt highlighted the Marlboros' walloping of Kitchener. Gavin Kirk and Bill Harris each connected three times for Toronto and Paulin Bordeleau twice. Single goals came from George Ferguson and Dave Gardner.

Tom Cassidy led Kitchener with three goals. Chris Ahrene added two, while single goals were netted by Bruce Herridge and Phil Iwaskiewicz.

The Marlboros started slowly against Niagara Falls Sunday, but rallied for four goals in the final period.

Scoring for Toronto were Steve Vickers, Gardner, Ferguson, Kirk and Bordeleau. Morris Titanic and Eric Vail connected for the Flyers.

Kitchener rebounded from its trouncing by the Marlboros to hamper Ottawa in its bid for first place Sunday. The loss left the 67s in second place, one point back of Peterborough.

Hull Acquires Montreal Shadow, But All by Himself with LA

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Bobby Hull is on the threshold of achieving his seventh National Hockey League season with 40 or more goals, but a new shadow has emerged to plague Chicago Black Hawks' flashy winger.

Hull scored three goals and helped set up two others in a 7-5 Chicago victory over Los Angeles Kings Sunday. That ran his season goal total to 39, and with 18 games remaining, he could still make it his fifth season with 50 or more goals.

Hull was held to a single assist in Montreal Saturday night where he encountered his newest shadow—Canadiens rookie right-winger Rejean Houle who not only held the Golden Jet in check but also scored two goals in a 7-1 Montreal victory.

In other games Sunday, Toronto Maple Leafs beat Minnesota North Stars 4-1, New York Rangers downed Detroit Red Wings by the same score and St. Louis Blues defeated Buffalo Sabres 3-1.

Saturday, Toronto beat St. Louis 3-1, New York shut out Pittsburgh Penguins 2-0, Los Angeles edged Boston Bruins 5-4, Detroit nipped Buffalo 6-5 and California Golden Seals downed Philadelphia Flyers 5-3.

It was the 27th game of Hull's career in which he scored three or more goals, thus breaking the league record held by retired Montreal star Maurice (Rocket) Richard.

"If I get a goal early, I guess I get dangerous and go out and get three," said Hull whose first goal came 33 seconds after the opening face-off.

"I felt terrific out there tonight, but I'm glad it's over and now I don't have to worry about any more records."

Hull's first two goals and one by brother Dennis gave the Hawks a 3-1 first-period lead at Chicago, but the Kings twice fought back to within one goal of the West Division leaders.

But each time Los Angeles pulled within range, once in the second period and once in the third, Chicago centre Stan Mikita scored to widen the margin. His second goal at 18:44 of the final period was the clincher.

Dave Keon's 33rd goal of the season proved the clincher for Toronto at Minnesota. The Leaf captain's best previous season was a 32-goal performance last year.

Rick Ley and Guy Trottier scored the first two goals and Toronto moved to within three points of the third-place Canadiens in the East Division. The Leafs, however, have played three more games than Montreal.

Detroit, outshot 45-23 by the Rangers in New York, stayed in contention for most of the game with the heroics of goalie Roy Edwards.

BOBBY HULL

Tim Ecclestone of the Wings scored early in the third period to match a late second-period marker by New York's Pete Stemkowski, but subsequent goals by Jim Neilson, Walt Tkaczuk and Ted Irvine sewed it up for the Rangers who pulled back to within seven points of the East-leading Bruins.

Frank St. Marseille scored twice to lead St. Louis against the Sabres at Buffalo.

Former Blues centre Phil Goyette got the Buffalo goal, the 200th of his 14 seasons with Buffalo, St. Louis, New York and Montreal.

At Montreal Saturday night, Canadiens coach Al MacNeil assigned Houle the task formerly performed so well by now-retired Claude Provost.

"I was a bit nervous at first," said Houle, "but things worked out pretty well.

"Hull is a very strong man, and can hold a checker off with one arm. I tried to skate with him step for step, and I was lucky to get the chances to score goals."

Hull said he was impressed with Houle's skating ability but wasn't ready to grant the rookie equal status with Provost as a checker until he sees him in action a few more times.

Pete Mahovlich also collected two goals for Montreal and Phil Roberto led the team with three which prompted some self-criticism from Chicago goalie Tony Esposito.

"I really stunk the joint out tonight," said the league's top goalie of 1969-70. "But they deserved to win. They played well. What else is there to say?"

At Toronto, Keon got the game-winner and an insurance goal in the last minute of play to lead the Leafs.

Winger Paul Henderson gave Toronto an early 1-0 lead but Wayne Connelly's second-period score for St. Louis set the stage for Keon's winner, a tip-in from a point shot by Jim McKenny.

The Blues had pulled goalie Glenn Hall in the last minute of play when Keon got a breakaway and fired at the empty net. St. Louis centre Garry Unger threw his stick in frustration and deflected the puck away from the open goal but the score counted as if the puck had gone in the net.

Phil Esposito scored his 50th season goal to help Boston to a 3-0 first-period lead at Los Angeles but the surprising Kings came back and tied the game 4-4 on Real Lemieux's goal at 7:15 of the final period.

Mike Byers, with his second goal of the night, dealt the final blow to the Bruins with 41 seconds remaining.

The Kings victory, before a record home crowd of 16,005, ended a three-game losing string.

Goalie Ed Giacomin registered his fifth shutout of the season and 36th of his career by stopping 37 shots fired at him in Pittsburgh.

New York took only 21 shots at Pittsburgh netminder Al Smith who allowed goals by Jim Nielson and Walt Tkaczuk.

At Detroit, the Red Wings bombarded former team-mate Roger Crozier with 51 drives before they scraped up their narrow victory with third-period goals by Gordie Howe and Red Berenson.

Jim Rutherford and Roy Edwards, sharing the Detroit netminding, made only 20 saves between them to hold off Buffalo.

Norm Ferguson's two goals led the Seals over Philadelphia in the upset at Oakland.

California goalie Chris Worthy allowed two goals by Philadelphia's Gary Dornhoefer, but held off the Flyers long enough to post his first victory of the season.

Despite the loss, the Flyers still hold third spot in the West Division with California seventh.

Montreal resumes action tonight against the Canucks in Vancouver and the only game Tuesday sees Boston at Buffalo.

Nearly Too Generous

KINGFIELD, Me. (AP) — Gustavo Thoeni's skis are causing him some trouble. Not the ones he skis on, but the ones he lends out.

Thoeni, the World Cup leader from Italy, lent a pair of his skis Sunday to Edmund Bruggman of Switzerland before the running of the two heats of the men's giant slalom at Sugarleaf Mountain.

Bruggmann's skis were destroyed in a fire Saturday.

Thoeni almost proved to be generous to a fault.

Bruggmann, a five time Swiss champion in the giant slalom, gave Thoeni's skis the second best ride of the day. Thoeni gave another pair the best.

Thoeni, 22, who began international competition last year, won the first heat on Sugarloaf's difficult Narrow Guage Trail. Bruggmann finished right behind.

The two then swapped finishing order in the second heat, but Bruggman was unable to overcome the slim lead Thoeni had established.

Bobby Hull moved into a fourth-place tie with Johnny Bucyk of Boston Bruins in the National Hockey Leagues scoring race with a five-point effort in Chicago Black Hawks' 7-5 win over Los Angeles Kings Sunday night.

Hull scored three goals and added two assists to lift his season total to 81 points on 39 goals and 42 assists.

Boston's Phil Esposito, who scored his 50th goal of the season Saturday night, holds a firm grip on first place with 113 points, followed by team-mate Bobby Orr with 28 goals and 71 assists for 99 points.

Toronto Peewees Prove Superiority

QUEBEC (CP) — The superiority of peewee teams from the Metropolitan Toronto Hockey League was shown again at this year's annual Quebec international peewee hockey tournament as Toronto Don Valley won the grand championship in a convincing fashion.

Don Valley, after winning the class AA title, romped to a 5-9 victory Saturday over Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., to claim the overall honors.

It marked the eighth time in the tournament's 12-year history that a Toronto team has won the grand championship and it was the 11th victory by an Ontario team.

The grand champions beat Toronto Shopsys in overtime to claim the class AA.

Before defeating Sault Ste. Marie, class A champions, Don Valley trounce group B champions Richmond Hill, Ont., 6-1 in the first game of the final elimination series among the winners of the four divisions.

Sault Ste. Marie gained its berth in the final with a 6-2 win over Donnacona, Que., champions of class C.

In other games Saturday, Caughnawaga, Que., Indians took the Indian championship and the Georges Trudel trophy with a 4-3 win over Quebec Indians.

The Canada-United States championship went south of the border when Boston beat LaSalle, Que., 2-1 in overtime to claim the Progression League Trophy for the second year in a row.

Leeds Forget Upset, Maintain Top Position

LONDON (Reuter) — Leeds United, putting away the nightmare of last week's upset English Cup defeat, scored a 3-0 victory over fourth-place Wolverhampton Wanderers Saturday to maintain first place in the English League First-Division soccer standings.

Leeds, showing no ill effects from the Cup upset at the hands of Fourth-Division Colchester, was completely on top, ending the Wanderers' run of seven league matches without defeat.

Allan Clarke put Leeds on the road to victory with a goal after 19 minutes and second-half goals were added by Paul Madeley and Johnny Giles.

Arsenal stayed three points behind Leeds with a game in hand after surviving a second-half rally by lowly Ipswich. Charlie George, John Radford and Frank McLintock netted inside 39 minutes for Arsenal, but the London club eased up in the second half.

Former Arsenal winger Jimmy Robertson shocked his old team-mates with two goals, but Arsenal held on to win 3-2.

Chelsea strengthened its hold on third place, four points behind Arsenal, with a 2-1 victory over Stoke City. Ian Hutchinson and Ron Harris scored for Chelsea, while Gerry Conroy netted for Stoke.

Alan Gowling, unsung amid Manchester United's star lineup, stole the honors with a four-goal performance in United's 5-1 crushing of Southampton.

Gowling scored three of his goals during a nine-minute first-half spree. Willie Morgan netted United's other goal.

Liverpool, which had beaten Leeds and Arsenal in its last two league matches, had to settle for a scoreless tie against league champion Everton.

Brian Robson scored the winning goal in Newcastle United's 1-0 victory over Tottenham Hotspur.

Franco-Ontarians Voice Discontent

TORONTO (CP) — It takes "some thunder in Quebec" to prod the Ontario government toward improving the situation of French-Canadians in Ontario, said a delegate to the congress of L'Association Canadienne-Francaise d'Ontario this weekend.

Andre Lecuyer of Toronto, in a study session on provincial politics and French-Canadian cultural life, said: The "old guard" of Franco-Ontarians are getting tired of struggling to put across their point of view.

"The provincial government sits on its rear end year after year. We prove again and again that we exist. Then when some thunder comes out of Quebec, they give us a few morsels of cake. Excuse me, but I'm fed up with it."

Hamilton lawyer Ryan Paquette, 41, elected president of the association Sunday, said one of his first tasks will be to approach the Ontario government, asking for the same support that the association receives from the federal government and from Quebec.

He said in an interview he senses a "sympathetic attitude" at Queen's Park.

At the opening plenary session Saturday, outgoing president Roger Seguin said the association has received a $145,5000 grant from the federal department of Secretary of State Gerard Pelletier for social-cultural activities this year and another $20,000 for administration.

Bonanza With A Message Makes For Good TV Viewing

NEW YORK (AP) — Bonanza, NBC's long-playing family Western, is hardly a crusading series but it came up Sunday night with an effective drama with the theme of bigotry.

The hour belonged to Dean Jagger, not the regular stars of the series. He played a retired general, a Civil War hero returning to Nevada to settle down. Just as his town was to be renamed in the general's honor, he was involved in shooting an Indian he claimed was stealing his horses.

The general was such an upstanding character that even Ben Cartwright was urging him to run for governor. At that point, however, it began to be revealed that the man's character was flawed by a psychopathic hatred of Indians—"We should have killed them all," he finally exploded as Ben looked shocked.

Of course, he finally got his come-uppance—an Indian spear in the back—but it was a good action story and made some points rather neatly.

The series, rolling along smoothly for more than a decade, usually has pretty good scripts and there is an interesting mix of characters. It was notable this week, too, that Lorne Greene was almost incidental to the story, Michael Landon played a bit part and Dan Blocker, the third star, was included only in a scnee or two.

Hogan's Heroes on CBS and The Bill Cosby Show on NBC are two half-hour comedy programs which seem likely to disappear at the end of this season.

The five-year-old comedy series about hi-jinx in a Second World War German prisoner-of-war camp has pretty well milked the situation of its humorous potential. Bob Crane and his merry crew each week evolved some new way to make bigger boobs of their German captors than they—Werner Klemperer as a vain colonel and John Banner as a nervous sergeant—make of themselves.

In its early Sunday evening spot, the series has a large children's audience although its toughest competition, The Wonderful World of Disney attracts the same age group.

The Bill Cosby Show, after only two seasons, will be more of a loss. It has had difficult sledding in a position opposite the second half of ABC's popular FBI and CBS's Ed Sullivan Show. The half hour usually relies on a sly, understated humor and has a sort of spontaneous quality.

This week's Disney show—a rerun—was actually a 1962 movie called Moon Pilot, and showed its age by its theme—sending an astronaut around the moon—and by sequences showing a movie-maker's idea of the recovery of a space ship. Since then, the public has seen the real thing—and it's better.

Hollywood Preparing For Oscars

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The film industry's 43rd Oscar derby reaches the semi-finals today with scheduled announcement of nominees for awards for the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences.

Advance indications pointed to a contest of love and war.

Two hard-bitten treatments of the war theme, M-A-S-H and Patton, seemed certaio to figure among the important awards. So did a couple of romances, Love Story and Ryan's Daughter, which proved immensely popular with audiences, if not critics.

Another strong contender was Five Easy Pieces, a tale of present-day alienation starring Jack Nicholson.

Those five films were nominated for best direction in the annual awards of the Directors Guild of America, which are generally a good bellwether of tl.. Oscars.

The final awards will be announced April 15 in the annual Oscar extravaganza, to be held at the Los Angeles Music Centre. The nominations receive a less sumptuous production, but there was to be a touch of glamor.

Past winners John Wayne, Shirley Jones, Anthony Quinn and Ruth Gordon were to appear at the Academy's headquarters in West Hollywood to read off the nominations for the news media.

The Oscar campaign, which had been in a lull since the deadline for nominations a week ago, now begins in earnest. A question mark in this year's race is George C. Scott.

His portrayal of Gen. George Patton was certain to be nominated for best actor. But all of the 2,986 Academy voters are aware that Scott once tried to decline his nomination for best supporting actor in The Hustler.

Now he has been quoted from a location in Spain that he still thinks the Academy awards are bunk and he would refuse an Oscar if he won it.

Cable Television Future Discussed at Meeting

TORONTO (CP) — A three-day communications conference ended here Saturday as it began —glancing into the future.

Harry Boyle, vice-chairman of the Canadian Radio-Television Commission, told conference delegates at a closing dinner that communications and technology must be enlisted in the "cause of social change."

People in the broadcasting industry must work to guarantee a "humanistic future," he said.

The CRTC vice-chairman said that broadcasting in North America grew without concern about its social impact.

Earlier in the conference on communications and the public interest delegates were given glimpses into the technical possibilities of cable-television systems.

Douglas Leiterman, a leading television producer, said that cable systems could be used for delivering mail. It would be cheaper and more efficient but it raised questions of privacy.

Business could be transacted by cable connected to centralized computers. The government could learn immediately how much revenue it received through taxation.

But the conference also dealt with current communications problems. Delegates heard:

—Two cable television operators, E. R. Rogers of Toronto and W. Garth Pither of Vancouver, say that television broadcasters affected by cable need help.

—Three top communications lawyers representing large broadcasting interests agree that all financial information about broadcasting and cable operations should be made public.

—Gordon Keeble of Toronto, president of Keeble Cable Television Co. Ltd., says that programs telecast from foreign countries via satellite will raise regulatory problems for the Canadian Radio-Television Commission.

—Professor Daniel J. Baum of Osgoode Hall Law School recommend "counter-advertisements" to reply to certain advertisements on radio and television.

Alarm System Fails

WASHINGTON (AP) — With the Whie House demanding an explanation of a weekend foul up, the defence department and the Federal Communications Commission both say they will take a closer look at the way the government warns the United States against nuclear attacks.

The announcements Sunday came only hours before the emergency broadcast warning system malfunctioned for the second day in a row.

The system, directed by the North American Air Defence Command inside Cheyenne Mountain near Colorado Springs, Colo., first failed Saturday when a technician inserted the wrong teletype tape into the broadcast wires of The Associated Press and United Press International.

The tape normally sent would have notified broadcasters NORAD was testing the system. Instead, it said the "president had directed a notification of emergency action, that all normal broadcasting was to stop immediately, and that broadcasters were to transmit the warning.

The system failed again Sunday when NORAD was unable to take over control of The Associated Press teletype wires because of a technical failure. The test was transmitted as usual over the UPI circuit.

A subsequent test over the AP lines Sunday night worked. Technicians from NORAD, the telephone company and The AP said the cause of the earlier failure was unknown.

An investigation into Saturday's false alert was requested by the White House. A spokesman said Sunday "those responsible at NORAD will see that it does not happen again."

Saturday's erroneous alert remained in effect 18 minutes although many stations did not shut down. Some stations did not see the teletype message and others doubted its authenticity, an AP poll showed.

Defence Secretary Melvin Laird said he has asked for a report on the false alert and FCC Commissioner Robert Wells said the FCC and the national industrial advisory committee of broadcasters and wire services will evaluate industry response to the error.

"We will see why the stations did not go off the air," Wells said.

Beatles Earned Millions, Now Said to Be Bankrupt

LONDON (AP) — The Beatles, who earn up to $10 million a year, were nearly bankrupt in 1969, the High Court was told today.

Lawyer Morris Finer said Allen Klein, the Beatles' American manager, successfully generated additional income and rescued the pop quartet.

None of the Beatles was in court on the second day of a suit brought by Beatle Paul McCartney to put the group's business affairs in the hands of a receiver. McCartney wants a legal dissolution of the Beatles, who last performed together in public more than two years ago.

The beatles have earned hundreds of millions of dollars since they moved to the top of the world pop charts nine years ago and money still pours in from royalties and business interests. McCartney claims that Klein, following his appointment as manager in January, 1969, spread discord among the group, did not tell the truth and helped himself to unwarranted commissions.

Finer told the court Klein "rescued the Beatles from almost total bankruptcy." The lawyer is appearing on behalf of Apple Corps Ltd., the group's business organization, and the other three Beatles—John Lennon, George Harrison and Ringo Starr.

Klein is not a party in the action, expected to last through this week.

"He inherited a situation and rightly or wrongly—and we say rightly—took the view that the vital thing from his point of view, having regard to the total mess, almost total bankruptcy of their affairs, was to generate income," Finer told the court.

McCartney claims the Beatles owe more in taxes than they have in assets.

Klein, in a statement issued out of court last month, denied that the group's finances were in bad shape. He said the partnership was solvent and had more than enough assets to meet tax liabilities.

Entertainment Roundup

MUNICH (AP) — Singer Caterina Valente, 40, and Eric van Arco have been divorced in Berlin, a West German magazine reported Sunday. They were married 19 years.

MIAMI (AP) — Metropolitan Opera star Giorgio Tozzi set up a jet-age doubleheader for himself Saturday, singing two performances of the same opera, on the same day, but 1,100 miles apart.

After finishing a matinee performance in The Barber of Seville in New York at 5 p.m., Tozzi raced to Newark and caught a 6 p.m. flight to Miami.

"He arrived with minutes to spare," said Walter Palevoda. "It was a close shave for the Barber of Seville."

Tozzi made the flight in costume and full makeup.

CHICAGO (AP) — Elizabeth Hines Warton, a Broadway actress of the 1920s and later a star in Helen Trent and I Love a Mystery radio programs, is dead at age 76. Mrs. Warton died Friday.

Which Day Is Best?

☐ MONDAY ☐ THURSDAY
☐ TUESDAY ☐ FRIDAY
☐ WEDNES. ☐ SATURDAY

Advertisers frequently ask this question. Fortunately, there is no best day to advertise. Each day new wants arise, bringing new readers as old ones satisfy their wants. We recommend that you start your ad tomorrow and cancel it when you get results. After many years of experience with millions of want ads, we know tomorrow is the best day to start your ad and every day is the best day to advertise in The Intelligencer want ad leader.

Tweed

TWEED — Mrs. Oswald Mieske, of Vennachar, returned to her home after being a patient in the Belleville General Hospital, where she underwent surgery.

Miss Elizabeth Woodhouse, of Moira Street, Tweed, had the misfortune to fall and fracture her hip, she was transferred to Belleville General Hospital on Wednesday afternoon of this week, by ambulance, and underwent surgery that same evening.

Mrs. Morley Holmes and Mrs. William Hartin, both Tweed residents, are patients in the Belleville General Hospital at the present time.

Francis Manion and his wife, Mary, of Ardoch, along with Harold Perry, also or Ardoch, are in Saskatoon enjoying the Winter Games. Their main interest is the fact that their son, Glen Manion represents Ontario in the Judo Olympics.

Mrs. Herbert Rose of Vennachar, returned to her home this past week after spending a week with her mother, Mrs. Emma Jackson, Deseronto, and Mrs. Joseph Anderson, Napanee, while Mr. Anderson was a patient in the Belleville General Hospital.

First City Snowmobile Races Pack Track and Grandstand

Racers came to Belleville on the weekend from as far off as Toronto to share the $1,650 cash prizes awarded in the first snowmobile races ever staged in the city.

Favorable weather and track conditions drew a crowd of 1500 to the Fairgrounds to watch 11 classes of racing sponsored by the Quinte Exhibition Board.

Events were run in A - D Stock and A - E Modified, in addition to powderpuff and junior races.

Altogether, there were 142 drivers entered on every conceivable make of machine. Entry fee was $5 and admission was $1.50 for adults and 50 cents to students.

With so many races it was probable that there would be accidents. City Ambulance had a quiet day however, taking only two victims of mishaps to the hospital.

Fred Barkhouse, of Goulborne St., Stittsville was hospitalized for a brief time when his machine collided with another. Injuries sustained in the accident were to the left hip and the knees. There was no serious damage and he was released shortly after arrival.

The other accident did not involve a snowmobile. A police officer, on duty, slipped due to bad footing and suffered a broken ankle.

Pete Elmhirst of Keene, near Peterborough, was the day's most successful driver, picking up two trophies and $60 first - place cheques for A and D stock wins on Rupp machines.

Ned Bennett drove a Skidoo to a B Stock win, while W. Marshall took C Stock honors with an Arctic Cat.

Picton's Doug Thompson won A Modified, with Don Carr of Westport driving a Skidoo home first in B Modified, Belleville's Bill Ireland winning C Modified on a Yamaha, Ross Chalmers taking D Modified with a Skidoo, and Rick Sled winning E Modified on a Skidoo.

Jeannette Woodman drove her Skidoo to first place in the women's "powderpuff event, while "Ausie" Vigoda won the junior race, for drivers 16 years and under.

Other area entries who place in the money included Belleville's Ken McGee — fourth in A Stock; Picton's Ernie Cailey — second in D Stock; Allan Lanigan of Tweed — third in A Modified; Len Vigodda of Belleville — second in C Modified; Debbie Weese — Carrying Place — third in powderpuff; and Jimmy Weese, Carrying Place — second in junior.

Alderman Gerald Joyce won a novelty "executive race", beating Exhibition Board president Jack Bush, and former presidents Dr. Harry Burns and Cameron Bunnett to the finish line.

A fair board spokesman estimated $1,000 was lost on the event, but was optimistic that the groundwork had been established to have Belleville included on the Ontario Snowmobile Racing Federation circuit, hopefully next year.

Loyalist Cagers Display Bounce

The Loyalist basketball team proved it was capable of bouncing back from some of the resounding defeats suffered in the first year of Ontario Collegiate Athletic Association competition, by closing their season with two strong performances.

Friday night, the Lancers managed to hold a powerful Algonquin College to respectful 72-57 count, after the Cats had buried Loyalist 90-33 in an earlier meeting this season.

The Belleville cagers continued their upsurge Saturday with a 77-62 home court triumph over Durham Lords from Oshawa.

Forward Rick Webster provided the Lancers with the momentum for their second win of the year, pumping in 34 points against the Oshawa school. Blair Culham was another standout with 24 points against Durham, while Tim Goheen and Terry Tompkins played excellent defensive games for the winners.

The victory was the second of the year for Loyalist and pulled them out of the league basement, with both of their wins coming over Durham which had previously recorded two victories against OCAA rivals.

Loyalist took a surprising 31-29 half time lead against the Algonquin Cats Friday, but were unable to head the home team in the second half.

Moira Secondary School graduate Gary Swan was top scorer for Algonquin with 24 points. For Loyalist, Blair Culham netted 19 points and Rick Webster 17.

Coach Paul Wall's comment that "we ran out of gas" in Friday's 12-4 loss to Algonquin could be readily applied to both Lancer hockey games.

After grabbing a 5-4 lead over Durham, Saturday, Loyalist was unable to hold on as the Lords fired 12 goals to pile up a 16-6 victory.

Gary Goyer paced the losers with a hat trick with other tallies going to Len Taft, Al Ray and Dave Blakely.

Against Algonquin, the Lancers were only one goal behind after two periods, but eight goals in the final period opened the way for a 12-4 win by the Cats. Len Taft, Al Jarbeau, Dave Blakely and John McDonald were the Belleville scorers.

Point Anne Avenged

Point Anne midgets avenged a 5-4 loss by their peewees to Colborne by handing the Colborne midgets a 13-5 drubbing in the third game of their OMHA "C" play-downs.

Reed was the big gun for the Point Anne 219 midgets, firing five goals. Richardson, Hayes and Evans added two goals apiece with Bourgeau and Van Volkengurg getting the others.

For Point Anne's Bellwood Lumber peewees it was Matherson with a pair of goals and Waterson and Kells with one each.

The midgets hold a 2-0 lead in their best-of-five series with Colborne, while the teams have played one tie game. The win by the Colborne peewees came in the opening game of their series with Point Anne.

Mulroneys Hold Own In OMHA

Mulroney's Sunoco Novice B all stars managed to hold their own in regular OMHA competition over the weekend with a 5-2 win over Tweed, Saturday before losing a 7-5 verdict to Colborne, Sunday.

Mark Crawford was the big gun in the win over Tweed with a hat trick performance. Wayne Deighton and Bob Hedge completed the scoring with a goal apiece.

Billy Rowe tallied twice in Sunday's loss to Colborne with the other markers going to Crawford, John Henry and Peter Fradette. Kevin Meagher added three helpers for Mulroneys.

Hornets Still Stinging

The Northern Electric pennant winners showed that they still carried their sting as the Hornets took a 5-3 decision from the Dukes in their semi-final playoff game Sunday.

In the other playoff matchup, the No Stars and the Good Guys battled to a 1-1 tie.

Wayne Brown Jr. had two goals and two assists for the Hornets, with Bill Goodfellow, Charlie Reynolds and Edgar Eley counting the others.

Scoring champion Rosebush along with Tom Pierce and Doug Boyle replied for the losers.

Gord Sine tallied the only goal for the No Stars, while Bob Baitley evened the game with a score for the Good Guys.

Peterborough Pivot Packs Big Punch

Jim Johnston struck a blow for the "good little man," winning the scoring championship of the Canada Winter Games hockey competition.

The lightweight Peterborough Lions pivot piled up 21 points, including a tournament leading 13 goals in seven games, to give him the scoring title.

Johnston, the younger brother of Belleville Mo-Hawks winger Ray Johnston, parlayed his hustling style of play into a second-place finish in the Eastern Ontario Junior B scoring race this season.

The centre for the gold medalists had a three-point lead on teammate Rick Nobes and Bill Thompson of Saskatchewan.

Johnston's line of Bob Gainey, D'Arcy Jenish and himself totaled 48 points including 25 goals.

The Lions return to Eastern Ontario league action next Saturday at 3 p.m. when they are hosts to Belleville Fairways in the first game of a best-of-seven semi-final playoff series.

Batawa Skiers Well Up

Batawa skiers gave a good account of themselves in the Southern Ontario Zone D class competition held at Kitchener's Chicopee Ski Club Saturday.

John Dekker placed 12th in the men's competition while Bennett Smets managed to pull off an 18th place finish.

Leslie Anne Cormack matched Dekker's performance by finishing in the top dozen of the women's section.

Geoff Todd of Kitchener earned a promotion to "C" class competition when he repeated the winning performance that he gave at the Batawa Special Slalom last week.

Noelle Davis of Collingwood won the women's title.

Safe, Smooth Noiseless Ride Is Not So Easy to Provide

By RAY STAPELY

Automotive engineers are constantly working to improve body suspension to create a safe, smooth, noiseless and comfortable ride. Prospective car buyers look for these qualities when choosing a car. It is often the deciding factor.

When you consider the variable demands made on the suspension system by the car owner, you will realize the multiple decisions that go into suspension design. The average motorist expects his car to maintain a uniform performance, whether he is the only passenger or the car is loaded with his entire family and all their holiday luggage and equipment. This can include not only what is stored inside the car but what is loaded externally in a car-top carrier and pulled behind in a trailer!

A word about overloading — it is extremely dangerous to weigh down the rear of the car so that it sags close to the ground. Several things can happen. Rear springs can break, road wheels can split apart, and other expensive parts such as ball studs, pins, bushings and tires will suffer premature wear.

And this is not the whole picture. Headlights are tilted up and become serious hazards steering is affected due to loss of front end alignment, and brake action is not as efficient. Going over a bump can cause the gas tank to be pierced or ripped open, and the drive shaft can be bent.

For people who use their cars for heavy loads frequently, some manufacturers offer as optional equipment an auor some similar heavy-duty "package" which includes strengthened springs and shocks.

Modern cars come equipped with either coil springs or torsion bars in the front and coil or elliptical springs in the rear. Many have coil springs all around. There are many opinions regarding which are best. My own is that coil springs offer a softer ride, but multiple elliptical leaf springs are better for carrying heavy loads. This is something to consider when purchasing a new car.

Also, there is another accessory available to counteract the sagging caused by overweight. This is a shock-absorber with a coil spring fitted around the outside of it which will help support the rear of the car and hold it up when laden down with luggage. Also available are "booster" coils that fit over the regular shock-absorbers and do the same job as the above mentioned ones. These are available for a few dollars each, but if not properly adjusted they can rattle and also cause the car to ride high in the rear and so throw it out of balance.

I sometimes recommend the pneumatic hydraulic airplane-type shock-absorbers which can cope with all variables in weight loads. They are easily installed and are not much larger than regular ones. A rubber sleeve connects the upper and lower sections of these chamber. These in turn are attached to rubber hoses which are joined into a single hose. This single hose goes through into the trunk and is fitted with an air valve. The idea is to load your car, then drive to a these rubber sleeves until the rear of your car reaches the desired height. After unloading, simply deflate. This can be done in seconds.

And finally, I would like to give a few safety tips on loading your car. Do not place very heavy objects on the rear seat. In a collision, the forward thrust of the car is abruptly stopped or reversed, but the momentum of loose objects develops a thrust of hundreds of pounds more than their actual weight. People in the front have been crushed by the shifting of goods from the back seat.

Distribute weight as evenly as possible to avoid any tilting.

Do not use the rear shelf in your car except for papers or light clothing. Toys and rocks collected by children or other known to be lethal when flying forward as brakes are jammed on in an emergency.

Doctor Sues Hospital

TORONTO (CP) — Two doctors have accused North York General Hospital of keeping them from using the hospital's facilities without justification and one of them is suing the hospital.

Dr. J. E. Sheriton, an obstetrician, is suing the 565-bed hospital, asking nominal damages of $1.

Dr. Claude Macdonald, a 46-year-old surgeon, has complained that the hospital has repeatedly rejected his applications to join the staff without giving him any reason.

Dr. Macdonald has accused the surgical staff of "professional nepotism," saying the restriction to five general surgeons creates a monopoly situation which denies patients the choice of a doctor.

Doctors are appointed to a hospital staff by the board of governors on the advice of medical advisory committee, which is appointed by the board of governors.

Dr. G. Leslie Watt, chief of obstetrics and gynecology at the hospital, said staff is limited by the beds available.

"Is it fair to give a doctor an appointment and not give him any beds?" Dr. Watt said.

PLEASANT CHANGE

BRESCIA, Italy (AP) — Agostino Dolcini, 87, had the age on his tombstone recarved for the seventh time. Dolcini purchased the tombstone when he turned 80, thinking he wouldn't last out the year, but has had to change the age on it every year since. His mother died at 110.

Water Is Best Burn Treatment

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: There's a difference of opinion around our house on how to treat burns. Yesterday I burned the back of my hand while taking a steak out of our broiler.

Would you believe it I was all out of butter in the house, so I spilled some cream over my hand and put a bandage on it. It was messy, to say the least. When I removed the bandage today my skin was blistered and my hand was painful.

My husband says if I'd listened to him, I wouldn't be in trouble now. He kept saying that all I needed to do was soak my hand in ice water right after the burn. My question is this: Isn't the usual first aid treatment for burns the application of some fatty substance like butter? — Mrs. F.

Comment: Sometimes the simplest remedies are the best. Lately doctors believe that water application to a burn is better treatment than "messy" ointments and fats. Although some stress the need for ice water, many believe that ordinary tap water is just as efficient in relieving pain and preventing blisters and infection.

But the sooner you treat the burn the better. Once blisters form, you have lost valuable time. Using water early stops pain, reduces its severity, and prevents damage and infection to the skin. How long you keep the burned extremity in water will depend upon the severity of the burn.

Of course, if it's severe, or involves the face or other parts of the body badly, it becomes more than a first-aid problem. It's time to call the doctor. If there's any similar accident in the future, Mrs. F., I suggest you forget about a "grease job" and run for the water faucet.

For Mr. L.: Your problem of recent difficulty in writing is not a rare one. I recall quite a few businessmen and secretaries who complained of increasing trouble in writing. Some could barely put down their name. Eventually, they improved.

This condition of "writer's cramp" is a clinical syndrome called mogigraphia. It can be stubborn. Its cause is not always easily ascertained. Most often it is found in normal patients who have no significant neurologic findings.

We simply try to teach them to relax the fingers and hold the pen or pencil as loosely as possible. Not writing for awhile may be helpful. In others, we try to exclude such conditions as Parkinson's disease, or other trouble in the nervous system.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I used to have a lot of indigestion before I had my gallbladder out. It was filled with stones. But I'm sorry to report that I still have gas and discomfort after eating.

Frankly, I'm disappointed. I was led to understand that I would feel like a new woman after the operation. Now when I eat fried foods and fats I feel as bad as I ever did. Is this usual? — Mrs. B.

Comment: It is usual for most patients to say they feel better after having a bad fall bladder removed. But there are exceptions. It is for this reason that most surgeons can't promise every patient that digestion will invariably improve after operation.

It might be advisable, Mrs. B., that you still be wary of fried foods and other fats, even though your gallbladder is out. It might be a good idea for you to carefully test the foods you eat and discard those which repeatedly upset you. Try a home-made elimination diet before you see your doctor.

Readers Want Word Quiz

We haven't had a word-quiz for quite a few months, and the mail is running heavily in favor of another. Today we'll deal with the origins of some common words, which may surprise you:

1. Why is a soldier called a "soldier," and why is the lowest rank in the Army called "private" when they have less privacy than anyone?

2. Why are the solemn ceremonies of installing a President in office called an "inauguration," and what has it got to do with birds?

3. How did the game of "dominoes" get its name, and what connection does it have with prayers?

4. The "acme" of something is now its highest pitch of perfection; but originally it was part of what sort of medical diagnosis?

5. Speaking of medicine, what dread disease is named after a character in 16th Century Latin poem, which bears the title of the disease?

6. What did a "broker" originally break?

7. How could the playwrights of ancient Greece have been called "athletes" when they had nothing at all to do with sports?

8. Speaking of plays, what were the earliest "melodramas"?

9. What does a "thrill" have to do with our nostrils?

10. Why was "prestige" at first not a complimentary word?

ANSWERS:

1. "Soldier" comes from the Latin, meaning "a gold coin," for until modern times most soldiers were paid mercenaries; a "private" is a man drawn from the deprived level of the community. 2. "Inauguration" comes from the ancient Roman "augurs" who studied the flights and habits of birds and predicted for new rulers what the future held in store for them. 3. "Dominoes", invented by two French monks, was called so because the winner of each game signified so by reciting "Dixit Dominus, Domino Meo," the first line of the Vesper service. 4. Early doctors divided diseases into four periods: arche, the beginning; anotasis, the increase; acme, the state of utmost violence; and paracme, the decline. 5. "Syphilis" was the name of a shepherd in the title of a 16th Century poem by Fracastoro, and the first sufferer of the disease named after him.

6. The First "brokers" broke or broached, wine casks; gradually the name was applied to marriage - brokers, pawn-brokers and eventually stockbrokers. 7. "Athletes" were anyone who "competed for a prize." 8. "Melodramas" were not overly sentimental but simply plays with music "melody". 9. "Thrill" meant, "to pierce;" the "nosthril," or nostril, is the hole "pierced" through the nose. 10. "Prestige" was applied to magicians and jugglers who deceived and deluded people.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For February 23

Your birthday today: A period begins of working out new approaches to all your current limitations. Growing insight lights your way as you spend more of your time alone and enjoy the results. Psychological and spiritual development are favored now, may even spontaneously displace material concerns on which you had planned to concentrate your main efforts. Today's natives in most years are very fond of creature comforts, but those born this year will be much more ascetic and philosophic by nature.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): You must hurry to stay ahead of associates or just to stay even with them. Additions to your circle are temporary.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): A busy morning includes an opening for your brand of leadership. Be resolute and move right in.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Try as you might to follow conventional patterns, it doesn't come out quite that way — but just be yourself.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Pursue an unusual idea or unorthodox scheme. If it pays off, you're set; if not, you've learned something valuable.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Sincerely offer a few words of praise; your end of the deal is to listen when your partner states the financial facts.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): The day dawns with a great psychic lift — are you sensitive and rising with it?

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Prompt action brings great advantages now. Select your area of operation carefully, the more elite the better.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Suddenly a fresh contact has all sorts of news you've been waiting for. Make the most of today's broken-field conditions.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Pursue important business deals; present your case. Bring close friends, consultants with you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): A review of your work habits will show where you can achieve more effective results. Think larger is the slogan.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Your inner serenity provides a mirror to bring subtle understanding of things which have puzzled you.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Step up and claim whatever you have coming to you; collect outstanding loans. Home life, your family scene cheers up.

Montreal's French-speaking Teachers Face Threat of Fines

MONTREAL (CP) — Frnech-speaking teachers in Montreal were expected to extend a series of rotating walkouts into its fifth week today despite the threat of possible fines against their union.

About 2,000 members of the Alliance des Professeurs de Montreal, which represents the 9,500 French-language teachers of the Montreal Catholic School Commission, were scheduled to attend day-long study sessions.

Meanwhile, the 3,000-member Montreal Teachers' Association, representing English-language teachers of the Protestant School Board of Greater Montreal, declined to say whether members would take part in walkouts today.

About half the union's membership responded to a strike call last Thursday and all Protestant teachers were at work Friday.

Threats of fines against striking Catholic teachers were raised at a weekend meeting of the Quebec Federation of Catholic School Commissions. Federation President Fernand Lefebvre recommended to member boards that application of the provincial Labor Code for fines be taken against unions calling for walkouts in their wage dispute with the commissions and the Quebec government.

Therese Roux, president of the Catholic board, and Reid Tilley, Protestant school board head, were both non-committal in interviews on the subject of possible fines.

Despite a rejection last week by Jean-Paul l'Allier, civil service minister handling government interests in the dispute, Mrs. Roux said she would discuss the possibility of mediation again with government officials at a meeting Tuesday.

Education Minister Guy Saint-Pierre said during the weekend the dispute, which involves reclassification of teachers' qualifications, has cost $50 million in lost services to students.

Teachers are protesting the re-evaluation system, part of a 1968 province-wide contract, which has resulted in salary cuts for those whose ratings were lowered.

Depending on qualifications and experience, salaries now range from $4,500 to $14,500 annually.

The Montreal area has been hardest hit by the walkouts although Quebec City and rural regions south of here have also been sporadically affected.

The 7,000-member Provincial Association of Protestant Teachers has left open the possibility of walkouts in communities on the south shore of the St. Lawrence River opposite Montreal.

Mr. Saint-Pierre said in an interview on radio station CJAD the government is willing to begin negotiations for the next province-wide contract now and would eliminate the possibility of retroactive pay cuts.

However, he added that the teachers would have to return to work before talks could begin.

Negotiations among school board officials, government and union representatives broke down early last week.

Philip Sees Hard Fight Ahead Against Pollution

NEW YORK (AP) — The Duke of Edinburgh warned Sunday that saving the world from environmental pollution will be a long, hard job because "the conservation-minded population is a very small proportion of the world's populations and the remainder couldn't care less."

Moreover, he said, "you can't preach industrial development for 20 years and then suddenly turn around and say: 'Now hold on, be careful what you're doing'."

Asked whether political hypocrisy were involved, the duke observed: "Conservation is always good for the other guy, and it's very difficult when it hits you. A lot of individuals who are not concerned with oil, get very concerned with oil pollution of the ocean. The oil companies don't look at it quite that way."

His views appear in an interview with the magazine Sports Afield. His aide, Maj. Randle Cooke, said the duke gave the interview because he "is convinced today's hunters and fishers have a vital role to play in the fight to save our environment."

Although Philip is active in conservation and chairs the World Wildlife Fund, he is also a noted hunter.

His dual role frequently has prompted criticism of him by anti-hunting organizations.

Replying indirectly to such criticism, Prince Philip said that the moment comes to hunters "when you scratch your head and say, 'Where does all this come from?' You can't go on indiscriminately unless you are an absolute blockhead. Once you're interested in what you're hunting, it seems only natural that you should be interested in everything that surrounds it—the whole ecology, so to speak."

Philip suggested that hunters be organized into clubs that would take over the maintenance of game.

"It will be in their interest to maintain the stock from which they can crop the surplus . . . the clubs themselves should feel a responsibility for maintaining the stock of whatever it is they want to shoot."

Hunters Seeking Accord

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The 43rd annual convention of the Ontario Federation of Anglers and Hunters ended here Sunday with a federation recommendation for increased liaison between sportsmen and landowners and a study of hunter-landowner conflicts in the north.

The recommendations were made at the request of the department of lands and forests to assist in implementation of a program, used successfully in the United States, to avert such conflicts.

The program was initiated last year in Ancaster township, which threatened closure of the township to hunting, whereby hunting was restricted to beyond 100 yards from the landowners' buildings, livestock, and machinery.

Clark Pell of Aylmer, one of three department extension biologists working on the program, said protection of landowners' material property was 85 per cent of landowners' concern with hunting on their land.

Mr. Pell called for education of sportsmen to prevent confrontations, violations and damage of landowners fences outside the restricted area.

Commons To Debate CDC Bill

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons begins debate today on government legislation to establish the Canada development corporation.

Introduced by Finance Minister E. J. Benson in late January, the bill in effect would establish Canada's largest holding corporation with capital eventually of $2 billion to encourage Canadian ownership.

Mr. Benson has said the purpose of the corporation is not to buy Canadian enterprises now foreign owned. It would create new enterprises and use its financial powers to improve the competitive efficiency of existing industries.

Shares eventually will be sold to individual Canadians.

The corporation will start off by taking over government interests in four existing enterprises—Panarctic Oils Ltd., Polymer Corp. Ltd., Eldorado Nuclear Ltd., and Northern Transportation Co. Ltd.

Newsprint Price Likely To Go Higher This Year

LONDON (Reuter) — A further increase in world newsprint prices before the end of this year because of more expensive pulp and higher wages has been forecast here by paper trade experts.

The world newsprint industry is highly competitive, but in a bid to maintain their supremacy and economic viability, the big producers are being thrown more and more together.

The technology of the industry demands huge capital expenditure on equipment which is only 100 per cent profitable if it is kept working at full capacity and if a market is found for its output.

Until a few years ago, it was reasonably easy to maintain this balancing act because the world market was being supplied by only a few producers.

During the last 10 years, however, there has been a growing appetite for reading—which means more newsprint—in many countries which used to rely principally on imported newsprint. To meet this change, some have set up or enlarged their own newsprint mills, and newsprint has become one of their prestige industries.

But costs have risen faster than demand, and there is almost complete unanimity in the paper trade that newsprint prices will have to rise again.

Bringing you the world's most exciting Color Picture System that shows it like it is.
True to life in—

The Age of AccuColor

First in the system, there's the "Longer Lifetime" AccuColor Picture Tube. Greatest picture-performer of them all. Gives you the most color accuracy, a picture as sharp as a tack. Right from the start! Because the exclusive AccuColor tube prevents distortion during warm-up. And with RCA's giant 26-inch "Full-View" screen, the picture never runs off the edges.

Then there's AccuTint! Lets you hold the flesh tones you've selected. Even when the TV signal varies. And RCA's famous Automatic Fine Tuning (A.F.T.) locks in the best picture for keeps on every channel.

For extra reliability behind the picture, you get RCA's great chassis. Knows how to play it cool to cut down repairs. All this advanced AccuColor componentry . . . plus the new RCA 5-Year Warranty Plan for your comprehensive color protection. Sounds as if RCA has really improved the color-buying situation, doesn't it?

South Vietnamese Lose Their Leading General

SAIGON (CP) — The "Moshe Dayan" of the South Vietnamese Army, Gen. Do Cao Tri, and veteran Newsweek correspondent Francois Sully were among seven persons killed today when their helicopter crashed near the Cambodian border.

The general's death is a major blow to Saigon government forces, which have suffered military reverses in the invasion of southern Laos with the decimination of a battalion of veteran ranger forces. Saigon's drive to cut the Ho Chi Minh trail in Laos is badly stalled in the face of increased North Vietnamese attacks.

Tri, 41, colorful leader of Saigon forces in Cambodia, was making a regular daily visit to units of the 23,000-man South Vietnamese force in Cambodia when a technical fault brought his chopper down in the border province of Tay Ninh.

Eight of the nine persons aboard died, and the only survivor was the co-pilot, who was seriously hurt.

Meanwhile, 13 miles south of Tay Ninh and a mile from the Cambodian border, about 300 North Vietnamese troops attacked an American artillery base supporting Tri's forces across the border.

Some of the attackers broke into the base and blew up a fuel dump. The Americans said they killed nine guerrillas, while U.S. casualties were two killed and nine wounded.

Tri, a slight man who wore a baseball hat and carried a swagger stick, has been described as the Moshe Dayan and the Patton of the South Vietnamese Army.

Tri took up command of Military Region Three, the 16 provinces around Saigon' after the Viet Cong's devastating Tet offensive of January, 1968. He "commuted" daily to the war in Cambodia from his home at Bien Hoa.

Reliable sources said Tri's helicopter went down one mile from Tay Ninh, after exploding in mid-air. A lieutenant-colonel, a major and two captains, all Vietnamese, were among the persons on board who died.

The military governor of Saigon, Lt.-Gen. Nguyen Van Minh, was appointed acting commander of Military Region Three today following Tri's death.

A South Vietnamese spokesman said there has been "no progress reported" by the 16,000 South Vietnamese troops in southern Laos trying to cut the Ho Chi Minh supply trail. Informed sources said in addition to heavy resistance from Communist troops, the region "has been heavily mined."

A South Vietnamese communique reported 276 government troops killed in the Laotian campaign, 852 wounded and 101 missing in action. The communique reported a total of 2,089 North Vietnamese killed, but U.S. sources said this as an estimate and was too high.

Israel Drafts Terms

From AP-REUTER

The Israeli government has created three committees to draw up territorial terms and new borders it would accept in a Middle East peace agreement, informed sources report. But again that peace is impossible unless Israel withdraws from all the land it captured in 1967.

Premier Golda Meir's cabinet said Sunday that Israel never would return to the boundaries existing before the 1967 war, but said it is willing to negotiate new "secure and agreed" territorial lines.

Toronto's Airport Reopens

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Planes began flying out of Toronto International Airport about 8 a.m. today after a night during which freezing rain and winds up to 40 miles an hour forced the airport to close.

Air Canada had diverted about six incoming flights to Montreal earlier and all outgoing flights had been cancelled.

The freezing rain spread over an area from London to Ottawa and into Quebec and north to Muskoka. In the north and at Ottawa it was followed by heavy, blowing snow.

The snow closed Ottawa airport and, shut all public and separate schools in the Carleton school district, all but paralysing the area. Some eight inches of snow were expected.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: Another disturbance over Michigan will move through central sections of Ontario today accompanied by a three- to five-inch snowfall. Southern sections of the province will receive periods of light snow or drizzle and the far north will enjoy fair weather. Wednesday southern and central regions will experience some snowflurry activity.

Province to Even Accounts

Hastings Trustees Learn of Windfall

Some Taxes Won't Climb

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

Prospects of a "hold the line" education budget brightened this year for Hastings County when public school board trustees were informed last night of a near half million dollar "bonus" coming their way.

The funds, to originate from the department of education, are the result of the province's decision to resolve the school board amalgamation snaffle by agreeing to pay the deficits of former boards and to compensate those municipalities whose school boards had surpluses.

The total for Hastings comes to about $465 and is spread almost evenly between those municipalities which registered deficits and those with surpluses at the time the county board of education came into effect Jan. 1, 1969.

Municipalities which dragged debts with them into the county system — about $215,000 — won't have to pay up, a spectre which has haunted the county system since its inception.

Those municipalities which had surpluses — about $250,000 — because of overlevy on their school operations will see the board underlevy the appropriate amount in each municipality. And the province then make up the sum so there will be no financial loss to the board.

Coupled with an earlier decision by the department to impose a ceiling on education spending, this could mean that ratepayers in some fortunate communities may not feel a tax hike for educational purposes this year.

Two Towns Are Levelled

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Federal relief officials poured into the Mississippi Delta today where dozens of tornadoes left 82 dead, hundreds injured, and 2,350 homeless.

A "major disaster" designation by President Nixon cleared the way for federal assistance to the area, including grants for repairs to public facilities, shipments of mobile homes to house the homeless and low-cost business and home loans.

Officials said up to 100 tornadoes skipped across seven counties Sunday night, causing an estimated $7.5 million in damages.

The tornadoes took 77 lives in Mississippi and five across the Mississippi River in Delhi, La.

"I've never seen a storm — a low pressure system — last that long," said Bill Kellum, Leflore County civil defence director.

"Usually after 30 minutes the winds will shift to the north and the storm will be over, but this thing just kept on and on and on for four hours."

Officials said the Mississippi towns of Inverness and Cary "were practically wiped out" and that 98 per cent of the buildings in each town were flattened.

Pulp Mill Smells Conquered

VANCOUVER (CP) — Three scientists at the University of British Columbia claim they have developed a radiation process that will knock the smell out of pulp mills.

Dr. Lazlo Paszner, one of the scientists involved in the project, said the invention has been proven to work under laboratory conditions and could be installed in pulp mills at a cost ranging from $900,000 to $1.5 million apiece within two years.

Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd. is attempting to engineer a working prototype, he said, before the industry is given a full demonstration of the method.

The process entails the use of radiation in low levels to eliminate sulphur from mill emissions before they pour out of the smokestacks. Sulphur is the main cause of "rotten egg" type

Britain Will Make Entry Hard

LONDON (AP) — The Conservative government has drafted an immigration bill removing the advantages citizens of other Commonwealth countries have had.

A summary of the bill that will be presented to Parliament this week defines its aim as establishment of "a single system of immigration control applicable to everyone coming from overseas who is not exempt from control by reason of his connections" with the United Kingdom.

In practical terms, this means Commonwealth citizens will be treated like all other foreigners. It also means Commonwealth citizens of Asia, Africa and the Caribbean will be affected most. They easily outnumbered the many citizens of the old white Commonwealth who qualify automatically for British citizenship by ancestry.

Home Secretary Reginald Maudling evidently has sought to balance these stiffer conditions by enshrining the rights and status of immigrants who achieve citizenship. Regardless of their origins, after being accepted as citizens they will be entitled to full and equal status.

Arms Are Ordered Hour After Okay

LONDON (Reuter) — Britain was in receipt today of its first arms order from South Africa in seven years.

After months of preparing the public for resumption of arms sales, discontinued by the Labor government in 1964 under a United Nations ban, the eight-month-old Conservative government announced Monday night it would allow the export of Wasp naval helicopters to South Africa if they were ordered.

An order for seven was placed within the hour, and Defence Minister Pieter Botha of South Africa said: "The government has continually pleaded for steps to guarantee the protection of the sea routes around the Cape. I therefore welcome the new approach to our common task."

The Wasp helicopters will be used aboard frigates bought from Britain under the Simonstown defence agreement for anti-submarine patrols.

The Wasps, 10 of which are already in use aboard South African naval vessels, will take at least a year to deliver and cost more than $2 million.

Developer's Engineers Requested to Appear

TRENTON (Staff) — Town council decided here last night to ask water system specialist Gore and Storrie to explain the Dufferin Developments servicing program.

In making the suggestion that the Toronto engineering consultant be asked to come to Trenton, Councillor Ted Parker said council should also go over the service program for the entire west side and find out "if we are going to run into trouble elsewhere".

At last Thursday's Public Utilities Commission meeting, it was revealed that Gore and Storrie felt the 300-home subdivision should be provided with water from a 4,850 ft. pipeline built from Dufferin Ave. instead of a shorter and cheaper linkup to Dundas West.

Councillor Parker pointed out that "in all discussions prior to Thursday, there was never any talk of Dufferin (pipelines)", contending that he thinks "somebody is nuts".

"It seems strange that the Ontario Water Resources Commission would approve Tripp Blvd. and McGill St.", councillor Parker said. The first phase of the subdivision (56 homes) will be serviced from these two streets but a new line from Dundas or Dufferin is necessary for later development phases.

Referring to the overland link to Dufferin, Mayor Duncan McDonald said he was "satisfied this is the way it will have to be done".

Councillor Paul Tripp contended the PUC will have to institute a new water distribution system and increased capacity in the near future. He said OWRC may have assumed Trenton would go ahead and increase its waterflow capacity (to service Dufferin and other new growth areas).

"Council is committed to increased distribution . . . in no way has OWRC told us we cannot move. The PUC is being obstructionist" he said.

Mayor Duncan McDonald and PUC Commissioner Charles Hilton have refused to sign the PUC portion of the Dufferin Developments subdividers' agreement, although council has ordered the commission to sign.

Councillor Tripp stressed that "council has asked that this be approved, so we can get on with the orderly growth of the community . . . I just wonder what all this commotion is about".

"I do not know what Councillor Tripp is trying to say but it took a lot of words. We are not trying to be obstructionist," the mayor said.

Mayor McDonald added that "unless this power is taken away from us too, the PUC feel they should know what services are being provided. We are going to Toronto to deal with it Wednesday, we cannot deal with it faster then this".

The PUC commissioners decided last week to go to Toronto Wednesday to visit Gore and Storrie. Now, council will ask a Gore and Storrie representative to come to Trenton before council meets again.

Trenton to Investigate Retaining Old Dump

TRENTON (Staff) — The Town of Trenton will investigate the possibility of continuing to use its bayside garbage dump, council decided last night.

Councillor Paul Tripp said he believed provincial authorities would allow the town to continue the so-called sanitary landfill scheme, if it is surrounded by wide clay dikes.

Garbage is dumped into diked lagoons along the Bay of Quinte but the Department of Energy and Resources contends that this poses a pollution threat.

Council was told by the department November 16, 1970 that it must terminate the land reclamation program by March 1, 1971. However, a provisional licence to continue is possible.

The variety of clay necessary to ring the lagoons is found on the property of the Domtar Paper Co., Councillor Tripp said.

Decision to enter into an agreement with Harold Graham, owner of a commercial garbage dump between Belleville and Trenton, was deferred.

Mr. Graham is willing to enter into a five-year contract with the town to provide garbage disposal facilities at a cost of $20,000 a year. This cost would remain constant if Trenton's population did not increase exceeding 2.5 per cent annually.

Council was not against accepting a contract with Mr. Graham, only the date takes effect. First, it wants to determine if it is feasible to complete the bayside dumping project that will provide added park acreage.

Council Shelves Agreement Form

TRENTON (Staff) — Council decided here Monday to shelve for 90 days its proposed standard form of subdividers' agreement that will require a developer to pay the total cost of extending services to a subdivision.

The present pattern for subdividers' agreements provides that the Town of Trenton and a developer share the cost on a 50-50 basis.

Councillor Paul Tripp asked that consideration be given to two revisions in the proposed pact form. He feels making a subdivider pay 100 per cent of the cost of extending services should be a matter for council to decide and that making him pay for trunk sewers is wrong.

"I submit that the 100 per cent charge (for extensions) should be optional, at the discretion of council," Councillor Tripp said.

"I do not think future subdividers should have to pay for trunk sewers to serve whole areas," he added.

He mentioned that three recent developments had provided the town with more than $35,000 in property taxes and 15 blocks of fully serviced streets, adding that he did not want to see "any further hardship imposed on developers".

Councillor Tripp contended that if the financing of servicing extensions were "negotiable — pure and simple" circumstances of each particular development could be given consideration. An example of such a situation, he said was the Tall Oaks subdivision where the land is "marginal".

Elks Irk Neighbors

Some people attending functions at the Elks Hall at the corner of West Moira and Cedar Street are rousing the ire of neighborhood residents.

A letter read at yesterday's traffic and light committee, complained of parked cars blocking driveways, and also of noise late at night as people leave functions for their homes.

City police chief Douglas T. Crosbie said such complaints were common where there were halls in a residential area.

Police patrols in the Elks Hall area could be stepped up in the future, he said.

How Zwick's Island Could Look

Park planning is an important facet of a municipal government operation, as is explained by city parks superintendent Lloyd Syer to this week's "Mayor of the Week." Here Bob Burd, of Plainfield, grade 11 student at Quinte Secondary School, and the last of seven mayors of the week, has the conceptual plan for East Zwick's Island Park explained by the parks superintendent. Bob has aspirations for a career in journalism following attendance at Carleton University.

Ore Train Strikes Again

TRENTON (Staff) — A 24-year-old Trenton area man narrowly escaped injury yesterday when his car was rammed by a Canadian National Railways ore train at a crossing on Canal Road near Carrying Place.

Glenn Harvey of RR2, Carrying Place ran from his car about 3 p.m. as the Marmora-Picton ore train bore down on his vehicle, stuck on an icy patch over the tracks.

Mr. Harvey attempted to flag down the train driven by Norman Meldrum of Belleville, but it was too late.

The car was pushed along the tracks by the three-engine train for 30 feet where it was ripped apart in the superstructure of the railway bridge over the Murray Canal.

The car was totally destroyed. However, the train received only minor damages.

There are no signals at the crossing because it is on a private road and not a provincial highway.

Mayor Proposes Long-range Plan

TORONTO (Special) — Provincial governments should make financial commitments of five years or more to enable local governments to plan anti-pollution programs.

This was the suggestion yesterday of Belleville Mayor J. Russell Scott at the annual convention of the Ontario Good Roads Association being held in Toronto.

Mayor Scott called for effective regional planning of pollution control and suggested that provincial grants would allow local governments to plan anti-pollution programs on a long term basis.

Mayor Scott is the chairman of a special pollution committee named by the Ontario Association of Mayors and Reeves.

Also at yesterday's convention, George H. Pleasance deputy reeve of Simcoe, said information programs should be set up to tell the public how it can avoid pollution.

Canada Termed 'Prison-prone'

While Canada was described as still one of the most "prison-prone" countries in the world — sending more people to jail than does the United States, Britain, Sweden and Holland — the thrust today was on correctional treatment, with the public being called upon more and more to collaborate, Belleville Rotarians were told yesterday.

Keith Couse, associate director of the John Howard Society, said that in addition to supervised parole, there is now a system of temporary absence from jail and home leave, while young people are also being allowed out to continue their schooling.

Four thousand prisoners had been released on parole in 1970, said Mr. Couse, while another 1,100 had been granted temporary release.

At the moment, he said, it cost $6,600 a year to keep a person in jail in Kingston or institutions like Joyceville, or more than we pay for education. The aim was to restore as many as possible to self-supporting and self-respecting members of society.

Stressing the need for public co-operation in rehabilitation of persons who had been sentenced to jail terms, including offers of jobs by businessmen, Mr. Couse said it had been found that handling of the problems of prisoners by professionals alone — by educators, psychiatrists, psychologists and social workers — was not sufficient. The sense of alienation suffered by prisoners was something society as a whole must work to overcome.

Hastings, Mr. Couse noted earlier in his address, would be joining this year with two other counties in the handling of people who offended against the law. Next month the Quinte regional detention centre would open, replacing three county jails from the pre-Confedeartion era.

$909.95 Raised

FRANKFORD (Special) — In spite of the worst weather in the memory of local residents, the second annual winter carnival held February 12-13-14, sponsored by the Frankford Recreation Committee was a success.

Saturday's activities consisted mainly of hockey games and costumed skating in the evening. There was a dance for the teens in the Centennial Room and a dance for adults in the Legion Hall.

Due to the inclement weather, these were poorly attended.

A draw was made for a rug braided by Mrs. Muriel Rabel and was won by Mrs. Phil Butland.

A total of $909.95 was realized for the Rink Fund.

Shelters Deferred

The Belleville Transit Commission will take no immediate action with respect to setting up bus shelters along its bus routes.

This was indicated to city traffic and light committee members yesterday in a report from the commission on the suggestion of an East Belleville resident some weeks ago that consideration be given to such shelters.

The report indicated that investigation had shown that upkeep of bus shelters in other municipalities could be costly because of vandalism.

And oddly enough, it was stated that vandalism at glass enclosed shelters was less than at shelters enclosed with plastic materials.

However, transit commission officials named 13 possible locations for bus shelters and said they would review the matter following receipt of a provincial government report on grant proposals for municipal transit operations.

President Speaks To Quinte RIA

R. A. (Bob) Pattison, RIA, president of the Society of Industrial Accountants of Ontario, addressed the Quinte Chapter on the subject Registered Industrial Accountant-Action Central.

He emphasized the fact that the Registered Industrial Accountant (RIA) is trained and qualified to be at the centre of the decision-making process in the management group.

He pointed out that the new curriculum would update the present five-year course to methods required for the 70s, and that post graduate courses would be available for graduates.

Afterward, Pete Addison, manager of the RIA program for the society outlined the new curriculum, which is entitled the Body of Knowledge.

The chairman advised the members that Mr. Crompton of Imperial Oil will speak on Transportation Development in Canada's Northland — The Voyage of the Manhattan, on March 22.

IN MEMORIAM

AKEY — In loving memory of a dear husband, father and grandfather, Percy Wellington Akey, who passed away Feb. 23, 1962.

Though his smile is gone forever,
And his hand we canot touch.
Still we have so many memories,
Of the one we loved so much,
His memory is our keepsake,
With which we'll never part,
God has him in His keeping,
We have him in our hearts,
And when old times we oft recall,
It's then we miss him most of all.

—Lovingly remembered by wife Lena, son Milton, Flo, and all his grandchildren.

HENDERSON — In loving memory of a dear husband and uncle, Floyd Henderson, who passed away February 23rd, 1968.

Memories will linger forever.

—Wife Ruth and niece Audrey.

BRENTON — In loving memory of a dear father and grandfather, who passed away Feb. 23rd, 1970.

Memories are like threads of gol[illegible]
Never tarnish or grow old,
No longer in our lives to share,
But in our hearts, he is always there.

—Lovingly remembered by wife Flossie, sons and daughters-in-law Willis and Julia, Gerald, Helen and granddaughter Marion.

Tons of Snush at A Single Shovelfull

Snush, a pleasant combination of snow and slush enjoyed by pedestrians and drivers alike, occurs when warm temperatures attracting snow flurries give way to gentle drizzles and icy surfaces on the roads. Look it up in a handy Funk and Wagnall's . . . everybody's been shovelling it.

Winter's Not Finished Yet

Just when Bay of Quinte residents hopefully expect that spring is just around the corner, Old Man Winter seems to be able to get in another lick.

Such was the case last night when freezing rain was dumped over the area, again turning roads and sidewalks into skating rinks.

Then the rain was followed by two inches of slushy wet snow which at least served to cover up the ice.

And the weatherman says there is more to come.

This morning's general forecast indicated another three to five inches of snow can be expected over the Central Ontario area before tomorrow.

But the duty forecaster at Canadian Forces Base Trenton doesn't see it quite that way.

"They may get that much snow up around North Bay but in the Quinte area we don't expect any more than two inches," he said.

The snow, fringe activity from storm centres now over Southern New York and Michigan, will fall in flurries for the remainder of the day.

Last night .6 inch of rain was received at the base, followed by about two inches of snow.

But the freezing rain made driving and walking treacherous with motorists having to proceed cautiously.

But despite the slippery conditions, Provincial Police reported no accidents as a result of the ice, although one vehicle slid off the highway into the ditch and had to be hauled back onto the roadway.

"I guess everybody must have stayed home," commented an officer at Belleville headquarters.

But sports enthusiasts attending hockey games and other sports functions some distance away did not get home until the small hours of the morning as buses were slowed by the slippery conditions.

Back at Tweed, weather station officials reported .38 inches of rain and 2.4 inches of snow overnight.

Total snowfall at Tweed so far this winter is recorded at 109.1 inches with 32.6 inches of the fluffy white stuff since Feb. 1. Also since the first of the month there has been 1.36 inches of rain.

Normal snowfall for February is 17.08 inches and the normal rainfall .83 inch.

Some Taxes Won't Climb

The province announced it will make up the deficits in 23 municipalities, spreading the payment over a three-year period.

Four of the 29 municipalities that pay school taxes in Hastings county came into the county system two years ago with deficits in their elementary school levies. Another 19 municipalities had racked up deficits on secondary school levies.

The province will pay one-third of the deficit this year to the county board, and one-third in each of 1972 and 1973.

Interest on the total will be 15 per cent.

All adjustments for surpluses will be made this year, with no interest. Surpluses total about $250,000.

In Hastings, 25 municipalities came into the county system with surpluses on their elementary schools, and 10 with surpluses on their secondary schools.

The good news came through county board business administrator Kenneth Wormold at the regular meeting of Hastings county board of education Monday night.

But he stressed that the estimates he gave in his report were tentative, his own estimates, and subject to adjustment Wednesday, when the regional director of education and the regional business administrator will give their opinion of the 1971 grant structure.

Referring to the report of the arbitrators set up to adjust the assets and liabilities each municipality brought into the county board Mr. Wormold said: "The province picks up the deficit and pays back the surplus".

"It looks as though very few municipalities will have increases in education taxes this year; but I can't see any decreases," he told the trustees.

In the analysis of the arbitrators' decisions as applied to county municipalities as at Dec. 31, 1968, Belleville had a surplus of $65,875 on elementary schools and a deficit of $45,855 on secondary schools.

Trenton entered the county board system with a deficit of $16,891 on elementary schools and a deficit of $52,193 on secondary schools.

Trenton's secondary school deficit of $52,193 was the largest of any county municipality. On the surplus side, Belleville's elementary schools' was the largest.

Smallest deficit was Frankford's — $65 for secondary schools. Smallest surplus awarded was for secondary schools in Tudor and Cashel, a total of $39 which will afford scant relief for township ratepayers on this year's tax bill.

The retarded children's authority, which limped along financially for many years before being taken under the wing of the county board, registered a deficit of only $443.

"This is good news," summed up Mr. Wormald, in presenting the arbitrator's report.

"The province is going to make up the deficits, not the municipalities."

Per-pupil Spending Tentatively Pegged

It's not official yet but it looks as though the province of Ontario will permit the county board of education to spend $526 on every elementary school pupil and $1,040 on every secondary school pupil this year.

In other parts of the province, probably metropolitan areas, boards can spend more.

The largest sum allowed per pupil in the province is $545 for elementary school pupils and $1,060 for secondary pupils.

But because trustees and administrators of the Hastings board were frugal during their first two years of operation and held expenses down, they must operate with less than the provincial maximums this year.

The provincial grant regulation received here last Friday say that boards are subject to an overall limitation of an increase of no more than $75 on last year's grants.

As a consequence, Hastings, one of the "poor, rural" boards with a lot of catching up to do before it can give its students all the advantages that Toronto students enjoy, is held to less than the maximum per pupil costs again in 1971. The estimated per pupil expenditure is still tentative and awaits further calculations and ratification from department of education officials.

$1,099 A Head To Elect Trustees

It cost $5,496 to elect five Belleville trustees to the Hastings county board of education last December.

The school board picked up the tab. By law, the board must pay election expenses in those municipalities where only trustees are running. Belleville had no municipal elections last year.

"That must have cost us about $3 a vote," said James Clarke, referring to the 10 per cent turnout at the polls for board elections in Belleville last year.

The board had already paid $424 in election expenses to Rawdon and Madoc townships to cover the cost of electing the trustee from that area — James Spry.

In municipalities that have elections for civic office at the same time as school board elections, the municipality pays the costs.

Newspaper's Role Is Outlined

By IAN ROBERTSON
Staff Reporter

The role of the newspaper in today's society is not simply as an informant of news happenings, social events, sports action and interesting people; the printed medium has long worn the garb of an educator.

This position in society is not a new one, says John King, from the Globe and Mail Education Department. "This isn't a new idea."

Speaking to an audience of more than 100 teachers from Hastings County gathered at Park Dale School last night, Mr. King emphasized the endless number of subjects dealt with on the pages of all newspapers, primarily those issued daily.

"Textbooks can't keep up with the daily historic items . . . if a person reads just a portion of the stories on the front page of a newspaper, even just the first few paragraphs, he can't help but learn."

The newspaper offers the reader stimulus, whether he reads a straight report of tragedy or accomplishments; whether it is an in-depth view of political or social struggles or a report on the increased price of food commodities . . the reader's interest is aroused, or should be if he takes an interest in the world around him.

This latter statement holds the crux of the problem. A person will eventually find in a newspaper a subject in which he is interested. The paper's role is that of an educator; an educator providing facts or rousing the inquisitive nature of the reader, Mr. King said.

Becoming active in community concern is one of the chief goals of a paper, for through the services of the editorial page providing space for letters, the public has a chance to express their views on any reasonable subject, he continued.

Although it may not appear so on the surface, many debatable issues are brought about by the concerned reader that makes his opinion public knowledge.

And what better place to begin observing trends in social issues, finance, sports, historic occurrences, fashions, and political figures than in the classroom, Mr. King asked.

Long, in-depth reports are lost on a majority of readers after the first few paragraphs. To this end, most news stories are written with the main events contained in opening sentences. Pictures, together with their captions are often geared to briefly explain the story.

But, as teachers are finding out from seminars and discussions with educators such as Mr. King, a whole new world has opened on the pages of the newspaper.

The business and financial sections of papers are being used in economics classes; changing trends in prices are useful for marketing students; trouble spots in the world can be related to geography lessons; fashion trends, together with patterns reproduced in women's pages, are of use for the home economics teacher; even the classified ad pages can be useful. What better way to watch the community than through its needs?

"But don't make the mistake of using the newspaper too much. One teacher I talked with complained of the lost interest exhibited by his students after they began following stock market changes. He had been using the papers for an entire year and the kids had lost interest."

"Use the papers for a two or three week period," Mr. King commented.

He added that the teachers shouldn't "study the newspapers as such. . .pick up one or two things each day, this will keep it interesting."

Although newspapers such as the Globe and Mail, billed as Canada's national paper, offer wide resources such as microfilm service and reprints of special articles, local papers have proved to be of equal value, on a smaller scale. Events closer to home are available from weekly papers throughout Hastings County and more in-depth services are offered by The Intelligencer.

Educators seeking a complete study of international, national and local events have brought the various papers together as a close-knit team.

Most papers offer papers for classroom study and through the services of backfiles, many articles of past importance are available for the researcher. To this end, The Intelligencer has distributed close to 1,700 free papers every week to more than 30 schools throughout Hastings County.

Initiated in 1965 by the late R. H. Doherty, circulation manager, this program has been continued by the present manager, Bill LeSurf.

Through the auspices of the paper, as part of the education service, a teacher is sent to the summer "Newspaper in the Classroom" seminar, this year being held at York University.

The seminar program is designed to provide teachers with the opportunity to hear how experienced educators use newspapers as an instrument of learning in a wide variety of subjects.

They see demonstrations of new teaching concepts which motivate students and have a chance to exchange ideas in small seminar groups with other teachers of similar subjects in elementary or secondary grade levels, and newspapermen who explain the aspects of news and newspapers.

Armed with this knowledge, plus that gained through local seminars, such as the one held last night at Parkdale school, the teachers are then able to pass on their knowledge to their students and fellow-instructors.

"Newspapers plus old methods provide the student with a whole new world of learning . . . a little different from the days of the three Rs," concluded Mr. King.

REAL ESTATE

WILL YOUR HOUSE APPEAL TO A BUYER?

ED McKINNEY
J. E. McKinney
Realty Ltd.

One good way to get an idea is to pretend that YOU are the customer.

How about the general state of repair? Has it become shabby? Remember that owners become USED TO A GRADUAL DECLINE in condition while strangers look at it with fresh eyes.

Ask your Realtor's view and follow his counsel. Remember that it is the outsider's opinion — the buyer — that finally counts, not your own.

Bathrooms are a prime example since they are usually subject to heavy wear. A new shower curtain or a rug or even a new wastbasket may be enough. Or it may need painting.

You don't look at the inside of closets any longer but a stranger would. How about papering them in bright colors with some new self-stick papers?

The list may be lengthy or short depending on your property and the impression it would leave on a buyer.

The overall impression you're after should be a clean, pleasant and tranquil one, free of barking dogs, crying children or noisy heating systems. If it is priced correctly, such a house will almost sell itself.

Keep It Canadian

Industry. Trade and Commerce Minister Jean-Luc Pepin said last week that Canadian books may be promoted at export fairs and Canadian book centres may be established abroad.

Good idea — but is it too late? Are governments, the Trudeau government included, alawys a step behind when it comes to looking after the interests of struggling Canadian enterprises, and particularly ones like the publishing company McClelland and Stewart which are so much a part of the fabric of Canadian life.

McClelland and Stewart is as Canadian as Rolls-Royce is British — and here they are, both in reduced circumstances.

But then McClelland and Stewart is a private company and if government and people are hearing only now of its plight, this could have been because the firm had been trying to stave off mounting financial problems. It is quite clear though that until the recent sale of another leading Canadian publishing house, Ryerson Press, to United States interests, Ottawa concerned itself not a whit with the problems of the publishing industry generally, ignoring at the same time the fact that it is of vital importance to Canadian sovereignty.

Still, the plan to give the products of Canadian book publishing wider exposure, by promotion overseas, is excellent. So too is State Secretary Gerard Pelletier's work toward the creation of a federal body — to be called the Canadian Book Publishing Corporation — to help domestic publishers. Canadian art, incidentally, has been enjoying a vogue overseas — so why not our books too?

Mr. Pepin, meanwhile, says that Mr. McClelland has assured him that he would advise the government first if there was any question of sale to a foreign buyer and that in any event such a sale was "unlikely."

Whatever happens, McClelland and Stewart should remain in Canadian hands.

Anniversary Show

Belleville Collegiate's 25th anniversary "Kampus Kapers" was a fine presentation which revealed a wide variety of talent.

Musically, it was a pleasant experience, thanks mainly to the school band and performers such as the two colorfully dressed young ladies who overcame microphone difficulties and some rough banter at the back of the auditorium to sing their duo pieces to guitar accompaniment.

Allowing for youthful restlessness, and we are speaking of Friday night, is it too much to expect, on such occasions, that someone in authority be present at the entrance to discourage interruptions and distractions from the back of the auditorium or in the corridor outside?

Aside from that, the young people and their staff assistants are to be congratulated. One section of the evening's activities from which the audience must have derived particular satisfaction was the gymnastic display. Here the boys and girls showed what benefits are to be obtained from physical training. It is good to know that this attracts a goodly number of the young people.

The evening was a tribute to one man in particular, Homer Townsend. It was Mr. Townsend who originated the show a quarter of a century ago. When the cheer leaders did their thing early on in the show, there was no doubt of Mr. Townsend's enduring place in the history of the Kampus Kapers.

Speaking of distractions, these are not necessarily confined to high school occasions. When one of the most notable of living poets, W. H. Auden, read some of his own works at the University of Toronto recently he had microphone problems throughout, while in the background doors slammed and squeaked. A pity for both poet and audience; certainly audience behavior generally can leave much to be desired. There is much in it which psychiatrists could explain, as well as providing material for a thesis.

Road Fatality

Only recently we sounded a warning about the dangers of hitchhiking, among them drivers who stop suddenly to pick someone up and thus jeopardize the safety of traffic generally. Last Friday a Toronto youth was killed in such circumstances on the outskirts of Belleville. He was entering a car which had stopped when it was struck from behind by a truck, throwing him into the road where he was run over by another vehicle. We repeat: hitchhiking is dangerous, for this and for other reasons.

Postal Rates to Go Up Again

Government, the Labor Unions and Inflation

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Ever thought about how the federal Administration — the cabinet, its deputies and lesser bureaucrats — plays the game of government by two sets of rules?

One book of regulations for you, another for them?

Well, think about it.

Ponder it in the context of that extra two cents per letter you are likely going to be paying soon —with first class mail rates raised from six to eight— to cover a deficit the Government itself, with the help of the postal unions, mis-managed to produce.

But first, an initial thought to the Prices and Incomes Commission which has the assignment from the Consumer Affairs Department to police — by moral suasion — what essentially is the ever-rising cost-of-living.

This Prices' and Incomes Commission has been lecturing business, industry and labor on holding down costs. Business and industry listened for a year, going along with the Commission.

But labor did not.

And so now, squeezed by shrinking income and rising costs, industry and business have been compelled to adjust prices upwards in simple economic self-preservation.

The Commission, which did nothing about labor's defiance of its guidelines, now has taken to marching into the offices of a wide variety of business and industry, demanding production of the books, and "justification" for cost increases.

So what, Consumer Affairs Minister Ron Basford was asked the other day, was the Commission going to do about cost increases by the Post Office and taxes — which are built-in cost increases — by the Finance Department?

You serious? he countered.

Yes, he was told, a two cent increase in first class mail rates is a rise in costs for everyone, and so is the continuation of a supposedly "temporary" tax — the three percent surtax on incomes that Finance Minister Benson promised to lift but did not — and costs are the concern of your Commission, right?

Mr. Basford allowed as how "that makes sense," and said his Commission was "free to look" at both the Post Office and the Finance Department.

So the Commission was asked the same question and countered with the same "you serious?"

Assured the question was not being asked in jest, the Commission, as if it had overheard Mr. Basford, said, well, it might "take a look."

If it "looks" at the Finance Department, Mr. Benson, having stood up under previous peeks by the Commission, does not seem about to flinch now.

And anyway, the question of the Prices and Incomes Commission trying to crack down on Finance Minister Benson for failing to reduce tax costs as promised may be a bit on the wildly improbable side.

But not so with the Post Office and those coming increases in rates.

Postmaster General Jean Pierre Cote has explained the increase is necessary to cover the department's $120 million deficit.

It was just a little more than two years ago that postal rates were raised, for the very purpose, the Post Office explained at the time, of the department at least making a beginning at paying its way.

Why, so suddenly and soon, then, with postal rates up, is the Post Office $120 million down?

Mr. Cote himself obligingly provides much of the required arithmetic.

Those "revolving strikes" — a continuation of a long series of "work stoppages," as the Post Office likes to call them, over recent years — cost the department $30 million in lost revenue.

Toss in another $10 million in lost revenue — and the heavy price of vandalism — that the striking Lapalme drivers cost the department in their months-long disruption and often paralysis of the mails in and through Montreal.

Add then — these are all Mr. Cote's own figures — another $24,000,000 in annual payroll costs, as the continuing price of the postal strike settlement last Fall.

Into the total here must go something approaching another $2 million in the annual cost of postal staff fringe benefits.

Finally, calculate into that $120 million deficit and the coming two - cents - more - a - letter to cover it the 20 percent loss of Post Office business.

It was budgeting on the basis of delivering five billion —that is billion, not million — pieces of mail this year. Instead, it finds itself servicing only four billion.

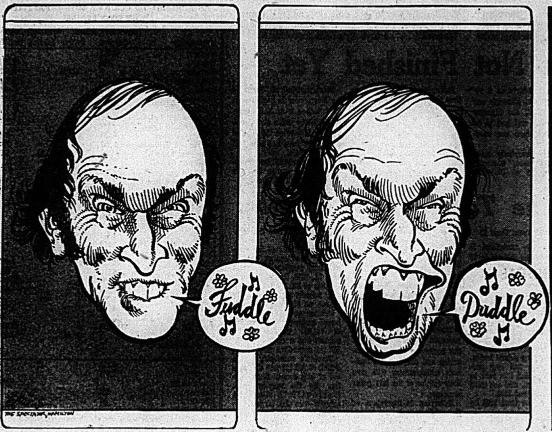
But you know how the service has been. Lousy, even when the postal staff has been collecting, sorting and delivering the mail.

And how postal rates have gone up — sharply on all classes of mail — to the point where some of the Post Office's big revenue - producing customers such as mail order houses and retail chains have discovered they can have their catalogues delivered door - to - door by commercial distributors more economically and perhaps more dependably than by the Post Office.

Let any other enterprise but government lose one of every five customers and it would be out of business.

But not the Post Office. It can always raise the mail rates.

And that is something — the question of competence — that the Prices and Incomes Commission might "look at," as it says it might do, and considering what bearing it has on the cost increases it is supposed to be policing.



Davis—A Man for the Times in Ontario

Ottawa Journal

Too much has been made of the narrowness of William Davis' victory over Allan Lawrence, as if Davis had somehow lost while winning and Lawrence had won while losing. A margin of 44 votes is certainly not overwhelming. But it was enough to do the job. Davis is no less the leader of the Ontario Conservatives and Premier-designate of Ontario than had he won by five times as much.

Landslide victories and irresistible bandwagons are rare in the age of participation politics. And a good thing too. Individual voters now make up their own minds. Party chieftains cannot "deliver" blocs of delegates any more. That is why so few "deals" are made at conventions.

Those who think it damaging that Davis' win was a near thing might recall that Pierre Trudeau won the leadership of his party with only 26 votes more than the required simple majority, and this at a convention with some 600 more delegates than the Ontario Conservative's gathering. Trudeau has certainly not felt inhibited or weakened!

Yet if Davis is the shrewd, strong politician his supporters think he is, he will be the first to grasp the reality of what happened at Maple Leaf Gardens and be ready to do something about it.

Davis has to demonstrate to both his party and his province that he does not propose to be either the Walter Weir or the "Ike" Smith of the Ontario Conservatives — that is, a new leader defeated at the next election.

The closeness of the final vote revealed that the Conservative delegates, like the public as a whole, are looking for fresh new men with new ideas.

Of course there was discontent among the Conservatives. It would be a smug, poor party if there were not.

Davis knows as well as any of his critics what are the problems competing for his attention. He will have to show urgency, concern and action. The bland, avuncular style which served John Robarts well is no longer enough. Any temptation Davis has to be a carbon copy of his predecessor should be overcome by accepting Robarts' wise comment just after the leadership convention. "I am a product of my time," he said, "and my time is finished."

In singling out unemployment as the province's most pressing concern, Davis has shown realism and political courage. It is easy, and certainly largely justifiable, to fall back on the provincial cliches and leave unemployment on Ottawa's doorstep. Davis did not do that; he seems ready to act, and that is commendable. In his acceptance speech he also recognized regional alienation, the feeling of neglect by Toronto which Allan Lawrence exploited. It is a good sign that Davis is aware of his own and his party's vulnerability.

A Look at PC Policies

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

I have predicted in the past the fall of the Ontario Conservative Party because of its swing into a socialist party.

William Davis' development of the controversial County School boards has left the people only one method of protesting, i.e. by not going to the polls to endorse a system where they know they have lost the power to govern themselves.

William Davis' development of equalized assessment and sub-division controls has created a monopoly for big business and government at the cost of the common people.

The resignation of relatively young ministers in the Ontario Conservative Party with William Davis and Darcy McKeough staying to contest the leadership of the Ontario Conservative Party shows that the Ontario Conservative Party would further develop these controversial policies.

Consider the recent split in the Ontario Conservative party. Here the Conservative Association President Alan Eagleson thought he should have been in control of the convention and yet it appeared that an inner committee consisting of Robarts, insurance men, etc., were in control of the money functions of the convention.

Finally, the news that Dalton Camp is going to head the Royal Commission on the Book Publishing Industry in Ontario can do nothing but create bad feeling for the Ontario Conservative Party.

Why is the Ontario Conservative Party throwing this election?

Arden, Ont.

Agitators in Quebec Schools

Granby La Voix de l'Est— The former cultural affairs minister is not always wrong. Far from it.

When for example, he emphasized the presence of professional agitators in institutes of learning, Mr. (Jean-Noel) Tremblay was absolutely right.

These agitators . . . invite public men into the schools only to criticize them, insult them and denounce the institutions which are at the base of our society. . . .

This infiltration, adds Mr. Tremblay, "obviously worries those responsible for maintaining order." . . .

What is to be deplored . . . is that the authorities do not put the situation back into good order. Respectful of citizens' rights, civil liberties, they hesitate to act even against those who do not pay attention to the rights of others to liberty of action and expression. . . .

These agitators look for nothing but the destruction of democracy. They are, as Mr. Tremblay says, propagandists of subversive ideologies of which students are the first victims.

Advertising Psychology

Montreal La Presse

Don't rule out the possibility that this very society has something of the concentration camp to it, that the big city resembles a camp and that advertising remains one of the most eloquent symbols of this religion of progress to which we all adhere more or less conscientiously . . .

For many reasons, commercial advertising will not disappear from our world . . . But the omnipresence of commercial solicitation requires a counterbalance. This counterbalance is education.

The first effect of any education of the consumer should be to lead him to take into account the fact that he is immersed in a sea of slogans and his behavior as a customer is conditioned.

Most consumers deny this as the influence of the messages which they sometimes get to know by heart remains discrete and subliminal.

The siege of the Alamo in San Antonio, Texas, began 135 years ago today—in 1836 —when about 180 Texans were attacked by General Santa Anna's army of 4,000 Mexicans, during the Texas war of independence. The walls of the Alamo mission were breached after 13 days of fighting and hand-to-hand combat ensued. Only five Texans were left alive after the battle, and these were killed in cold blood on Santa Anna's order. Sam Houston beat the Mexicans and captured Santa Anna at the battle of San Jacinto, six weeks later.

Dr. A. J. Brace of the YMCA National Council gave an informative address on the Burma Road to the Belleville Rotary Club. The Burma Road was built by the Chinese in order to get out their exports of tung oil and tungsten. The immensity of the task of building this vital road can be measured by the fact that in its 640 miles of winding length it crosses 10 mountain ranges, each one some 10,000 feet in height, and three great rivers which with their tributaries had to be spanned by some 700 bridges. One million people built the road with their bare hands, for the love of their country, and did it without remuneration. All they asked was their food. It was constructed in less than one year, and daily 6,000 trucks rumble Chinaward over its surface. The speaker was introduced by Rotarian Joe Shortt.

Film, Principal Explain Open Area Teaching

PICTON (Staff) — Learning can become a personalized discovery for elementary students' taught in open area classes at Queen Elizabeth School. The merits of the open area teaching system were reviewed last night during the installation meeting of the Queen Elizabeth Home and School association attended by more than 100 parents.

To illustrate this new approach to education, a 30-minute documentary film made by principal, Carl Reid, and his staff was shown and discussed.

Parents were told that approximately 300 pupils study in the open area classroom at Queen Elizabeth School. Two areas designated for English classes accommodate several groups of 120 students throughout the day. The library serves as the heart of the open area classroom and has two main functions. Pupils use it primarily for research as they complete study projects while teachers capitalize on its wide selection of books to promote reading.

Mr. Reid explained that pupils are trained to go to the library shelves and select what reading material they wish as they work on class studies. The film illustrated how a student studying Prince Edward County could find pertinent material in library books. Notes are taken by the pupil as he does research work.

A bulletin board bearing the slogan "The English Class Brings You Words to Hate By" demonstrated the open area class approach to vocabulary drill. Words relating to dislike, hatred and derision were prominently posted. "We talk about developing social attitudes — how better can you do this," asked Mr. Reid. He added that students familiar with the "hate words" posted on the bulletin board might be less likely to use inappropriate expletives.

Students studying mathematics in the open area classroom work manipulated materials instead of textbooks. "Formalized teaching is minimal," said Mr. Reid. He added that pupils are instructed in groups of eight or nine and often two or three. Individual assistance also is offered. "Blocks indicate and teach the mathematical process better than anything we've found in educational hardware," emphasized the principal.

Mr. Reid observed that open teaching seems to be "a loose organization" but it is "very very highly structured." He explained that flow charts show the students' development, covering approximately two weeks' work. "They fully understand why they are doing this, it becomes very clear to them when they see there is a structure and a reason for doing it," asserted Mr. Reid. He concluded that, to the uninitiated, students working in the open area classroom may appear confused. "They are not, they know what they are doing," he said.

Mr. Reid pointed out that not all students are happy studying in group situations. A system of private study at separate desks is provided for these youngsters, allowing them to choose the way they can learn best.

Science in the new classroom is based primarily on exploiting and research. Field trips, film strips and experiments all form part of this course.

Mr. Reid remarked that science pupils can spontaneously study the same subject at three different levels. Some pupils are independent workers while others prefer a specifically structured program. Still others study with "something very specific outlined under concrete headings." Although all pupils may study trees, each studies at a depth geared to his interest and potential.

Home economics is another subject enjoyed by Queen Elizabeth girls in the open area class. Cooking, sewing and weaving are included among their projects. Boys study woodworking and plastics and metal working. An oral French program has been introduced this year and Mr. Reid reported that "most children enjoy very much the opportunity to study a new language."

In summarizing the film, the principal stressed that it was impossible to show in 30 minutes the activities of an entire school day. He noted that the film was an accurate depiction of an average day in the open area class room. Students co-operated in making the film by ad-libbing on "an absolutely normal morning in the program."

Mr. Reid told parents that the new teaching method can provide a full opportunity for the full development of each student's academic goal.

Home and School Has New Head

Prince Edward Collegiate teacher Roy Goostrey last night addressed more than 100 persons who gathered for the re-formation of the Queen Elizabeth Home and School Association. Mr. Goostrey was elected president of reorganized association, defunct for the past two years.

Home and School Group Re-formed

PICTON (Staff) — A Prince Edward Collegiate Institute teacher, Roy Goostrey, last night was elected president of the Queen Elizabeth Home and School Association during an installation meeting. Other officers are first vice-president Sandra Norval; second vice-president, Marilyn Robins; treasurer, Jean Le Breton, recording secretary, Linda Holmberg and corresponding secretary Doris Lane. Standing committees are: social, Mrs. Brian York; membership, Mrs. Dorothy Kerr; publicity, David Hickman.

The Queen Elizabeth Home and School Association last night was officially re-formed after being defunct for about two years. Officers were installed by Mary Marshall, president of the Prince Edward County Home and School Association.

Highlight of the installation meeting was a 30-minute film documenting the open area teaching system at QE school.

Special guests included Prince Edward County school trustees Lloyd Seeley and Edward Rutter. Mr. Rutter is the home and school liaison officer appointed by the Prince Edward county board of education.

Electric Contractors Attend Hydro Course

Electrical contractors from the Quinte district attended classes recently at the Ontario Hydro here to better acquaint themselves with the most efficient and economic use of electricity as applied on the farm.

The course was designed to put one dollar into Hydro and get three dollars out for the farmer.

Because of the increased costs in supplying and creating electricity, Ontario Hydro is sponsoring courses such as this to help the consumer adjust to the additional expense.

Keith Bennett, Farm Sales Supervisor, and lecturer for the course, was accompanied by two members of the provincial department of agriculture in the teaching of the material.

Representing the department were agricultural engineers Donald Presant, Stirling, and Gordon Tobey of Brighton.

The course stretched over four consecutive Mondays and was attended by more than twenty businessmen from the area.

Similar classes are being held in Peterborough and Smiths Falls in an attempt to create a more efficient application of electricity.

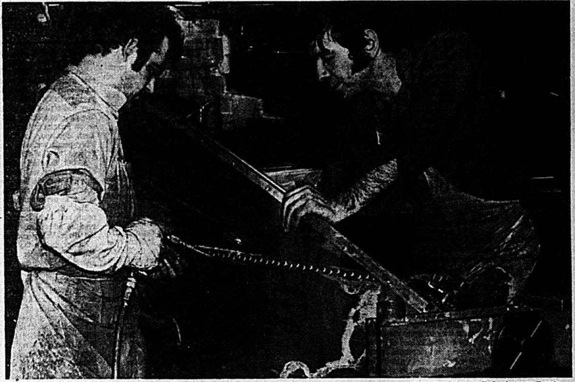
If you have jobs to fill...



Allan Ellis and Tony Cutulle, bench riveters, Toronto

we'll help you with people like Allan and Tony

At 390 Canada Manpower Centres across Canada we're in the business of bringing together workers and jobs. We depend on employers to list job opportunities with us. With our telecommunications network, we put employers in touch with available workers from coast to coast, and often we train workers and move them to new job locations. ☐ Take the case of Allan Ellis, 25, and Tony Cutulle, 22, of Toronto. Both had relatively unskilled jobs, subject to lay-offs and without too much of a future. ☐ So they both contacted their Canada Manpower Centre, and a Manpower counsellor referred them to an aircraft bench assembly course, where Allan and Tony were trained on metal assembly and riveting. Following graduation, they were sucessfully placed with a firm in Toronto where they now have jobs assembling aluminum boats. ☐ Like thousands of others trained under the Canada Manpower Training Program, they were able to put their new skills to work on a full-time job. And another Canadian employer found the skilled workers he needed.

Young Heart Patient Likes Road Hockey

OSHAWA, Ont. (CP) — Nine-year-old Andy Irvine likes to play road hockey. He is also a Rover scout.

These aren't unusual things for the average nine-year-old but then Andy is far from average. Since he was six months old he has had three major heart operations, and he was born with his stomach turned backwards.

Andy's story began when he was six weeks old, when he suffered his first heart attack.

His mother, Mrs. David Irvine, now of Oshawa, said that when Andy was born he was perfectly healthy and weighed 10 pounds.

"He was the middle child and the heaviest baby of the lot," she said. "Up until the attack the doctors couldn't find anything wrong with him. But I sensed something was different. When you're a mother you just know."

Andy was born in Halifax, and entered the Halifax Children's Hospital with his first attack. It was found he had two holes in his heart and four blood vessels in poor condition.

The first operation seemed a success and Andy responded well to the post-operative care he received at home. "The only problem we had with Andy after this operation was his difficulty in keeping food down," his mother said.

"I just gave him normal care at home. I used to hold him a lot."

The Irvines came to Oshawa six years ago and another series of treatments began for Andy. He underwent two more operations at the Hospital for Sick Children in Toronto, one to correct further heart damage and the second an exploratory operation.

Mrs. Irvine said Andy was 2½ years old before he learned to walk, and now he is only as big as his younger brother, Brian, six.

"Andy knew he had to have another operation when the last one was scheduled in 1968," Mrs. Irvine said. "He had a choice whether to go through with it or not and he wanted to. He's perfect. His only concern was whether I was worried."

She said when she and her husband visited Andy in hospital after the operation, he was lying there all wired up with tubes. But the first thing he said was, "Don't worry; I'm all right."

Andy still takes twice-yearly visits to the Toronto doctor. The last letter Mrs. Irvine received said the fight was far from over for Andy but that he was progressing well.

Mrs. Irvine wants to get involved with the Canadian Heart Fund, to show people the work done in research in helping children like her son.

"There are many people who think of heart disease as just an illness of older people," she said. "But there are a great many children suffering from heart ailments."

Andy's family refuse to baby him. He has chores to do just like his brother and sister, Cindy.

"He keeps his room tidy and washes the dishes sometimes," Mrs. Irvine said. "He'd like to start playing the guitar or the fiddle—but we can't find one small enough."

Andy would also like to ride a bicycle, but that's out. "He did have one once," his mother said. "But he almost fell off in front of a car so that was the end of that."

The Rover scouts heard all about Andy last summer and invited him to Camp Samac just north of Oshawa to become an "honorary" Rover.

"I went up to the camp and they gave me two hats and a whole bunch of badges," Andy said. "We looked around the buildings and grounds and had a great time."

In school Andy's favorite subject is math—"because I'm good at it." For recreation he spends a lot of time watching television—and playing a rough game of road hockey with his brother.

For now it's a waiting game for Mr. and Mrs. Irvine. "I just count the days and years until this is over," she said. "I never really believed it wouldn't turn out all right. That's why we treat him just like the other children."

Ann Landers

Reader Outraged By Ann's Advice

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am shocked and outraged over your answer to "On The Brink," the man whose wife became pregnant without his knowledge or consent, knowing full well that he did not want another child. They already had three, the eldest 20 and the youngest 13. The poor fellow said the prospect of being tied down until he was 60 was horribly depressing and he just couldn't face it. He gave his wife a choice — either she has an abortion or he gets a divorce.

Here was a very unhappy man who was asking for your opinion. Instead of giving him a civilized answer you responded in an abusive manner and told him his wife didn't get pregnant by herself — that he should stop acting like a jackass and accept the fourth child with dignity.

Every child has the right to be wanted by both parents. And who in hell needs a fourth child anyway? My heart ached for that father and I am burning over your insensitivity. I'll bet you receive hundreds of letters like this one and you'll probably throw them all in the wastebasket, unanswered. — DISAPPOINTED IN SANTA BARBARA.

DEAR DIS: Would you believe thousands? The barrage of hate mail I received because of my reply to that father is heavier than the love mail generated by my meat loaf.

To all who wrote to tell me I am cruel, unfelling, ignorant and just plain nuts, I would like to say this: Any man who give his wife the choice of abortion or divorce — after she has told him she wants the child, is indeed a jackass.

I have stated publicly and in print, that I stand four square in favor of abortion on demand, for any woman — married or unmarried — provided of course that her physician says the pregnancy can be terminated safely. I believe the matter of abortion should be decided between a woman and her doctor, without interference from church or state. I also have recommended vasectomy as a sane and sensible method of birth control for married men over 35 who don't want larger families.

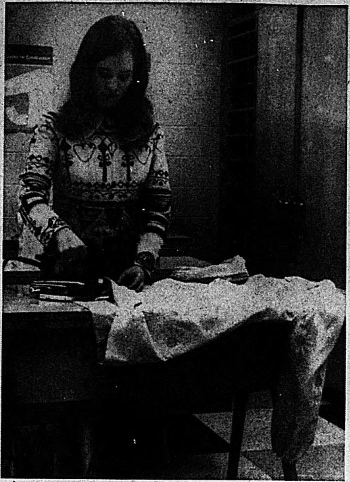
I recognize the need for population control and have so stated, repeatedly. But in this case, the woman is already Pregnant. She wants the child. In my opinion her wishes should prevail. The vicious and hysterical tone of the people who disagree with my answer persuaded me more deeply than ever that I was right.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My wife and I have been married three years. We have a beautiful baby boy who is 11 months old. My wife is a nervous prson and I am afraid she will make our boy nervous. She never lets me play with him or feed or diaper him. She says I don't know how to do these things and I should not try to interfere with her. If I pick up the baby, my wife takes him away from me and says she is afraid I will drop him.

Doesn't a child need the attention of both parents? I want to be a father but my wife won't let me. We both read your column every day. Maybe if you print this letter and give her some advice she will listen to you. She sure won't listen to me. — LEFT OUT DAD.

DEAR DAD: Let's hope she will listen to the pediatrician. Call and ask him to speak to your wife. It sounds as if she needs professional help to overcome her anxiety. A nervous mother can indeed make a child nervous. Your uptight wife is being grossly unfair to you and your son.



The Finishing Touch

Janet Duffin, 17, one of Belleville's growing number of home-sewing enthusiasts presses a dress she has just completed. Janet who made herself a complete wardrobe for $57 including the printed tunic she is wearing, and a skirt and slacks to match, enjoys creating high-fashion outfits while beating the high cost of clothes.

Many Turn to Home Sewing To Beat Cost of Store Attire

By SUSAN KORAH
Women's Reporter

Ever been to a wedding where you wondered whether those outstanding, out-of-this world creations worn by the bride and her attendants were the product of some exclusive Paris boutique? The chances are they were made by the bride herself or one of her girl friends from a printed pattern and some fabric bought at a discount store when she was shopping downtown during her lunch break.

More and more women are not only making their own wedding gowns but are also putting their imagination and creativity to great economic advantage to themselves by sewing just about everything from beachwear to formals and novel shirts and ties for their husbands and boyfriends.

Research conducted by Belleville's only discount fabric store revealed that at least 50 per cent of all the women in the Belleville area sew some clothes and a sizeable proportion of this number make complete wardrobes for themselves. The steady stream of customers seen at this discount shop bears further testimony to this fact.

With the prices of high-fashion clothes having reached astronomical heights, a woman saves herself an average of two-thirds the price of a ready made garment, when she makes a comparable one herself. She also makes a smart move fashion-wise when she does, because not only would the clothes fit better, but would also bear the stamp of her own personality in its choice of color, fabric and style. And individuality is after all, the hallmark of fashion sense.

Being confident that she won't see a half a dozen carbon copies of herself in the school halls and at social events is one of the rewards of sewing her own clothes for 17-year-old Janet Duffin, a Grade 12 student at Centennial Secondary School. The pleasure of making her fashion budget stretch as far as possible must be another, because she made herself a complete wardrobe for just $57. A formal gown of blue chiffon over butterfly lining with cotton lace and chiffon trimming cost her just $17 to make, while a long-sleeved plaid school dress of bonded wool with a maxi scarf cost $9. A lined cotton spring dress cost just $6 while a lined lace party dress with long sleeves and an A-line skirt was made for only $7 with lace bought on sale. A three-piece mix and match suit consisting of a crimpknit tunic top, crimplene skirt and crimplene slacks cost $18. Amazing, when you consider the price of similar garments at the retail store.

Janet Duffin is typical of the growing number of women who have joined the current home sewing trend. According to Blaine Statham, manager of a local discount store all classes of women — students, business girls and housewives of all economic brackets — sew, not because they have to, but simply because they enjoy sewing and the satisfaction of making something by themselves and because of the great advantages described above. Also, today's life style allows more free time to the average woman and sewing is one of the most popular of all leisure time activities.

Smart women are not only turning out clothes for themselves, but some of them are also making clothes for their menfolk too — just about everything from suits to ties and sports clothes. According to Blaine Statham who was until recently, the fashion coordinator at a men's clothing store in Toronto, the latest 'in' style for men is crimplene and doubleknit suits. And for women who like to make men's clothes this is good news, because crimplene is one of the most popular fabrics with the home sewing set, being easy to work with and easy to fit.

Some women buy tie patterns and create some highly original ties for the men in their lives too. One reason for this new interest in making men's clothes is that men's fashions have changed so completely over the past ten years and with such a wide variety of colors, fabrics and styles to choose from, women find it more fun to sew them than the white shirts and severely cut suits of yesteryear.

'Thinking Day' Observed

"Thinking Day" on Monday, Feb. 22, marked the opening of Guide Week held annually to mark the birthdays of the late Lord Baden Powell and Lady Baden Powell, founders of the Scout and Guide movement.

This special day is the day picked to stress the Guide ideal, "International Friendship". Through pennies collected by Canadian Guide Companies and Brownie Packs training personnel will be sent to countries where Guide programs are being established and will send aid to Guide organizations in time of disaster such as for floods and earthquakes.

The major part of this fund is used to assist in the expenses of international travelling for Canadian Guides and leaders, making it possible for them to participate in trainings, conferences and camps each year. Another portion enables Guides from other countries to attend special events in Canada.

Main events for this week include the annual Guide and Brownie tea to be held in St. Thomas Parish Hall today with banquets and events marking the achievements by the Guides and Brownies. Various church services were attended by both Guide and Scout organizations.

DISTRICT WOMEN'S INSTITUTES

RIVER VALLEY WI

The River Valley WI marked their 61st anniversary at the meeting held on February 19 which was also the 74th anniversary of the founding of the first WI in Ontario at Stoney Creek.

The president Mrs. Roy Tucker read a message from Mrs. Austin Zoeller, president of the federated Women's Institutes of Ontario.

Mrs. Percy MacMullen spoke briefly on the two anniversaries being observed and read poems eulogizing Adelaide Hoodless the founder of the first WI in Ontario. A short playlet depicting the Century Village Institute was presented by Mrs. R. Tucker, Mrs. James Hoard and Mrs. Ernest Carr. This gave an interesting view of Institute work.

The summary day song was repeated in honor of the leaders of the dessert course — Myrtle Rosebush and Alta Carr. Selections were read by Mrs. Roy Bush and Mrs. George Grills. Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Bennett conducted the sing-song and Karen Wood rendered a piano solo.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Morrow presented an interesting travelogue with pictures taken in the British Isles which they had visited last summer. The pictures took the audience on an imaginary tour of England, Scotland, Ireland and other points and was greatly enjoyed by the audience.

A full financial statement of the centre was read and showed a good balance to purchase oil and other necessitates in the coming months.

Mrs. R. Coombes read a poem and Mrs. Ernest Carr read an address on behalf of the River Valley community.

Earlier, before the program a pot luck supper was enjoyed by 90 men, women and children at the centre. Steven Bush was honored with a decorated birthday cake which was shared by all.

At the close of the program, dancing rounded off the memorable evening. The music was supplied by Mrs. Philip Conley, Mrs. Francis Sager, Kenneth Morrow and Norman Rosebush.

Club Activities

BETA SIGMA PHI GAMMA MU CHAPTER

Plans were formalized for the skating party and rummage sale during the February 16 meeting of the Gamma Mu Chapter held at the home of Mrs. R. Michaud. Members were asked to donate recent issues of magazines for use in hospital waiting rooms.

Mrs. Michaud presented her program "the story of Michaelanglo" which was highlighted by color slides of his more famous works. Mrs. Michaud gave a brief biographical sketch starting with his early years in Florence and going on to the time he carved the Pieta, the only piece of sculpture he signed.

Refreshments were served by the hostess who was assisted by the co-hostess, Mrs. R. B. Vaughan.

Woman on Drug Squad

EDMONTON (CP) — Detective Wally Bland of the Edmonton police drug squad was dubious at first about working with a woman, "but it's worked out well."

The woman is Ina Benson, one of the first women on a Canadian force's drug squad, who has been a narcotics officer for a year.

Policewoman Benson doesn't believe that marijuana should be legalized, since society "can't afford" another vice.

"What good have smoking and drinking done us?" she asked in an interview. "We can't afford marijuana."

She and Detective Bland investigate complaints, tips and calls from parents who have discovered their children using drugs.

Mrs. Benson also spends a good deal of time in the courts on drug cases and often acts as a liaison with undercover narcotics agents.

She said more help should be available to drug users and "we should get to the younger kids sooner."

She feels that most drug users should be pitied.

"I feel sorry for them . . . I feel almost the way I feel for a person with a very serious mental condition. They say they can kick their habit, but most are only fooling themselves."

Most of the youngsters on drugs tried it because of curiosity, as part of a popularity contest or as rebellion against authority."

The type of youngster who goes on drugs was a follower, and "very few leaders are motivated to take drugs steadily."

"But the followers get a sense of belonging, joining their peer group on drugs. It's the one area where they can walk in and be welcomed with open arms, with no questions asked."

Detective Bland said one of the main advantages of teaming with Mrs. Benson is having a woman to search possible female offenders and interview them.

"A woman is more versatile than a man at it," he said.

ETHNIC LOOKS — Hired-hand overalls go feminine with a knicker look and patchwork print trimmed in Canadian suede. It is by Jonhathan Legault of Montreal. The western-influenced leather suit is worn by milliner designer Mr. Flemming, now of Toronto. The suit was made for him by a Montreal designer. (CP Photo)

Peasant Prints and Embroidery Highlight Spring Fashions

NEW YORK (CP) — There are many new looks this spring. One, carried over from last year, is the ethnic. Some designers refer to it as the gypsy look.

The dictionary defines ethnic as "pertaining to races of people, especially speech groups" or, as one designer expressed it, to real country folk cultures. Spring interpretations are mostly in peasant prints and embroidery.

Suzy Perette likes a stone-color dirndl with colorful peasant border and shawl. A new Montreal firm, Parnelli-Juniors, adds a black apron effect to a long dress with deep frilly hemline, perhaps inspired by the Tyrolean fashions in Sound of Music.

Other countries are represented, as in Anne Klein's Moroccan scroll embroidery on a coat version of the djellabah, worn over pants. Kimberly Knits turns eastward with a Persian mosaic pattern in grey, red and black for tunic and pants. The ethnic feeling even invades the evening scene, as in Teal Traina's peasant cottons, scattered with sequins.

The real gypsy look is more gaudily extravagant, often with bared midriff. Indeed an ankle-length flounced skirt, expanse of midriff and an under-bust-tight top is even more provocative than the mini. This whole gypsy look is heading into a summer explosion, says Kayman Dress of Toronto.

After last year's rash of fringed cowgirl outfits, good old farm overalls now are fashionable, worn with or without a skinny top or blouse, depending on your bare philosophy.

Several designers have combined overalls with the new knickers, as in a distinctive mauve-and-brown Boussac cotton print by Jonathan Legault of Montreal, worn with Canadian suede waist, patch pockets and knicker band.

Even some young men are experimenting with overalls for casual wear. John Weitz introduced farmers' coveralls in printed terries for the beach. But mostly men are sticking to the Western look. Milliner-designer Mr. Flemming, formerly of Montreal and now in Toronto, had leather trousers and a short, tight, back-yoked leather jacket custom tailored for himself.

Some designers have modified the overalls to a suspender dress. Sophistication was added to a homespun cotton style in multi-colored bands by a full-sleeved milkmaid blouse in white crepe.

The fabrics used in these farmerette styles are varied. Many are in this spring's denim. Actually denim turns up in every fashion category. It's demure in ruffled dresses that seem straight out of the musical Oklahoma! And it's saucy in gold denim "hot pants."

Stretch blue denim with a heavy workwear look is saddle-stitched by Junior Sophisticates in blazers, jump-suits and pants, worn unexpectedly with red-and-white checked crepe-de-chine skirts. Anne Klein, who is partial to Western clothes, uses denim for a Gene Autrey vest-and-pants outfit, flounces denim dresses and adds suede front-lacing girdle-belts.

Gingham, too, falls into this "real country folk" look. Miss Sun Valley of Toronto likes a large lilac checked blouse, its wide sleeves and dirndl skirt a patch-work pattern of three-sized checks in white and lilac.

CLUB ACTIVITIES

PARENTS WITHOUT PARTNERS

It was noted at the recent meeting of Parents without Partners held in Trenton, that plans are well under way for the Eastern Ontario Regional Conference, and that registrations must be in by Feb. 28.

This conference will be held March 6 and 7 and it is felt will be the biggest event of the year for the chapter and everyone who can, is urged to attend.

At this meeting the new executive was elected as follows: president, Bill Payne; vice-president in charge of programming, Peggy Cochrane; vice-president of public relations, Jerry Bengard; recording and corresponding secretary, Lily Carleton; treasurer, Dorothy Hawker; director of family and social activities, Hazel Turner; membership secretary, Paul Maksmick and director of membership, Lennise Hawley.

Two visitors from Napanee and one visitor from Toronto were present at the last meeting. A draw prize was won by George Cote and refreshments were served during a social hour.

SENIOR CITIZENS CLUB NO. 94, BELLEVILLE

The senior citizens were reminded of the invitation to attend the rehearsal of the variety show at Trenton air base on March 4, during the second meeting of the club in February.

Despite reduced attendance, members spent an enjoyable evening participating in a frindly game of bingo.

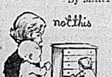
A moment of silence was observed in memory of a deceased member Mrs. Mary Adeline Scott. Mrs. Gist reported that several sympathy and get well cards had been sent to various members. It was also reported that Fred Smith was a patient in Belleville General Hospital.

Earlier, the president Mrs. Adams welcomed the gathering. At the close of the meeting refreshments were served by Mrs. Edith Hanna, Mrs. Ina Robinson, Mrs. F. McDonald and their assistants. Pianist for the meeting was Mrs. Alice Storms, senior. The door prize was won by Mrs. Nora Shoebridge.

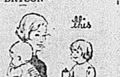
The lunch committee for March will consist of Harry Allin, Harry Taylor and Frank Edgar.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON



Mother: "Betty, for goodness sake, close that drawer and stay out of things. Why must you act so naughty? Can't you behave while I give the baby her bottle?"



Mother: "Honey, will you hold the baby's bottle while I burp her? If you would like to sit here while she drinks her milk, I'll tell you a story about when you were a tiny baby."

A mother's seeming absorption in a new baby may make a 3-year-old think she has to act up to get attention. Give her as much special attention as you can for awhile until she finds she doesn't have to battle for your love and concern.

Poet Never Saw the River He Described

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: The quote about the winding river and its long red chain comes from a poem by John Greenleaf Whittier entitled, "The Red River Voyageur". This was written early in the 1900's.

Whittier was a New England poet who wrote about ordinary people and places, and seemed to find beauty everywhere. It is interesting to know that he never saw the Red River or St. Boniface.

He read in an old newspaper an account of the voyageurs paddling up the Red River as they neared the end of their weary journey, and heard the call of vesper bells. So famous did the poem become that when he died the bells of St. Boniface were tolled in his memory. — Miss M. B.

Dear Miss M. B. and Many, Many Others: A great big thank you to all of you! The poem is worth having and worth memorizing — something which many of you who wrote in did, in public school very early in this century.

We will be glad to send a copy to anyone requesting it and enclosing 10 cents and a stamped envelope to cover handling and mailing.

* * *

Dear Doris: May I say a word to the 12 - year - old girl who signed "Feel Like Leaving"? Some day you will find kind people in the world. For now you might find a little peace by doing some of your school work in your public library. Get permission first.

Do not put on a lot of make-up; it isn't "in" any more.

DORIS CLARK

Make a mental four - year plan — study hard so you can get a decent job when you graduate. In the meantime, don't talk back no matter what is said or how right you are. Friendships made in school are important; be sure you pick the right kind.

Don't ask for trouble from your mother, she evidently is too upset or tense. Just simmer down and plan for a future in an adult world. And go to church. I send you my love. — Glad I Didn't Leave.

Dear Glad: Now I'm glad you didn't, too. F.F.L. will surely see your message and take heart. Thank you.

(Try turning your trouble into triumph by getting help from a trained social worker. Doris can put you on the right track.)

Crabmeat Substitutes For Lobster

By MARY MOORE

From a discouraging start this bisque grew into something very encouraging.

I was shopping for a can of lobster to make lobster bisque and found 6-oz. cans were $2.25. Not for me. I picked up a more reasonably priced 6-oz. can of Canadian crabmeat, 91 cents.

I picture my friend Mary Charles serving this at one of her elegant ladies' luncheons with a marvellous hot bread, such as Dilly Bread (see Friday) and an expertly tossed salad and some delicate Petit Fours. Are you reading Mary Charles?

CRABMEAT BISQUE
(Serves 6 to 8)
1 lb. chicken wings
2 cups water
one 6-ounce can Canadian crabmeat (see below)
⅞ cup fine cracker crumbs (see below)
(1 cup rich chicken broth — see below)
½ cup finely chopped mushrooms (6 med.)
½ pt. (1¼ cups) 18 percent cream
1 cup 2 percent milk
¼ tsp. MSG
½ tsp. salt
¼ cup flour
1¼ cups water (second amount) — divided

Cook the chicken wings in the 2 cups water until tender. Drain off broth. If you have more than 1 cup add it all to the bisque. (Use the chicken wings on a luncheon salad plate for some other meal.)

Buzz the crabmeat in blender (or chop finely) when it and its liquid will measure 1 cup. Turn into top of double boiler. Add cracker crumbs made as fine as possible in blender or by rolling under rolling pin and sifting. Add to double boiler. Add all other ingredients except ¼ cup of the water and the flour. Heat over boiling water. Make a smooth flour paste by beating together ¼ cup water and flour. Stir into heated ingredients in double boiler until thick. Serve in preheated cream soup bowls with fancy hot bread to your most particular friends.

Super soup.

No Surprises in Academy Award Nominations

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The film Establishment has voted on the best movie achievements of 1970, and the results are predictably safe and conventional.

Two big-budget movies in the traditional Hollywood style, Patton and Airport, took top honors Monday with 10 nominations each in the 43rd Motion Picture Academy Awards.

Love Story, te tear-jerking romance of a Harvard man an his incurably ill wife, was runner-up with seven nominations.

M-A-S-H, the wildly irreverent romp of battle surgeons in the Korean War, landed five, as did Tora! Tora! Tora!

Five Easy Pieces, a much-acclaimed example of the new style in film-making, managed only four nominations, so did two British-made films, Scrooge and Ryan's Daughter.

Nominated for best film: Airport, Five Easy Pieces, Love Story, M-A-S-H and Patton.

The acting nominees included five new female stars, a Canadian Indian chief and an actor who says he doesn't want the Oscar.

George C. Scott, who has grumbled that acting should not be placed on a competitive basis, was named for Patton. Others nominated for best actor: Melvyn Douglas, I Never Sang for My Father, James Earl Jones, The Great White Hope; Jack Nicholson, Five Easy Pieces, and Ryan O'Neal, Love Story.

Scott, in Spain to make another film, said today he had sent a cable asking that his name be withdrawn from nomination.

It was the first Academy Award nomination for all five in the best-actress category: Jane Alexander, The Great White Hope; Glenda Jackson, Women in Love; Ali MacGraw, Love Story; Sarah Miles, Ryan's Daughter, and Carrie Snodgress, Diary of a Mad Housewife.

Chief Dan George, a full-blooded Indian from North Vancouver, B.C., was nominated for best supporting actor for Little Big Man. Also in the running: Richard Castellano, Lovers and Other Strangers; Gene Hackman, I Never Sang for My Father; John Marley, Love Story, and John Mills, Ryan's Daughter.

Helen Hayes, who won an Oscar as star of The Sin of Madelon Claudet 40 years ago, was again up for an award for Airport.

Maureen Stapleton was nominated for the same film, along with Karen Black of Five Easy Pieces, Lee Grant for The Landlord and Sally Kellerman for M-A-S-H.

The directorial nominees were up for the first time, except for Federico Fellini, Fellini Satyricon, who previously has been mentioned nine times in various categories.

Others named as best director: Arthur Hiller, Love Story; Robert Altman, M-A-S-H; Franklin Schaffner, Patton, and Ken Russell, Women in Love.

Indian Chief A Nominee

NORTH VANCOUVER, B.C. (CP) — Chief Dan George accepted word of his nomination for an Academy Award with calm satisfaction Monday.

"I don't want Indians called second-class people any more," said the 71-year-old actor, nominated for his performance in the movie Little Big Man.

The chief, honorary leader of the Tse-lal-watt or Inlet people, has already been acclaimed as best supporting actor by the New York film critics and the National Society of Film Critics.

"Eight years ago I dedicated myself to try to do something that would give a name to the Indian people. Even if I'm not selected as winner, I feel I've attained my goal," he said in an interview.

"I'm not looking for glory for myself, but for all Indian people in Canada and the United States."

Chief George said he hopes the acclaim he has received will inspire other Indians to try their best to educate themselves.

Education is the thing. Without education, we will always be on welfare and wards of the government. We want to get away from all that."

Maritimers Dominate Music Awards

TORONTO (CP) — Maritimers took top honors at Monday night's presentation of the 1970 Gold Leaf Awards, the Canadian music industry's annual tribute to its most distinguished representatives.

But the greatest applause at the awards ceremony in St. Lawrence Hall went to a man outside the industry—Pierre Juneau, chairman of the Canadian Radio-Television Commission.

Mr. Juneau was acclaimed 1970's man of the year by the industry, because of the increased Canadian-content regulations imposed on Canadian broadcasters earlier this year by the CRTC.

Unquestionably, the biggest star of the year was Anne Murray, 25, the Springhill, N.S., singer who rose to international fame in 1970 with her recording of Gene MacLellan's Snowbird.

She was on hand Monday night to accept her award as the year's top female vocalist.

Naming the other Maritime winners who came before her—MacLellan, Canadian composer of 1970, Stompin Tom Connors top country male singer, and Myrna Lorrie of the Halifax TV series Countrytime, top country female singer—Miss Murray said the "Maritime Mafia" has just scratched the surface.

Brian Aherne received the award for best production of a single for 1970, Snowbird, as well as the award for best production of a middle-of-the-road album, Anne Murray's Honey, Wheat and Laughter.

The top male vocalist was Gordon Lightfoot, who received the same award in 1967 and was top folk-singer every other year since 1965. He was not present.

The 1970 top folk singer was Bruck Cockburn. The top vocal instrumental group was Guess Who, winner in the same category in 1965, 1967, 1968, and 1969.

Another of the 1969 winners, the Mercy Brothers, again were selected as top country instrumental vocal group.

Capital Records (Canada) Ltd. received two awards, as top record company and as top record company in promotional activities. Quality Records Ltd. was named top Canadian-content company.

The award for Canadian broadcaster of the year went to Standard Broadcasting for the Canadian Talent Library.

Dave Bist, pop columnist for The Montreal Gazette, was honored as Canadian journalist of the year.

Two-hour Pilot Professional Job

NEW YORK (AP) — Sarge: The Badge or the Cross, NBC's World Premiere feature Monday night was a pilot film intended to demonstrate potential as a future series.

Pilots, in general, are readily identified. They usually concentrate on the central characters, suggesting their flexibility to cope with various situations to be dreamed up for future scripts.

This one seemed to be a tortured twist on a tried and true formula.

Sarge Swanson is a good, rough police detective. In the opening scenes, a bomb meant for him kills his wife. The mourning husband quits the force, re-enters the seminary from which he dropped out years before, and becomes a priest.

Then Father Sarge busies himself with the people of his parish, establishes a tense relationship with his superior—younger than he is—but mostly he hunts the man responsible for his wife's death.

He finds him, of course. The idea of a tough cop turned priest is new but the rest is familiar TV territory. There was even the mandatory windup for action drama: the big fight. It was on the decks of an abandoned excursion boat.

George Kennedy played the priest, down-to-earth and tense. Like many made-for-TV efforts, it was dragged out to fill the two hours, but the camera work was excellent, the performances good and it was professionally put together.

ABC came along in the late evening with a half-hour summary of arguments for and against U.S. developments of a supersonic transport plane. The program described plans in progress, showed European progress in the same field. William Magruder, SST project director, argued it would provide jobs, low-cost transportation and make money. Senator William Proxmire explained the opposition's contentions, including expression of fear about pollution and sonic booms. The program was timely, balanced and generally helpful.

Marmora Project Set for Spring

MARMORA (Special)—The long awaited Marmora waterworks extension project is due to get underway; just as soon as weather and ground conditions permit.

Clarke Rollins, MPP, met with Marmora Village Council on Saturday, Feb. 13 to deliver the final papers. Members of Council expressed appreciation for Mr. Rollins' efforts in getting provincial assistance totalling $136,457. This sum represents one-half the total cost.

The contract has been awarded to Rideau Valley Construction Limited and is to be completed by November.

The possibility of improvements to Highway 14 south to Stirling was also discussed, because of its importance to Marmora residents who work in Belleville and because it could be an added attraction for industry coming into the area.

The Ontario Water Resources Commission is working on Marmora's proposed sewage system and more information is expected on that subject.

Detroit Not Finished Wheeling and Dealing

Detroit Red Wings, wheeling and dealing at an almost frantic pace as they busily rebuild their National Hockey League team, may not be through at the marketplace yet.

"We'd like to trade for a goalie and another defenceman," says Doug Barkley, who has welcomed eight new players as a result of three major trades since he took over as coach last month. "But there aren't that many good goalies available for trade."

The Wings have shuffled bodies so quickly that between the trades and an annoying string of injuries, Barkley hasn't had an opportunity to get his whole team together for a full practice.

"But I feel the players we've picked up will help us build a contender—perhaps as soon as next season," said the former NHL defenceman, who inherited the Wings' coaching job when Sid Abel resigned as general manager and Ned Harkness moved into the front office.

A few days after the executive change, the Wings swapped star left winger Frank Mahovlich to Montreal for Mickey Redmond, Billy Collins and Guy Charron.

"Redmond played only two games and then got hurt," Barkley said. "Then Charron caught the chicken pox and was out for awhile."

The Wings then swapped Bruce MacGregor and Larry Brown to New York for Arnie Brown, Mike Robitaille and minor leaguer Tom Miller.

"Robitaille had a goal and an assist in his first game for us and then hurt his back," said Barkley.

Next the Wings sent Garry Unger and Wayne Connelly to St. Louis Blues for Red Berenson and Tim Ecclestone.

DOUG BARKLEY

Players come and go with the Wings but always there is Gordie Howe, hockey's all-time scoring champ with 784 goals, 21 of them this season. Howe missed Sunday's game against New York Rangers because of the flu.

"Howe was feeling so badly Saturday night that he scored one goal and assisted on three others," Barkley said jokingly.

Howe aggravated a wrist injury in that game against Buffalo Sabres and Bruce Norris, president of the Red Wings, said Monday Howe is being given a week or so to recuperate.

Norris said Howe is expected to spend the week in Florida and a decision on when he will return to the Wings' lineup will be made when he returns.

The Wings, all but mathematically out of the playoffs, are battling only to stay ahead of Buffalo and Vancouver Canucks, two expansion teams added to the NHL's East Division this season.

The last-place Canucks stayed within reach of the fifth-place Red Wings Monday night when they battled Montreal Canadiens to a 3-3 tie in the only NHL game played.

The tie gave Vancouver 42 points, one less than the sixth-place Sabres and two less than Detroit. The Sabres, however, have played two more games than Detroit and Vancouver.

Vancouver jumped into a 2-0 lead in the first period on goals by Ted Taylor and Andre Boudrias, his first of two, but the Canadiens, spurred on by John Ferguson, their rugged left winger who engaged Taylor in a fight, tied the score in the second period.

The Canucks took the lead again in the third period when Boudrias scored his second goal on a pass from Wayne Maki but Marc Tardif tied the game at the 8:46 mark while Vancouver's Dale Tallon was serving a penalty for interference.

Ferguson won a clear-cut decision over Taylor in their fight in the second period and the Vancouver winger required two stitches to close a cut to the head.

After the fight at 6:24 of the period, J. C. Tremblay scored two minutes later for the Canadiens and another minute later Jacques Lemaire added the Canadiens second goal to tie the score.

The tie enabled the Canadiens to extend their unbeaten string to six games.

In the only game tonight, Boston Bruins meet the Sabres in Buffalo.

Short-handed Goal Good Indication Of Who'll Win

MONTREAL (CP) — A team that scores a goal while playing short-handed has almost a five-to-one chance of winning the game.

Statistics released by the National Hockey League Monday show that so far this season there have been 77 short-handed goals scored in 66 different games. Last season a record 82 short-handed goals were scored during a 456-game schedule.

There have been 412 games of the 546-game schedule played so far this season and in games when one team scored at least one short-handed goal, the scoring teams went on to win 49 times.

The short-handed scoring teams lost 10 games and seven others finished in ties. Twelve of the goals scored with the scoring team's man in the penalty box were game-winning goals and another three were game-tying goals.

Boston Bruins, current East Division leaders, added two more short-handed goals to their record last week, both by veteran right winger Ed Westfall. The Bruins now have 20 such goals for the season, a record which broke the previous mark of 14 set by Chicago Black Hawks in 1964-65.

Westfall has seven to his credit, one fewer than Dave Keon of Toronto Maple Leafs. Keon recently broke the record of seven set by Jerry Toppazzi of Boston in 1956-58. Three of Westfall's short-handed goals were winners.

Former FBI Agent Now NHL Watchdog

NEW YORK (CP) — Frank Torpey, former Federal Bureau of Investigation agent who laid down his gun to become head of the National Hockey League's security division, says no complaints of drug abuse among hockey players have come to his attention.

"Drug abuse is a matter of concern, but I have received no complaints along those lines," said the 41-year-old security chief, whose appointment was announced by NHL President Clarence Campbell in October.

He had been asked in an interview about the drug situation in the wake of last week's announcement that organized baseball is instituting a drug-control program because of suspicions that some major-league players have been using marijuana, hallucinogens or other drugs.

Torpey has visited 10 of the 14 NHL cities since his appointment, including the homes of the three Canadian teams, appointing investigators on a retainer basis to be the eyes and ears of the security division.

Irwin Blehm, a former RCMP inspector from Calgary, will join Torpey on March 1 as his chief assistant.

The security division's main duties, as outlined by the league president in October, are to guard pro hockey against intrusions by gamblers and underworld elements and provide an investigative service which can be used by any player comtemplating going into business.

"Apparently the interest in gambling on hockey has been much greater in Canada than here," said Torpey. "As far as I know, no 'puck line' is published in any U.S. city.

"It is very difficult for a player to avoid an association with someone determined to form such an association," said Torpey. "We want him to be able to recognize an undesirable approach . . . how casual questions about player injuries, team morale, etcetera, may provide a gambler with inside information which gives him a betting edge."

Haywood Has Day in Court

WASHINGTON (AP) — Professional basketball star Spencer Haywood asked the United States Supreme Court Monday to allow him to continue to play for Seattle SuperSonics pending litigation over his status in the National Basketball Association.

Haywood asked for an injunction against the U.S. Court of Appeals in San Francisco or, failing that, a stay of the Appeals Court's order clearing the way for NBA action against him.

A U.S. District Court in Los Angeles on Feb. 2 barred the NBA from taking action against Seattle to stop Haywood from playing pending trial of the case, scheduled to start March 2. The Appeals Court stayed the lower court order Feb. 16.

Haywood said if relief is not granted he will suffer irreparable injury to his physical condition, playing ability and reputation "as a super-star."

Warriors Scalp Braves

BUFFALO (AP) — Nate Thurmond and Jerry Lucas split 56 points and combined for 45 rebounds Monday night to lead San Francisco Warriors to a 109-91 National Basketball Association victory over Buffalo Braves.

"Thurmond was just tremendous," said Braves coach Dolph Schayes. "Every time we got within six or eight points he was there to block a shot or get a key rebound."

San Francisco took an early lead and Buffalo was unable to close the margin. By halftime, the Warriors led 52-40.

"We gambled on double-teaming to catch up, and they'd get the outside shot," Schayes said.

"Then Lucas beat the 24-second clock twice in a row. It was a frustrating game."

Buffalo's Don May was the game's high-scorer with 36 points.

There were no other games scheduled in the NBA.

Expos About to Enter Black, Thanks to Exuberant Fan Support

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (CP) — The stewardship of general manager Jim Fanning of Montreal Expos is about to turn red ink into black.

That pleasing prospect, plus an equally happy situation of an improving National League baseball club, had Fanning carefully counting blessings Monday as he surveyed the 1971 spring training camp.

Fanning had no fault to find with the exuberant loyalty of Montreal fans. Attendance in 1969, the year the Expos were born, was 1,212,608. It rose to 1,424,683 for the team's 74 home dates in 1970.

"We were in the red those first two years," Fanning said. "Now we're hopeful we will be in the black this season.

"So far, because of all the financial aspects, we have never been able to budget. Now we believe we can, as a responsible organization."

The club already is virtually free of holdout worries. Only Bob Bailey has not yet signed his contract. He is due to report with the rest of the major contingent Feb. 25.

"Bob and I haven't been able to get together on money," Fanning said. "But we are not far apart. He certainly had an outstanding three months of hitting last season."

..What Rusty Staub, starry rightfielder, or any others signed for, Fanning doesn't say.

"We gave increases, of course. We didn't throw them around indiscriminately. We gave them where we felt they had been earned."

Fanning recalled the early trials and tribulations of the club.

"In 1969 many of the expansion-draft players were unhappy because their previous teams made them available. Some were not of major league calibre. They realized they were with us only for trading purposes."

By June things began to take some shape and the club struggled through. There were signs of cohesion.

In 1970, spring training was "like it ought to be," there were still early troubles, but there was good feeling on the club.

Inexplicably, the Expos lost 10 of the first 11 games, but it was agreed the club looked better. By June it started snapping out of the doldrums.

Bailey began his hitting spree. Carl Morton and Steve Renko were pitching well enough to knock off anybody. Claude Raymond was doing a great relief job. And so it went. The pitchers "came of age" and the whole club "started believing in themselves."

Concentration Morton's Key

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (CP) — Carl Morton, who suddenly blossomed into Montreal Expos' ace pitcher in 1970 and became the National League's rookie-of-the-year, believes concentration is the secret of success.

Morton is a serious fellow, with quiet confidence, and extremely observant while playing with his first big league club.

CARL MORTON

"I feel I have learned a lot with Montreal," Morton said at the Expos' spring training camp Monday.

"There are wonderful opportunities to learn, and I have learned much even by watching other pitchers, especially the accepted stars."

Morton is a six-footer, who weighs 190 pounds and has a shock of flaming red hair. Actually he is a converted outfielder, but played at that position for only two seasons in the minors.

He was a pitcher, still in the minors, the next two seasons, and then was grabbed by Montreal from Atlanta Braves in the 1968 expansion draft.

In Montreal's wobbly 1969 opening National League season, Morton's won-loss record wasn't impressive. It was 0-3. He was sent to the class AAA Vancouver affiliate where he finished 8-6.

Then last season Morton appeared to put it all together and his work was a welcome revelation as he wound up with a sparkling 18-11 record.

"He could have been a 20-game winner for us," general mannger Jim Fanning said. "He's a clever fellow, an advocate of positive thinking."

Morton spent part of the winter in Montreal and part at his home in Tulsa, Okla. He is married and has a four-year-old son.

He has beenimpressed with Montreal as a city. He describes it as "unique."

"There are three cities in that category that I know about — Montreal, San Francisco and New Orleans.

"Montreal has many activites and its historic spots. It's what I would call a receptive city. You have to get adjusted to it."

Morton feels the Expos will be an improved club this season and—his positive thinking—he knows his pitching should be improved, then "other things will take care of themselves."

He let be known that his son, Brent, is already interested in baseball and is a sharp, observant student.

"I won't bring him along too fast," Morton said. "But he can swing with Bob Bailey.

Track Spectators Get Money's Worth

VANCOUVER (CP) — A record turnout of 9,876 track-and-field fans got their money's worth of the Achilles Indoor Games which were highlighted by a spine-tingling duel by two of the world's top women high jumpers.

The largest gathering in the seven-year history of the event watched Sunday as Canadian champion Debbie Brill of Haney, B.C., and Snezana Hrepevnik of Yugoslavia set a Canadian record of six feet one inch in the high jump. Then each just missed eclipsing the world mark for women of six feet 2½ inches.

The games produced six other Canadian records.

Penny May and Jill Pelland, both of Victoria, established Canadian native records in finishing second and third respectively in the women's 50-metre hurdles. The time was 7.2 seconds.

Vancouver's Irene Piotrowski set a Canadian open record in the women's 400 metres of 58 seconds.

Sports on All Fronts

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Thurman Munson, rookie of the year in American League last season, signed his 1971 contract Monday with New York Yankees on the first day of spring training camp for batterymen. It was reported that Munson, a catcher who hit .302 last year, got a raise to $28,000 from the $14,000 he received in 1970.

NEW YORK (AP) — One of the oldest sports in North America could become one of television's newest prime-time attractions if interest is high in NBC's night baseball telecasts this season. Besides its 25 Saturday afternoon Game of the Week series, NBC will increase its Monday night telecasts of major-league scheduled games to five from three. "It's an obvious conclusion that if night baseball is successful you will be seeing more on the network: Monday night baseball would be a distinct possibility," said Carl Lindemann, NBC's vice-president for sports. The network also will telecast the first night World Series game and the night All-Star Game.

NEW YORK (AP) — Dennis Ralston of Bakersfield, Calif., broke Arthur Ashe's service in the third-set tie-breaker to beat his Richmond, Va., foe 6-2, 4-6, 7-6 Monday night and earn the right to face Rod Laver in the March 18 semi-finals of the $210,000 Tennis Champions Classic. In the other semi-final match at Madison Square Garden, Tom Okker of The Netherlands will face Australian Roy Emerson. Each semi-final winner will collect $15,000. The date of the $50,000 final — with $35,000 going to the winner — has not been announced.

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. (AP) — Baseball great Henry Aaron was introduced to golf great Jack Nicklaus. "What kind of golfer are you?" Nicklaus asked. "Terrible," said Aaron, Atlanta Braves' slugging outfielder. "It took me 17 years to get 3,000 hits in baseball. I did it in one afternoon on the golf course." Aaron, who opens spring training here today, dropped by the PGA National Club Monday to see players tuning up for the 53rd Professional Golfers' Association championship which begins Thursday.

LONDON (AP) — Ken Buchanan of Scotland, world lightweight boxing champion, will not be able to box for three months because of a perforated eardrum, his manager said Monday. Buchanan, who outpointed Ruben Navarro at Los Angeles in a recent title fight, learned the news from a specialist. "Before Ken defends the championship again he will have a warmup fight," manager Eddie Thomas said. "I cannot see that he will box for the title again before July or August." Before Thomas made the announcement, the World Boxing Council, in a statement from Manila, said Buchanan must defend his title against Spain's Pedro Carrasco before May 12.

Now Another Snead Making Name in Golf

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — J. C. Snead, a 29-year-old nephew of the great Sam Snead, has his first golf title, but he is unhappy about the way he won.

Snead, who won the weather-plagued $110,000 Tucson open golf tournament in a 36-hole windup Monday, said:

"I won and that's wonderful. I'm awful happy. But I don't like the way I finished."

Snead, who didn't take up golf until he was 25, led or shared the lead all the way, was tied with Dale Douglass at the end of 36 holes and again after 54.

The latter was Monday morning, when they finished the third round of the tournament that had the round rained out and another cancelled by a snowstorm.

Snead picked up one stroke going out in the afternoon, reeling off three consecutive birdies starting on the second hole, lipped out an eagle putt and settled for a bird on the sixth and put an iron within three feet on the next.

He turned in 31—and was just one stroke in front on the equally-determined Douglass. The rest of the field had drifted back.

Douglass wedged to four feet and made the putt on the 11th tole to gain a tie. So they were all even as Snead went tothe 15th, a 580-yard par five.

GARY BOWERMAN

He holed out a 60-yard ctip shot for an eagle three and a two-stroke margin.

Both went one over par on the 17th from traps. Douglass managed a par four on the tough final hole and Snead was short in two. He held a two-stroke lead at that point and needed to get down in three to win. He chipped short and two-putted from 20 feet, sinking a two-footer in the growing darkness for the victory.

"It's a bad way to finish," said Snead, who was leading by two strokes with two holes to play. "I feel kinda bad about that."

Douglass had final-round 67 for 274. It was five strokes back to the next group, George Archer, Al Mengert and Hale Irwin, tied at 279. Frank Beard, DeWitt Weaver and Jacky Cupit had 280s. Wayne Vollmer of Vancouver led the Canadians, winning $479. He ended with a final-round 72 for a 287 total. Ken Fulton of Montreal had a 71 for a 290 total and won $253. Gary Bowerman of Toronto shot a 72 for 292, good for $220.

Senior Leader Admits Luck

HALIFAX (CP) — Skip Harry Coles of Quebec, after a narrow 8-6 win over New Brunswick in the second round of the Canadian seniors curling championship Monday, admits his rink didn't deserve to win.

"But we got that bad game out of our system now," he said after the victory left Quebec with a 2-0 record, tied with three other rinks for the lead in the 11-team round-robin tournament. British Columbia, Alberta and Saskatchewan also have 2-0 records.

Northern Ontario has a 1-1 record while Manitoba, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Ontario and Newfoundland were all winless.

In third-round play today, scheduled for 9:30 a.m. EST, it is Saskatchewan vs. Prince Edward Island, Quebec vs. Newfoundland, Alberta vs. New Brunswick, Manitoba vs. Quebec and Northern Ontario vs. British Columbia.

The fourth round is scheduled for 2 p.m.

In other second-round games, Alberta edged Manitoba 8-7, British Columbia swamped Newfoundland 15-1, Prince Edward Island downed Nova Scotia 15-5 and Saskatchewan defeated Northern Ontario 8-5. Ontario had the bye.

In the Quebec-New Brunswick contest, New Brunswick skip Maurice MacDonald attempted to raise a stone into the house in the final end to break a 6-6 deadlock, but the move failed and Quebec picked up two to win.

Alberta skip Stu Pearce had to use his last rock in the 10th and for a takeout of the Manitoba shot rock to win. He connected for the single and defeated the Mac McCrimmon rink from Flin Flon, Man.

British Columbia, skipped by Gordon Moore, and the Dr. Wendell MacDonald rink from Prince Edward Island, showed little mercy to their opponents.

Moore's quartet won the first four ends, building a commanding 8-0 lead en route to its swamping of the Newfoundland representatives, skipped by John Pike.

Winning Best Cure

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — "It's a lot easier when you're a winner," skip Kay Baldwin of Alberta said after overcoming opening-round nervousness to establish a 2-0 record Monday in the Canadian women's curling championship.

"We were a bit uncertain . . . we thought we'd be competing against pretty seasoned curlers," Mrs. Baldwin said after defeating Mrs. Clare Purdy's Nova Scotia rink 14-3 in the second of the scheduled nine rounds of the round-robin competition.

Although a curler for 14 years, it was her first national event. She attributed the victory and a first-round 10-9 extra-end win over Manitoba to her "well-balanced" rink.

Nova Scotia was the only rink going into today's third round with two losses. The other eight have 1-1 records.

Alberta Schoolboy Skip Backs Up Reputation

KAMLOOPS, B.C. (CP) — David Haley's Alberta rink served notice Monday that the reputation that preceded it to the Canadian schoolboy curling championship here was not undeserved, as the Athabasca skip made a take-out shot through a port for a 6-5 second-round win over Ontario.

"I just knew I had to get through the port," Haley said after the win, which left his foursome tied with Saskatchewan and Manitoba at two wins apiece.

Northern Ontario has a 1-0 record while British Columbia, Quebec and New Brunswick were 1-1, Nova Scotia was 1-0, and Newfoundland, Prince Edward Island and Ontario were last with two losses apiece.

In today's third round, set for 5:30 p.m. EST, New Brunswick meets Nova Scotia, B.C. meets Alberta, Quebec meets Saskatchewan, Newfoundland faces Northern Ontario, and Prince Edward Island faces Ontario. Manitoba has the bye.

The fourth round is at 11 p.m.

In other second-round games, Quebec beat Newfoundland 11-5, New Brunswick whipped Prince Edward Island 9-4; Manitoba edged Nova Scotia 5-4 and Saskatchewan outdrew British Columbia 9-8.

Both Haley and Ontario skip Mark McDonald of Gananoque made some fine shots in their contest, McDonald a cold draw to the four foot in the ninth to save the end, and Haley two take-outs in the eleventh and extra end to salvage the win.

Third Barry Bortnick gave Haley excellent support when it counted but Haley still had to make four double takeouts before the game was over.

The New Brunswick rink, skipped by Gary McDonald from Oromocto, hit their stride in the second round after a loss to Alberta 12-5, defeating Prince Edward Island 9-4.

Coach Dick Watson said his rink's main problem in the first round was nervousness. The New Brunswick rink is the youngest and least experienced in the national competition. Three of the boys are 16, the other 15.

Prince Edward Island became the popular favorite of the five-day event Monday when skip Glen Mahar fell during a practice shot before the first round began and injured his throwing arm, putting him out for at least two days.

He returned to the game, his arm in a sling, to direct his rink through a contest Manitoba needed two extra ends to win 9-7.

Mahar usually throws second, while second Donald Callbeck throws the last stone, so the injury was not the handicap it could otherwise have been, as lead Kent Gorveatt threw Mahar's stones.

In other first-round play, Northern Ontario beat Quebec 10-6 in an extra end, B.C. beat Newfoundland 8-5 and Saskatchewan whipped Ontario 9-6.

Woodstock Thickens Plot In 4-Pointer

By Maurice Switzer

Sports Editor

As someone who scored a mere 47 on a grade 13 algebra examination, your correspondent is not really qualified to discuss the current state of senior hockey affairs.

When I first heard the phrase "new math," I assumed it was a priest with a lisp talking about a rock-n-roll service. And I agree with the disgruntled Briton who last week said if the Good Lord wanted the decimal system he'd have arranged for only ten apostles.

Clarence Schmalz did not major in mathematics, either, but the Ontario Hockey Association president has probably acquired a sound working knowledge of numbers from tending the till at his hotel in Walkerton.

"Tubby," as he is affectionately known in provincial shinny circles, has spent most of his last 72 waking hours on a telephone trying to sort out which six OHA Senior A league entries will begin playoff activity this coming weekend.

Four postponed games by Woodstock's dismal cellar-dwellers, and protests by Kingston against Owen Sound, and Owen Sound against Wodstock for use of ineligible players has left the league playoff picture not merely unclear, but unreal.

As of this moment, Galt, Orillia, and Barrie know where they stand, namely, first, second, and third. But Kingston, Oakville, Belleville, and Owen Sound entries aren't even sure if hockey is still played with a puck, so tangled is their web.

The consensus of president Schmalz's long-distance endeavors calls for a four-point game to be played in Belleville tonight between the Mo-Hawks and some sort of Woodstock team. The protests by Kingston and Owen Sound, both of whom completed their 40-game schedules, will be heard in Toronto Wednesday.

Only by summoning up the muse of former algebra teacher Mr. Brown can I even begin to list the permutations and combinations involved in tonight's 8.30 four-pointer in Belleville.

Let Belleville, Kingston, Oakville, and Owen Sound be the variables. Having won only three of 36 games all year, we can reasonably assume Woodstock to be the problem's constant ingredient.

Now, if Belleville wins tonight's four-pointer they will have 38 points and at least fifth place in the standings ahead of Oakville, who finished with 37. In that event, the Mo-Hawks would open a best-of-seven series in Orillia Friday night.

A Belleville win tonight, coupled with a defeat of Kingston's protest against Owen Sound, would give the Mo-Hawks fourth place ahead of the Aces (37 points), and they would open playoffs in Galt Saturday.

If Belleville (34 points) should lose to the motley group of A's making their appearance here tonight, they would still retain the sixth and final playoff berth if Owen Sound (32 points) lost their protest against Woodstock. Then Belleville would open playoff action in Barrie Friday.

If Belleville lost tonight, and Owen Sound's protest was upheld, the teams would be tied for the final playoff berth and a special playoff would be required under the league constitution.

In the event weather cancels tonight's scheduled Woodstock visit, all the king's horses — not even Mr. Brown — could put this egg back together again.

• • •

If the Mo-Hawks can beat second-place Orillia 10-1 — as they did Sunday afternoon — what havoc should they be able to play tonight with the As, whom they have beaten 9-4, 5-2, and 5-4 this season?

That ten-goal spree against the Terriers gave the Mo-Hawks 144 goals in 38 games, ten more than they netted in the entire 40-game schedule last winter.

Going into tonight's four-pointer, the locals have a team total of 364 scoring points, compared to last year's 343.

Conversely, the 1969-70 Mo-Hawks allowed 163 goals in 40 games. This year the club has given up 144 in 38 games, and Steve Rexe has shaved his average from 3.89 to 3.83.

Club scoring is well spread, with four players — Doug Senior, Les Colligan, Al Ferguson, and Wayne McConnell — each having 17 goals to date. A high-scoring romp over the A's tonight could see one or more Mo-Hawks maintain the club record of having at least one 20-goal scorer in the lineup.

Winston Churchill School pupil Heather Swain has high hopes written all over her face as she participates in free ten-pin instruction at the city's Plaza Brunswick Bowl. Proprietor Ron Swatuk offers the instruction four days weekly to encourage young bowlers.

City Bowling Lanes Popular Youth Centres

By ERIC EMERSON
Staff Sportswriter

While none of the 2,500 competitors currently active in Belleville bowling leagues are currently in the class of the $20,000 per-year average performer on the Professional Bowlers Tour, both local bowling houses are attempting to turn out some top notch performers.

Ron Swatuk, manager of the Brunswick Belleville Bowl, places a high premium on junior-age bowling. Bowl-O-Drome owner, Bill Bateman on the other hand, while supporting junior bowling, relies heavily on adult league bowlers at his Front Street establishment.

The Bowl-O-Drome, offering five-pin bowling only, currently has 23 leagues operating weekly with an enrollment of some 1,000 regulars.

The Brunswick Bowl, which has both ten and five pin facilities, operates about 40 leagues with approximately 1,200 competitors. The number of leagues are about equally divided between ten and five pin players.

Both operators agree that it is the regular league bowler, rather than the casual performer who holds the key to a successful operation.

"We have open bowling only about two nights a week", says Swatuk, "by far the majority of bowlers are those performing regularly in a league."

Bateman concurs with his counterpart. "I'd say that about 95 per cent of our customers are league bowlers", he can say with 25 years experience in the sport. "Right now the number of casual players is very light, although these things seem to run in cycles and we could see an upswing in their numbers."

Women bowlers have a numerical edge on their male counterparts at both local establishments with Swatuk estimating about 60 per cent of the regular bowlers as women, while Bateman sets his figure at about 65 per cent.

"I think it's as much a social thing with the ladies as anything", notes Swatuk, "the sport allows them to get together and talk things over regularly when their leagues are playing."

Both bowling alleys provide special programs for youngsters interested in taking up the sport.

The Brunswick Bowl operates four junior leagues with a total enrollment of about 200. Mrs. Pat Matthews is employed as program instructor, while Bob Long heads the ten-pin junior program and Teresa Clarke, the five pin.

In addition there are 16 instructors on hand and special features such as instructional films can be arranged.

The plaza bowling alley is currently providing free bowling four nights a week to some public schools in the city, in order to acquaint the younger set with the sport.

The program isn't limited to the younger set, however. "We have the pensioners in here to bowl two days a week and they have a great time," says Swatuck.

Mrs. Vi McCrystal is the driving force behind junior bowling at the Bowl-O-Drome which involves 150 youngsters there. Regular bowling is conducted in four classes: beginners, bantams, juniors and senior youth.

The juniors have been involved in a number of "Family Twosome Tournaments," climaxed by a competition for the past three weeks, last Sunday involving youngsters from Deseronto, Stirling, Brighton and Trenton as well as Belleville.

Swatuk summed up what he feels is the reason for the sport's popularity, and like Bateman feels that it has a bright future. "It's a sport that you can play practically all of your life, unlike many others which you don't participate in after leaving school," says the Brunswick manager. "And with the increasing leisure time I think you'll see even more people turning to it — they can't spend all of their spare time sitting around the cottage."

Lewicki One Old-Timer Who Won't Look Old

The thing that surprises most viewers of NHL Old-Timers games is that some of the Old-Timers don't play like they're so old.

Take left-winger Danny Lewicki, for instance.

Not 40 until March 31, Lewicki has been out of pro hockey for eight years, but he still can excite the Old-Timers' exhibition crowds with his skatework.

In 461 regular-season NHL games with Toronto, New York, and Chicago, Lewicki scored 105 goals, or about one every four games. Not bad for pre-expansion hockey.

Sunday afternoon in Kingston, Lewicki showed a crowd of 1,500 flashes of former years. He scored three of the "serious" goals in the Old-Timers' 8-6 verdict over a group of Kingston shinny veterans, including Harry Sinden.

DANNY LEWICKI

Lewicki was also a standout in Friday's 8-4 win by the Toronto-based Old - Timers over their Montreal counterparts, who paid a highly-successful visit to Belleville before Christmas.

This Friday night, it's the Toronto group's turn, tangling with former city hockey stars in a 9 p.m. Memorial Arena affair.

Adult advance tickets are selling for a $1 reduced price, with all children being admitted for 50 cents. Net proceeds will be shared by the city's Junior B Fairways and OMHA all-star entries.

Joining Lewicki in the Old-Timers lineup are such superstars of their era as Bob Goldham, Cal Gardner and Sid Smith.

Quinte Favorites Play Role

The favorites came out swinging last night in Quinte Hockey League semi-finals action as Belvedere Hotel and Central Taxi both chalked up wins.

Doug Hallam counted two early goals to start Belvedere on their way to an 8-1 win over Stinson Construction, giving the Hotelmen a 3-0 stranglehold in their best-of-seven series

Jack Francis sandwiched his first of two tallies between Hallam's scores, with Gerry Jones, Larry Stewart, Larry Potter and Bob Ethier adding the other tallies.

Jodoin was the only Stinson goalgetter.

Defenceman Ron Grunsten provided what proved to be the winning goal in a 6-4 win over DCA Transfer as the Cabbies took a 2-0 lead in their series with one game tied.

Tom Pierce, Grant Hagerman, Terry Casselman, Doug Bolte and Ted Schwager were the other scorers.

Ron Urch, Jim Drummond, McKay and Ballingal were the goalgetters for DCA Transfer.

New Track Along 28

PETERBOROUGH (CP)—A $600,000 harness race track will be built on Highway 28, about 12 miles south of here, the Peterborough Driving Club announced today.

The five-eighths-mile track, which should be in operation by 1972, will have two 44-horse barns, betting area and grandstand with clubhouse facilities.

Bob Can't Be Beat

Goalie Bob Harrison kept sitting on the goose eggs to hatch the Gas House win of their semi-finals series with Marysville.

The merchant netminder picked up his fifth consecutive shutout of the playoff series, a 5-0 effort to give his team a 4-0 sweep of the series. One game was a 0-0 tie.

Don Fish backed the shutout effort of Harrison with a hat trick performance after Perry Soule and Ralph Boomhower had given the Merchants a 2-0 lead.

The winners now meet the league champion Mustangs for the Gas House League title.

March Trials Await Many

MONTREAL (CP) — Fifty persons are facing trial in Montreal as a result of Quebec's October crisis, but many cases have been put over to the spring assizes opening March 1.

Stephen Cuddihy, chief Crown attorney for the Montreal district, said Monday 28 men and women are free on bail and 22 held without bail.

In addition, eight persons faced charges elsewhere in the province on charges under the War Measures Act, invoked Oct. 16, and the subsequent Public Order (Temporary Measures) Act 1970. These included four in Sherbrooke, two in Quebec City and one each in the northern communities of Amos and Mont Laurier.

The speculation among the public is that proceedings will drag on for many months but Mr. Cuddihy said it is impossible to estimate just how long the actions will take.

The kidnap-murder trial of Paul Rose passed the one-month point Monday but reached the testimony-taking stage only last Friday.

Jacques Rose, brother of Paul, Francis Simard and Bernard Lortie, who are also charged with non-capital murder in the strangling of Pierre Laporte last October, have already made some spectacular court appearances but their trial has been postponed to March 1.

To illustrate courtroom atmosphere: At least 10 persons have been cited for contempt, one of them collecting five citations at one hearing. Mr. Cuddihy said two of Montreal's six Court of Queen's Bench divisions are occupied with cases involving alleged terrorism.

Nearly half of those charged here are facing four or five offences—including, notably, membership in the outlawed Front de Liberation du Quebec—and could be tried on all of them.

When a reporter commented that there seemed to be conflict among authorities regarding the total of accused in Quebec, one source said the Montreal total is sometimes placed at 54.

But a warrant was still outstanding against one woman in connection with FLQ activities. Besides, social welfare court had disposed of two cases involving juveniles and one man was found not guilty of FLQ charges early in December by reasons of insanity. So, 50 persons now faced trial.

A 15-month prison sentence has been the stiffest handed down so far anywhere in the province in connection with the October roundup.

Francois Mercier, 27, a teacher, was sentenced to 15 months at Cowansville, in the Eastern Townships, Nov. 16 after pleading guilty to FLQ membership.

Labor leader Michel Chartrand received a one-year sentence for contempt of court in January, but appealed and now is free on bail pending trial on a charge of FLQ membership.

The first two Montreal jury trials resulted in one acquittal and one conviction—both verdicts being promptly appealed.

Student Robert Langevin, 21, was acquitted on a charge of seditious libel Jan. 13 but still faces three counts in the spring assizes. The Crown appealed the acquittal.

Come Leblanc, 22-year-old unemployed laborer, received 10 months after being convicted of advocating the illegal aims of the FLQ, but was acquitted of FLQ membership. He has appealed.

Commons Debate Promised

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons will have a chance to discuss any proposed permanent measure to replace the Public Order Act before the act expires April 30, Prime Minister Trudeau said Monday.

Replying to Commons questions by Gerald W. Baldwin (PC—Peace River), Mr. Trudeau said the matter will be brought before the House but the form in which it would be presented would not be revealed until the time came.

The legislation, which came into effect Dec. 3, continues but limits the government's powers assumed under the War Measures Act, proclaimed Oct. 16 to deal with Quebec terrorism.

Which Day Is Best?

☐ MONDAY ☐ THURSDAY
☐ TUESDAY ☐ FRIDAY
☐ WEDNES. ☐ SATURDAY

Advertisers frequently ask this question. Fortunately, there is no best day to advertise. Each day new wants arise, bringing new readers as old ones satisfy their wants. We recommend that you start your ad tomorrow and cancel it when you get results. After many years of experience with millions of want ads, we know tomorrow is the best day to start your ad and every day is the best day to advertise in The Intelligencer want ad leader.

Laos Thrust Crucial Test Of U. S. Policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Violent North Vietnamese counter-attacks are transforming the South Vietnamese invasion of southern Laos into a crucial test of President Nixon's strategy of U.S. withdrawal from Vietnam.

A major success for South Vietnamese and U.S. forces—the first on the ground and the other in the air—would almost certainly make it possible for President Nixon to speed up the removal of American troops, officials indicate.

A major failure in the strike against the Ho Chi Minh trail, however, would raise serious questions about the next stage of the withdrawal program, scheduled for May, since the whole disengagement process is based on the ability of the South Vietnamese army to defend its country.

State and defence department authorities both put out the administration line Monday that, while disappoined over the heavy losses suffered by the South Vietnamese in one engagement, the action is not regarded as a setback in the over-all attack against the North Vietnamese supply lines and base areas.

Spokesmen indicated South Vietnamese combat ability was being tested, but implied nothing was likely to happen to affect Nixon's withdrawal strategy.

Other officials, however, are by no means so confident. The South Vietnamese ground thrust was regarded as a risky action from the beginning, depending on how the North Vietnamese reacted. Counter-attacks in the last week have persuaded knowledgeable officials Hanoi decided to react with considerable power.

Moreover, the whole Vietnamization program is entering a crucial phase and Hanoi knows it.

State Secretary William Rogers said at a news conference Jan. 27, that "between now and May 1, there is a very critical period."

May 1 normally marks the start of the rainy season, which brings military activity to a crawl if not to a halt.

During the remaining dry season, Rogers indicated, Hanoi would attempt to build up its supplies and manpower for a possible attack in South Vietnam.

In the light of that judgment, the U.S.-South Vietnamese decision to invade the trail in southern Laos appears to be partly a means of preventing the buildup Rogers warned of.

A parallel aim against the background of the earlier Cambodian operation was to put a strangle hold on the remaining North Vietnamese supply lines.

President Nixon stressed this life-or-death aspect of the threat to the North Vietnamese, as he judged it, when he discussed the attack at his news conference Feb. 15.

Speaking of the invasion area, he said: "We expected the North Vietnamese to fight here. They have to fight here or give up the struggle to conquer South Vietnam, Cambodia, and to extend their influence . . . through other parts of Southeast Asia."

Nixon spoke of the action, which began little more than two weeks ago, as if its success were already assured, saying: "The success of this operation guarantees the continued program of troop withdrawal and gives the prospect of a greater troop withdrawal during the months ahead."

No high official has been willing to speculate on the record, however, about what the results of the attack would be if it were turned back without achieving its objective of cutting the supply trails and destroying area bases.

Robichaud Will Resign As N. B. Liberal Leader

FREDERICTON (CP) — Louis J. Robichaud, the fiery Acadian who served more than a decade as premier of New Brunswick, will step down this spring from the Liberal leadership he has held since 1958.

When he made the announcement following a Liberal caucus meeting Monday, he said he would remain until the end of the legislature session which opens March 2, then make way for a leader with "new ideas, new strategy, new approaches, a new image and renewed vigor."

He did not indicate whether he would retain the Kent legislature seat he has held since 1952 and declined to elaborate on his plans for the future.

His successor will be chosen at a leadership convention here this fall, but no date has yet been set.

Mr. Robichaud, 45, was elected premier in 1960 when he ousted the Progressive Conservative administration of Hugh John Flemming. He won twice more—in 1963 and 1967—before his government was defeated last October by the Conservatives under Richard Hatfield.

His years as leader and premier had been "challenging, dynamic and even hectic" and they added up to "a long time in terms of this generation," he said.

No obvious successor seemed apparent but observers speculated that barrister Robert J. Higgins, who served as both economic growth and municipal affairs minister under Mr. Robichaud, would be a likely contender.

Other names mentioned included former health minister L. Norbert Theriault and former education minister W. W. Meldrum.

Since October there has been speculation Mr. Robichaud might resign to accept either a judgeship or Senate appointment, but he ruled out both at a Liberal meeting Saturday in Sussex.

"May I say here," he said, "that I am not going to the Senate and I am not going to the bench."

Mr. Robichaud said when he reached the 10-year mark as premier last June that his greatest accomplishment was implementation in 1967 of Equal Opportunity, a broad municipal-reform program.

Under the controversial program, the province's 15 county councils were abolished and provision was made for six cities, 21 towns and 22 villages, each with a mayor and council.

Varied municipal taxation systems were scrapped and replaced with a uniform tax and grants system and the province took over sole responsibility for major services relating to people—health, welfare, justice and education.

Explosion Rips School At Ottawa

OTTAWA (CP) — An explosion ripped apart a west-end school this morning and firemen say only the early hour prevented what could have been a major catastrophe.

A fire, fed by a ruptured gas pipe, followed the 4 a.m. explosion which heavily damaged the three-year-old Saint Daniel separate school.

The school had all of the ground floor blown out in the front and the rear. Large gaping holes could be seen from the front of the school. Snowbanks in front were covered with glass, books, parts of wooden desks and bricks.

District fire chief Reho Miller said it was a lucky thing it was not 9 a.m. when the school would likely have been full of children.

Firemen from two stations battled the fire during a heavy snowstorm and crews from the gas company shut off the gas line which supplied fuel for the school.

No estimate of damage was available from school authorities.

White Paper Comes Under Fire Of MacNaughton, Tax Expert

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — A member of the Ontario cabinet and a private tax expert both attacked the federal government's white paper on tax reform in speeches Monday.

Provincial Treasurer Charles MacNaughton, in a speech read here by Revenue Minister John White, said Ottawa and the Ontario government are in significant disagreement about basic objectives of tax reform.

In a speech prepared for a joint meeting of the Rotary and Kinsmen clubs of London, Mr. MacNaughton said provincial attempts to influence the shape of the federal bill have been thwarted by what he termed the closeted approach of Ottawa.

W. A. Macdonald, a tax expert with a Toronto legal firm, told the Canadian Club in that city that adoption of the white paper would lead to "a more centrally government-controlled economy, a more foreign-controlled economy or a much more slowly growing economy."

Mr. Macdonald, a governor of the Canadian Tax Foundation, urged the federal government to find an alternative to the white paper through tax-reform studies commissioned by the Ontario government and by negotiating with other provinces that disagree with the paper's proposals.

"If Ottawa will not go along, then I think it is only a matter of a relatively short time before Ontario will have to do what Quebec has done . . . get out of shared-cost programs . . . then establish its own income tax system."

Mr. MacNaughton said the tax reform issue is crucial. It will determine whether the country remains federal or becomes a centralist state.

He said the new tax system also will have a bearing on whether the provinces will be able "to pursue their own priorities or whether they will become federal puppets."

Mr. MacNaughton outlined the main areas of disagreement between Ottawa and the province on tax reform:

—Integration of personal and corporation income taxes;

—The method of providing relief for low-income persons;

—Choice of tax credits or tax exemptions;

—Incentives for small business;

—The tax treatment of resource industries.

Tweed and District News

TWEED — Mark Lows of Cavan, Ontario, won the snowmobile in the Tweed Winter Carnival draw held recently. Mr. and Mrs. Lows did not have a snowmobile, but they do have a farm with plenty of space to operate the machine, and five children to enjoy it.

Bill Thomlison, Tweed, won the Labatt's Trophy for the most number of points at the snowmobile races held in Denbigh recently and the winner of the Ski-doo at the same carnival was Ralph Rosenblath of Denbigh.

Charles Blair, of Tweed radio staff attended the graduation exercises at Algonquin College in Perth, earlier this month. He was the recipient of the Leigh Instruments Industrial Award. This award was given to the most efficient student in the class.

Nature Preserve

ROME (AP) — The Italian government has officially proclaimed Monte Cristo a nature preserve, blocking development of the island in the Tyrrhenian Sea that gave its name to the novel by Alexandre Dumas.

Bobby Darin's Condition Good After Heart Surgery

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bobby Darin, 34-year-old singer, actor and songwriter, was in "very good" condition today after undergoing heart surgery several days ago, a hospital spokesman said.

The spokesman for Cedars of Lebanon Hospital could not disclose the exact nature of the operation but said it was not considered an emergency.

"It's a major operation—any heart procedure would be considered major surgery," the spokesman said.

Darin was admitted to hospital late last week. The spokesman said Darin had requested that details not be released.

Darin, who wrote such songs as Splish, Splash, and Dream Lover, has not worked in films lately but has been appearing in Las Vegas shows.

Government Convinced Profit Can Be in National Interest

OTTAWA (CP) — Expressing a firm conviction that the quest for profit often coincides with the national interest, the government Monday edged toward establishment of a national investment company that would try to put the belief into practice.

A bill setting up the Canada Development Corp., promised since 1963 and introduced in the Commons last month, drew blistering opposition criticism for what some called its socialistic tendencies and others branded as right-wing conservatism. The as right-wing conservatism.

Finance Minister E. J. Benson told the Commons the corporation will have certain standards of profitability and must not be expected to make unprofitable investments.

However, the national interest would be taken into account and while "the national interest and the profit motive are not always compatible . . . there is a broad area over which they are or can be in harmony."

The debate opened with a lengthy, complicated procedural hassle which did little more than clarify the views of the opposition parties.

The New Democrats argued that the bill only established another private corporation operating on the basis of profit-at-any-cost.

Some Conservatives and Creditistes described the bill as another step along the road to socialism. Both parties accused the government of favoring socialism over capitalism.

Mr. Benson said the corporation will be financed at first by government money but would end up as a private corporation to channel public and private funds into industrial growth programs.

The authorized capital would be 200 million common shares without par value and $1 billion worth of preferred shares. The initial offering of common shares to the public was expected to be at a price of about $5 per share. Only Canadians could be shareholders.

The government would hope to hold about 10 per cent of the voting shares when the corporation was fully operational, Mr. Benson said. The amount of voting shares held by any individual or group would be limited to three per cent.

Marcel Lambert (PC—Edmonton West) said the bill is so vague it raises serious doubts about how effective the corporation could be.

He said the government wanted the corporation to act primarily on the profit motive. But would it then be working in opposition to the department of regional economic expansion?

It was completely false, the Conservative finance critic argued, to say the CDC would help prevent foreign takeovers of Canadian businesses.

It was easy to imagine a Canadian company exaggerating a foreign bid, then screaming to the CDC to save "its Canadian soul."

Max Saltsman (NDP—Waterloo), his party's finance critic, moved the bill be dropped and replaced with one establishing a Crown corporation, instead of the CDC, to contribute to greater Canadian ownership and control of domestic industry.

The proposed Crown corporation, the motion says, would increase Canadian economic independence and also help in planning and development of regional industrialization. The motion will be voted on later.

Mr. Saltsman said there is an inherent contradiction between making a profit and pursuing the national interest.

Because of the contradiction, it would be impossible to get responsible men to run the CDC, Mr. Saltsman said. The real need was for a government-operated investment firm which would take risks turned down by the private sector.

Mr. Benson had told the Commons earlier that the CDC will contribute to greater Canadian ownership of domestic industry but it was "only one of the measures to promote greater ownership and control of our economy by Canadians."

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Some Headaches Caused by Allergy

If you asked what are the most common types of headaches I'd name tension and migraine. If you are subject to tension headaches you will find your rarely suffer from them on a day when the hands of the clock are not your enemy. Such headaches come only when you are subjected to unusual stresses in business or social relations.

As for migraine headaches, the real cause is not always known, but tension enter here, too. However, there is a kind of headache often overlooked: allergic headache due to taking some seemingly innocent foods such as eggs, orange juice, lobster, or other food to which the individual happens to be sensitive.

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I read in your newspaper column about the little boy who suffers with headaches. It sounds so much like my own case history.

As a child I used to have headaches severe enough to cause nausea and vomiting. These attacks might last for a day. Later in life, longer. Medicines would only relieve for awhile. The attacks would run their course until the next time.

I had heard somewhere that eggs sometimes might cause headache. So I stayed away from eggs and my headaches disappeared. Then I'd eat a piece of cake with egg in it, and I'd get an attack again. Now I have quit eggs for good and never have a headache.

I thought it might have been a coincidence, so I had my doctor take an allergy test. The result was 3 plus. He agrees that I should not eat eggs.

What I am suggesting is that the parents of the little boy with headaches consider the possibility of allergy. I feel sorry for the child. What a pity to let him go through life with headaches when elimination of some simple article in his diet may bring him relief.

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: This is the very first time I've disagreed with you after reading your columns for over 10 years. You advised that wives should nag their husbands to get them to a doctor for examination.

I'll tell you right off, I'm a wife. Please don't tell us to nag our mates, as we have enough naggers in this world already. I hate always to be finding fault.

I let members of my family do what they want whether it's right or wrong. If they want to die early and happy, at least it won't be my fault because I was a nagger. (I wish my family felt the same towards me.)

Comment: I'll nag just once more: the way to keep from becoming a widow prematurely is by cajoling (nagging) your husband to see a doctor in time.

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I am 57. Please tell me if I'm too old to have a "nose job." When we were younger and raising four children, we couldn't afford it. They have had a wonderful education and are married and gone. I can afford the operation now, if it isn't too late. I'd feel like a different person.

We are close to a large city where there must be some excellent plastic surgeons. The one who was considered the best around here was killed in an accident about a year ago. — Mrs. S.

Comment: I do not believe any reputable plastic surgeon would say you are too old for the operation. Just be sure you leave the choice of surgeon to a physician, rather than go shopping for one yourself.

Sydney J. Harris Says

Nobody Always Good Parent

The common phrase, "a good parent," can be a misleading one, because it tries to take in too much ground. There is practically no such thing as a good parent for all of a child's various ages and stages of life.

Some parents are at their best when the child is an infant; others operate most effectively in the toddler and pre-school range; still others make their finest contribution to older children, or teen-agers.

Temperamentally, all of us are more or less sympathetic to one age or another and can identify better or worse with any particular stage of growing up. It is the rare person who possesses the same capabilities along the whole spectrum of growing up, from infancy through adolescence.

A mother might be "a good parent from the time a baby is born until it is three, while it needs her protection and loving care; but the start of a child's independence might upset and alarm her, and she might then become ineffectual for a few years.

A father might be awkward and uncomfortable with a small child, but could turn into a superb parent when the child is old enough to be taught skills or taken on trips. Some parents feel easier with boys, and others with girls—and then only at certain ages or stages.

It is important, I think, for parents to understand and accept their own limitations in this regard, just as they must accept the child's limitations of temperament and talent. Otherwise, they will feel guilty and blame themselves for inadequacies that are not their fault.

If we know we are not particularly congenial to a certain age or stage of growing up, we will not try to force ourselves or pretend to ourselves (or to the child, who has an uncanny faculty for detecting emotional fraudulence.) We will simply do the best we can and wait for a period in the child's life when we can genuinely be more helpful. (Hoping, meanwhile, that the other parent can take up the slack at present.)

Much of the guilt of the modern parents comes from the misplaced feeling that he or she ought to be all things at all times to the child, which is manifestly absurd. In past ages, grandparents and uncle and aunts lived with the family, and provided different kinds of impetus or support; in our present "nuclear" family, too many roles are demanded of the two parents, which they cannot possibly fulfill.

Just as a child operates better at some stages than others, so do parents. Recognizing and accepting one's natural abilities and antipathies is surely the first step to sensible and realistic parenthood.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For February 24

Your Birthday today: You are in the midst of a period of re-evaluation or perhaps "crossroads" phase of your life in which your inner personal goals become more distinct, your sense of material values much sharper. Activities bringing no immediate results tend to be forced off your schedule, probably never to be resumed. Your intuitive direction toward healthy self-interest comes on stronger than ever. Today's natives admire efficiency and frequently manage very tightly organized personal lives which escape general notice.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Well meaning but somewhat irresponsible friends can create confusion for a while, but you sort things out quickly.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Brace yourself for a moment of hard news—some business contact may lapse.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Take the trouble to organize a full schedule despite the movement and bustle of the day.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Money and its management pose questions — for some around you, problems. This is no time to take on any extra expense.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Put a determined upbeat push on this morning, then settle for routine the rest of the day.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Wear bright clothes; be in a mood for luck and good news. By evening reflect on what you have learned.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Modesty isn't the public image to project now: speak up boldly where you have competence or want something.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): For once an early start is not advised. Watch for the other fellow's mistakes; stay clear.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): The challenge is to get something significant done. Short cuts actually save time for a change.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Your judgment is not at its best — the forest is all about you, but you see only bushes nearby.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Higher initiative, even though it requires extra effort is essential. You cannot depend on incomplete work in any area.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Nothing comes very easily today. Continue normal work efforts at your accustomed pace; expect no miracles.

Announce New Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids...and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

Among these case histories were a variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. Relief even occurred in cases of long standing, and most important of all, results were so thorough that this improvement was maintained over a period of many months.

This was accomplished with a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a principal cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

Immediate National Dental Program for Children Is Urged

OTTAWA (CP) — Only about one-third of the population's dental service requirements are being filled and dental health as a consequence is poor, says a special report to the federal government.

It proposes a national dental program for children as a step toward eventual dental care of the scope now given for medical care under the national medical care insurance program.

The report was tabled in the Commons Monday by Health Minister John Munro who said the recommendations will be studied.

A variety of ways of correcting the current serious shortage of dentists is put forward in the report, particularly through better training of dental auxiliaries such as dental assistants, dental hygienists, dental technicians and dental technologists.

The report was written by a committee set up in 1968 as a result of recommendations of the Hall royal commission on health services. The dental group was headed by chief Justice Dalton C. Wells of Ontario Supreme Court.

The report says an estimated 55 per cent of Canadians live in regions where they cannot get more than 35 per cent of the required services due to manpower shortages.

It suggests introduction of additional outlets for provision of services, now given mainly through private practice. Among those are school and hospital dental clinics, mobile clinics, and settings where teams of dentists and auxiliaries can given service.

Other recommendations:

—Immediate start of a national dental program for children involving all known methods of prevention, education and treatment, beginning at the youngest and adding new age groups yearly until all school-age children have been included.

—Extension of the program to the population as a whole after the children's program is fully functioning.

—Removal of all financial barriers to care for children in both public and private practice spheres of dentistry.

—Creation of a Canadian council on dental auxiliaries to deal with certification and accreditation of education and training institutions.

McKeough Gives Warning

Sewage System Subsidies Will Be Restricted

TORONTO (CP) — Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough said Monday the provincial government cannot afford to subsidize water and sewage services to all Ontario's small communities.

He told a pollution seminar at the three-day annual conference of the Ontario Good Roads Association that provincial aid for such services will have to be restricted to communities designated as growth areas.

Mr. McKeough said the action of the regional municipality of Ottawa-Carleton in drafting plans for $100 million regional sewage-treatment system was an example of strong local government acting on its own rather than asking the province for help.

The municipal affairs minister said small municipalities unable to finance sewage treatment facilities on their own could get them through regional government.

He also said the job of fighting pollution on the local level cannot "be done by small, poorly co-ordinated and financially-weak municipalities."

H. D. Paavila, manager of the Canadian Pulp and Paper Association's environmental service office, said a government crackdown on water pollution from pulp and paper mills would have disastrous effects on the industry.

Mr. Paavila said the estimated capital cost of treatment facilities for liquid wastes from the mills was "something between $650 million and $750 million."

George Kerr, Ontario minister of energy and resources management, said however there should be no delays in anti-pollution programs even among industries experiencing profit squeezes.

He said that in the long run the cost of neglecting pollution problems will be greater than the cost of early clean-up.

Mayor Garnet R. Newkirk of Chatham, president of the Ontario Municipal Association, said provincial, federal and municipal governments must work together to combat pollution.

U. S. General Shielded Vietnam Smuggler

WASHINGTON (AP) — A United States Army general received $1,000 monthly from the most notorious sales promoter in South Vietnam, shielded him from military investigators and permitted him to store smuggled goods in army warehouses, a U.S. Senate subcommittee was told Monday.

Senators investigating alleged corruption in the U.S. armed services' $6 billion post exchange, clubs and recreation activities were told retired Col. Earl F. Cole, 51, then a brigadier-general, used his influence as a well-placed staff officer in South Vietnam to protect free-wheeling U.S. entrepeneur William J. Crum.

The army gave no explanation last July when it removed Cole from command of the European post exchange system, reduced him to colonel and ordered him to retire.

In his testimony, Jack Bybee, former general manager for two of Crum's most lucrative business enterprises in South Vietnam, said Crum sent his military contacts, including Cole, to Hong Kong to pick up kickback money from a local financial institution.

Warned that the army's criminal investigations division was about to raid his Saigon headquarters searching for fraudulent military purchase forms and other evidence of wrongdoing, Crum turned for help to Cole, then deputy chief of staff for personnel and administration at Long Binh, Bybee said.

"Mr. Crum said Gen. Cole was costing him $1,000 a month and this was the sort of favor he could expect to ask of the general," Bybee testified.

BELLEVILLE FAMILY Y.M.C.A.

1893 — 77th ANNUAL REPORT — 1970

PRESIDENT'S REMARKS

Your Belleville Family Y.M.C.A.'s 77th year in operation has been an extremely busy one. 1970 was a year of examination by our Association of how our "Y" can best meet the needs of its members, of our community and society. With this in mind, the Board of Directors approved a 22 point "Action Plan" in April. Your Y.M.C.A. is pleased to announce 13 of these items have been completed, 6 have been locked into and are of a continuing nature and only three have yet to be undertaken.

This year's Annual Meeting will be asked to consider a review of the Constitution, new method of election of Board of Directors, and review of many major policies of our organization. One of the policies we revised new makes it possible for all prospective members to either purchase a membership on a short term basis for 3 months or make payment on a monthly basis. This certainly makes it possible for the "Y" to be within the financial possibility of all members of our community.

The "Y" family and community were shocked at the sudden passing of our General Secretary, late Mr. Bert Messacar, last July. In October Mr. Di Diamantides returned to pick up the reins of leadership after an absence of 3 years. His many friends and acquaintances were delighted with his return to Belleville.

Since last fall, several new programs have been underway. One which has been very successful has been the "under 8" kinder gym and swim program. The Informal Education programs have found interest for about 350 Quinte citizens.

Your Family Y.M.C.A. this past year has been pleased to serve the community in the following areas.

—Learn to Swim Classes for boys and girls - 150 participated.

—Attendance of 85 children of welfare recipients at summer Day Camp.

—Public swimming.

—Free membership to 25 Youth in the regular "Y" fall and winter program.

—Use of "Y" pool facilities for recreational and leadership training for mentally retarded youngsters, secondary school students, the Loyalist College.

—Scouts and Nurses from Belleville General Hospital.

—Use of meeting rooms to non-profit organizations of our community.

—Use of our grounds to the Belleville Recreation Department for organized sports activities.

Your Board of Directors has submitted a balanced budget for 1971. This has been possible due to expanded program opportunities, increased special services and greater use of lay leadership in our program.

With closer liaison with the United Community Services, Belleville Recreation Commission and other community groups, your Y.M.C.A. looks forward to being of greater service to our community in a summer youth program.

I am firmly convinced there is a strong need for the Family Y.M.C.A. in Belleville and sincerely hope the citizens of our community will continue to give us their support.

John S. Hayman,
President.

BELLEVILLE CITIZENS SERVE ON VOLUNTEER BOARDS

SUMMER PROGRAM

In addition to the regularly scheduled swim and physical education program of activities, summer was highlighted by the following events:

a—Day Camp (8 to 12 years): operated on five one-week sessions offering summer fun and learning of skills to about 300 children, 85 of whom were accepted free of charge, sent by the City's Welfare Department.

b—Kinder-Kamp (4 to 7 years): A new type of outdoor program for the Belleville area at which children were offered an excellent program of games, swimming instruction, handicrafts, and visiting historic and interesting sites.

c—Opus Teens — For the second straight summer the "Y" ran a successful job-finding service for teens. Volunteers coordinated the worthwhile project that found over sixty jobs for Belleville's otherwise unemployed teens.

d—Canoeing — The "Y" pool was the site for a short-term canoeing course in the Spring for boys and girls 12-18 years of age. Emphasis was on water safety and rescue.

Joint cooperation between the Belleville Y's Men's Club, City Recreation and the "Y" enabled some 30 youngsters from three school areas in the city to learn fundamentals of canoeing.

Two adventurous Youth Committee members, Don Carr and Leigh Westwell made an exciting ten day canoe trip to Montreal during the summer to visit "Man and His World". They helped put Belleville on the Map, as they received extensive newspaper, radio and TV coverage in Montreal.

Three "Weekend Wilderness Trips" were held in July by enthusiastic canoeists who braved the elements, tramped over uncleared portages and learned to cook over an open fire.

NEW "UNDER 8" PROGRAM —

A new program of challenge and basic motion skill development of movement and body awareness for children 2 to 8 years of age has been added to the "Y" program in the fall which has met with much success.

Depending on their age, children are divided into "Small Fry", "Kindergym", "Pre-School" and "Wee-Folk" and go through gym and swim program designed to develop co-ordination, balance, self-confidence and muscular strength.

PROGRAM

HEALTH AND FITNESS — In a time when more people suffer from "spectatoritis", the YMCA provided opportunities to boys, girls, men and women to be active and to acquire and maintain good health and physical fitness. Thousands of individuals have benefited by exercising at the "Y".

INFORMAL EDUCATION CLASSES — Learning skills for living were organized for adults that met with much success. Bridge and golf instruction proved to be the most popular. A more extensive new series for 1971 is being planned.

LADIES — An added attraction to the ladies program was a series of afternoon sessions at which 100 ladies learned to create their own unique wall plaques of scraps of iron; different kinds of fondue; wigs and wild flower arranging.

We'd like to take this space to tell you more about our gym and swim programs, our summer program, Summer Kinder-Camp and Day Camp and Canoe trips.

We'd like to tell you about our pre-school and elementary age Physical Education program as they apply to Jimmy or Suzy. We'd like to tell you how much they ran and jumped and swam and had fun and learned.

We'd also like to take this space to tell you about our oustanding Judo classes, the Ladies' and Men's Keep Fit classes, Life Saving classes, and the over 212 participants in only one series of Informal Education classes.

We'd like to explain all about our leader training program and how many people have given and continue to give leadership to the community of Belleville as a result of their 'Y' training. We could fill pages on how the 'Y' serves the community — BUT WE CAN'T! We just don't have the space — You should come and see for yourself.

India Likely to Quit Study of Arms Sales

Copter Sale Stirs Unrest

NEW DELHI (AP) — India is likely to withdraw from the eight-nation study group set up at last month's Commonwealth conference in Singapore as a protest against the British decision to sell Wasp helicopters to South Africa, informed sources said today.

The British decision has made it "very difficult for any of us to continue in the study group or to have anything to do with it," these same highly placed sources said.

The Indian foreign ministry warned in a statement last Monday that any British decision to sell arms to South Africa before the study group completed its work would have "serious implications for the very existence of the Commonwealth."

A foreign ministry spokesman said Friday that the government was "in touch with all parties concerned" and had "taken note" of the reported Nigerian decision to quit the study group.

Informed sources would not rule out the possibility of joint action being taken by some of the members to quit the study group together as a mass protest.

The group was set up to study Britain's contention that the Soviet naval buildup was threatening Western maritime trade routes in the South Atlantic and the Indian oceans.

Besides India and Nigeria, the other members are Britain, Canada, Australia, Malaysia, Kenya and Jamaica.

My Lai Men, Women or Children Were All Enemies to Lt. Calley

FORT BENNING, Ga. (CP) — Men, women, children. They were all the enemy to Lieut. William Calley at My Lai, he said—the people he'd been ordered to destroy.

"I didn't discriminate between individuals in the village, sir," he testified Tuesday at his murder trial.

Calley appeared edgy and worried-looking at the start of cross-examination, which continues today.

But the answers were crisp and capped with military "sir" as prosecutor Aubrey Daniel, an army captain, led him through the day nearly three years ago, on which the army charges Calley murdered 102 villagers with premeditation.

Calley told how the 27 men in his platoon started through the village with their guns blazing.

"That was my job on that day. That was the mission I was given. I did not sit down and think in terms of them as women and children. They were all classified the same, and that was the classification that we dealt with, just as enemy soldiers."

"I felt then and I still do that I acted as I was directed, and I carried out the orders that I was given, and I do not feel wrong in doing so, sir," Calley said.

The defence contends that Calley acted under orders from his commanding officer, Capt. Ernest Medina, and suffered from "diminished mental capacity" caused by combat stress which prevented him evaluating whether the orders were legal.

The prosecution contends that at least 70 persons, mostly old men, women and children, were killed in a ditch by Calley and other members of his platoon.

Calley said five or six members of his platoon joined him in shooting the civilians in the ditch.

Calley also denied he had anything to do with the death of 30 other civilians who were mowed down in another part of the village. He denied prosecution charges that he killed an infant and a monk.

He said Medina told him "that everybody in that area would be the enemy and everyone there would be destroyed, all enemies would be destroyed."

Calley said the company was credited with killing 250 enemy soldiers at My Lai. A subsequent investigation showed that all the dead were civilians.

Calley testified that army commanders placed great emphasis on reporting high enemy casualties. "Everybody wanted their companies to have the highest body count," Calley testified.

Hanoi Leader Says Country in Danger

SAIGON (CP) — While U.S. planes continued the bombing of North Vietnam today, a Hanoi military leader was quoted as saying that recent moves by the United States in Indochina had placed the security of his country in great danger.

The latest U.S. raids on the North were a follow-up to 50 strikes along the Laotian border in North Vietnamese territory during the weekend.

Tuesday night and early today, two F-105 Thunderchief fighter-bombers fired three air-to-ground missiles southeast of the Ben Karai pass in North Vietnam, near an infiltration route from the North. A third plane attacked radar-controlled anti-aircraft sites in the area.

The North Vietnam news agency reported that Defence Minister Gen. Vo Nguyen Giap told a Soviet embassy reception in Hanoi Tuesday night that U.S. and South Vietnamese troops had launched a large-scale invasion of southern Laos in co-ordination with Laotian government and Thai forces.

"In massing such a big force just south of the 17th parallel, the U.S. also plots against the Democratic Republic of North Vietnam," he said.

On the ground, South Vietnamese troops formerly commanded by Lt.-Gen. Do Cao Tri—killed Tuesday when his helicopter crashed near the Cambodian border—were attacked near Kandol Chrum in their drive into Cambodia. A spokesman said the government casualties were not known but 15 Viet Cong were killed.

The U.S. command said six Americans died and 11 were wounded when Viet Cong penetrated a camp perimeter and destroyed a gasoline dump at a position in Tay Ninh province near the Cambodian border.

Three Banks Cut Rate on Loans

TORONTO (CP) — Canada's chartered banks reacted quickly today to the lowered bank rate by cutting the interest rate charged on loans.

The Bank of Nova Scotia, the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce and the Royal Bank all announced reductions in their prime rate to 6½ per cent from seven per cent.

The Royal also announced reductions in mortgage rates—one half of one per cent to 8¾ per cent for National Housing Act mortgages and one half of one per cent to 9¼ per cent for conventional mortgages.

Committee Appears Scuttled

OTTAWA (CP) — Withdrawal of Nigeria from the eight-nation Commonwealth committee on maritime defence in the Indian and South Atlantic oceans likely will scuttle the committee before it can even meet, informed sources here said today.

Canada is a member of the committee, established at last month's Commonwealth prime ministers' conference in Singapore as a delaying tactic on the issue of British arms for South Africa.

The tactic worked for only one month and while Arnold Smith of Canada, Commonwealth secretary-general, was still trying to arrange the committee's first meeting, Britain announced earlier this week it will sell military helicopters to South Africa.

Mr. Smith is in Ottawa for a meeting with External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp. He will

NATO Admiral Seeks More Ships, Aircraft

BRUSSELS (Reuter) — The West needs more ships, more aircraft and more submarines to match a steadily growing military buildup by the Soviet Union and its Warsaw pact allies, says a NATO military officer.

Admiral Sir Nigel Henderson, chairman of NATO's military committee, said in an interview the West's greatest need is to maintain its anti-submarine warfare capability.

The military committee is the senior military authority in the 15-nation North Atlantic Treaty Organization. Sir Nigel, a British officer, retires as chairman April 5.

Sir Nigel said there is a trend among the Western powers not to replace ships when they ran out of commission. The Soviet navy on the other hand contains a relatively greater number of newer ships in a fleet which has been largely built up during the last 20 years.

The NATO officer said that the West has naval superiority in the Mediterranean largely because it has better air cover for its ships, provided from on-shore bases and from aircraft carriers.

But as the Mediterranean is such a narrow sea, a Russian foothold in Libya and possibly in Algeria would seriously jeopardize the Western alliance's edge over the strongly increased Russian fleet.

The London-based Institute for Strategic Studies lists the Soviet Union and its Warsaw pact partners as sharing 377 submarines between them, of which 80 are nuclear-powered.

Admiral Henderson said the Russians are "capable of building between 10 and 14 new submarines every year, and the evidence is that they are doing this."

The 15 countries belonging to NATO are listed as sharing 262 submarines between them — 92 of them nuclear-powered.

Montreal Snow Storm Slows Progress at Trial of Paul Rose

MONTREAL (CP) — A steady stream of witnesses passed through Court of Queen's Bench Tuesday at the trial of Paul Rose as Prosecutor Jacques Ducros tried to establish the source of eight ransom messages received last October from the kidnappers of Pierre Laporte.

The long and tedious process was hampered by the absence of a Crown prosecutor, a court clerk, a stenographer and five witnesses because of a severe snowstorm which snarled transportation in the city.

Tuesday's session of the trial was delayed until nearly 3 p.m. by the storm.

Mr. Justice Marcel Nichols said he understood the circumstances which caused the delay "but I would urge the lawyers and the jurors and anyone else involved in the case to do their utmost to make sure we can proceed with some speed."

The judge reported that several members of the jury have come down with colds and he swore in Dr. Eugene Fournier, of the Quebec Provincial Police, to act as their medical adviser until the end of the trial.

The 12 jurors are being held incommunicado during the trial and are allowed to phone their homes and offices only once a day.

Proceedings Tuesday revolved around the ransom messages from Mr. Laporte's kidnappers.

During the week of Oct. 10-17, while the late Quebec labor minister was being held by his terrorist captors, Montreal radio stations received anonymous telephone tips that "communiques" had been planted in such places as litter boxes and telephone booths.

Some of the messages, signed by the terrorist Front de Liberation du Quebec, were accompanied by hand-written letters from Mr. Laporte, who was strangled by his captors Oct. 17.

Mr. Ducros questioned witnesses Tuesday in an attempt to establish where each ransom message was found and whose hands it passed through before reaching the courtroom.

At the opening of Tuesday's session, two police witnesses testified they had given Rose a copy of the court record of Monday's proceedings and had shown him the exhibits received in evidence that day.

The accused had said he had no message to relay to the court. Rose, a 210-pound former teacher, has been banished from the courtroom since Feb. 8 when he was expelled for disrupting proceedings. He is conducting his own defence.

Mr. Justice Nichols has said Rose will be readmitted if he apologizes and promises to mend his ways.

Rose is one of four men accused of abducting and strangling Mr. Laporte. The others—Jacques Rose, 23, brother of Paul, Francis Simard, 23, and Bernard Lortie, 19—are to stand trial at the spring assizes which open in March.

'Super-teachers' Being Phased Out by Hastings County Board

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

Consultants, the super-teachers who show others how to improve their classroom skills, have had their day in Hastings county.

Trustees voted them out at the regular board meeting Monday night, because their services are no longer necessary.

Doing away with consultants was part of an administrative re-organization that will put increasing emphasis on self-sufficient and self-reliant teachers and principals.

The 10 teachers who used to travel around the county advising on improved teaching methods will return to the classroom at a saving of $15,000 to the board in their transportation expenses.

The only remaining central staff at the consultant level will be those connected with special education, psychological services, outdoor education and instructional media.

However, eight "generalist teachers" will be appointed to act as "educational assistants" to the associate school groups in the county.

An associate school group consists of a secondary school and its feeder elementary schools, and is headed by a superintendent or an associate superintendent.

There are eight associate school groups in the county centred around the eight secondary schools — Trenton, Moira, Quinte, Centennial, Bayside, BCI, North Hastings and Centre Hastings.

One educational assistant will be chosen by each superintendent to serve for a period of about two years. At the end of that time he or she will return to the classroom.

The educational assistant for an associate school group will be chosen by the superintendent in charge on the basis of the greatest academic need within his associate school group.

"For instance," said director of education Eric Runacres, "if the math program in an ASG needs improvement, the superintendent will find a teacher who is a good leader to work on math for a year or two. Then that teacher goes back to the classroom and another teacher is picked to work on another weak area."

The educational assistants will be given the same responsibility allowance that consultants received, in addition to the salaries for their categories. Allowances are $1,400 a year for teachers without degrees and $2,000 for those with degrees.

The present 10 consultants, who operate on the elementary school level, specialize in primary reading, or physical education, guidance, music, art and oral French.

Next September, when the educational assistants are appointed, one will be assigned to live in North Hastings "to resolve a problem of service to the north" — the need for resident leadership.

"We have concluded, through two years of experience, that the inherited academic consultants' role is not proving to be as productive as it must be," said Mr. Runacres in his report to the board on consultants.

"We have never been satisfied philosophically with the idea of 'travelling teachers' (consultants attempting to travel throughout our large county," his report read. "Not only is this practice uneconomical in terms of travel — expenses and wasted time — it fails to place the emphasis within the schools, a professed goal of this board."

Later, Mr. Runacres said the management decision to eliminate consultants was another step toward the board's goal of self-sufficient "families of schools" — a secondary school and the elementary schools that send their graduates on to it.

"I'm not suggesting the incumbent consultants were not adequate," he said. "They played a big role when there were a large number of unqualified teachers and teachers with limited backgrounds in our system."

But, the director indicated, the situation has now changed. With a surplus of elementary school teachers the calibre of staff has risen, and professional, in-service development programs are now in full swing under the sponsorship of the county board.

If the consultant positions were to remain in the county system, he said, super-teachers would eventually have to be appointed for every subject, or else teachers could complain that some disciplines were being given more emphasis and importance than others.

"This would result in a proliferation of supportive staff — a raft of people running around helping teachers who should be developing the capacity to stand alone," said Mr. Runacres.

Reports from other centres notably Toronto, indicate that exactly the same situation has developed there.

This week, in a speech in Toronto, trustee Barry Lowes, a former Metro board of education chairman, recommended a cut-back in consultants as a means of economizing on Toronto board operations.

Reports from the recent leadership convention indicate that Mr Lowes, a Progressive Conservative candidate for the provincial riding of York-Forest Hill, may be in the running to take over Premier-designate William Davis' education portfolio.

Another advantage of eliminating the consultants in elementary teaching and instituting the positions of educational assistants is the effect the new organization is expected to have on integrating elementary and secondary schools.

The ideal person for an educational assistant's post is a teacher who has taught in both elementary and secondary schools, Mr. Runacres indicated. But at the moment, the greatest need in the county is assistance at the elementary school level.

"They have the highest teacher - pupil ratio and the fewest resources," he said.

The Associate School Group concept now in operation is designed to make each "family of schools" as autonomous as possible.

It seeks to involve principals, staffs and the community in the education of the children of the area.

An advisory committee of interested parents and ratepayers has been set up for each ASG in the county.

Members meet with principals and teachers to make their opinions and desires on education known.

Curriculum committees in each subject have been set up, with members comprising the department heads in that subject in the secondary school and specialist teachers from the elementary schools. This acts to co-ordinate the handling of each subject and insures that elementary school teachers adequately prepare their students for the demands of secondary schools. At the same time it is supposed to acquaint secondary school teachers with some of the problems of imparting basic skills to young children in the early years of their schooling.

A "cabinet of principals" provides a forum where the school leaders can thresh out common problems.

"The task of detached teachers, including myself, is to work themselves out of their jobs," says Mr. Runacres.

If, eventually, Associated School Groups were operating effectively and autonomously in several counties, the county units of school administration could be done away with. The ASGs could be loosely drawn together under a regional administration devoted chiefly to business affairs and a flexible system of general academic guidance.

Mine Is Better Than Yours

These two teachers, John Cowie on the left and Oscar Bonin, right, were successful contestants in a baking contest that was held at Moira Secondary School yesterday. The contest was arranged to raise money for a trip to Ottawa for grade 9 and 10 students. Mr. Bonin won the competition for the best tasting cake and Mr. Cowie for the pie with the best appearance. The cake sale that followed the competition raised $30 to go toward the renting of a school bus for the day.

Males Sweep Cooking Honors

Grade 9 and 10 students of Moira Secondary School have started on an ambitious project of selling homemade cakes and pastries to raise money to finance a trip to Ottawa.

Tours of the Parliament Buildings and an advertising display will be on the agenda for the students in their one-day trip to the nation's capital.

A variety of projects have been undertaken in an effort to raise the needed money. The ideas used were a car wash, fudge sales and a contest in baking cakes and pies.

The bake sale, the most ambitious of the projects, was open to anyone who could cook.

The egos of some of the girls in the contest were bruised a little as they watched two male classmates and two male teachers walk away with top honors in both the pie and cake categories.

The men made a clean sweep of the best tasting cake competition as Oscar Bonin, a drafting teacher in the school, won first place honors and his runnerup was a grade 10 boy, Randy Suly.

John Cowie, a chemistry teacher at the school, won the competition for the best looking pie.

Stephen Jose, a second year student at the school, won the honors for having made the best tasting pie.

Oscar Bonin made the remark that this string of victories is the first step for men's lib.

A collaboration of Lori Edey and Jean Kunetsky, both grade 10 girls, won the hotly contested prize for the cake with the best appearance.

Runner up in this category was another collaboration of two girls: Terry Green and Daphne Brant, both of grade 9.

Runner up to Mr. Cowie, in the contest for the best looking pie was a grade 10 girl, Esther Brant.

Phillis Parks was the runnerup in the category of the best tasting pie.

So far the total earnings of the various projects has not been accurately determined. The auction that was held after the cakes and pies had been judged created a profit of thirty dollars.

All proceeds combined, the total should be in the range of seventy dollars.

With this, the students are halfway to Ottawa.

Book's Authority To Govern Board

The Hastings and Prince Edward county separate school board has embarked on a program of drawing up policies and plans to govern its operations.

Paul Fleming is chairman of the policy committee and members are Zdenek Kvarda and Joseph Chapelle.

Last night at the board's regular monthly meeting, Mr. Fleming succeeded in having his committee's first recommendation adopted.

Trustees decided to accept a book on parliamentary procedure as their guide to operations until the policy committee has time to prepare a complete code for guidance of trustees.

"If this board doesn't find a method of handling its meetings in a short, efficient manner, business will never get accomplished," Mr. Fleming said in defence of his recommendation.

However, Rev. Louis Casartelli issued a caution.

"The Toronto separate school board has had six written policies in the past two years," he commented.

Although some trustees urged a slow and cautious approach to drawing up formal policies to govern board procedures, the committee members disagreed.

Mr. Kvarda said it would take about three months to write the policies and "we can't wait for three months to develop a policy without a parliamentary authority in the meantime".

Trustees finally voted in favor of adopting the book of procedure recommended by Mr. Fleming and Mr. Kvarda and authorized the business administrator to buy a copy for each of the 14 trustees. Cost was estimated at about $3 a copy.

Chief Requests Firefighting Improvements

TRENTON (Staff) — In a report on the condition of the town fire department received by council here Monday Chief Cecil Ellis gave a series of recommendations he said are "essential for the continued efficient operation of the department and the protection of Trenton's citizens.

Fearing that in the near future "erosion could effect the foundation of" the newly-built fire station, Chief Ellis suggests a retaining wall be placed at the rear of the building.

He explains that boat traffic has washed away about "five or ten feet of fill that was placed there when the station was built."

Chief Ellis also requests the strength of the force be increased so that three men are working each shift. During holidays and on the night shift through the year only two firemen are on duty.

"In the case of a fire, one man must respond to this call alone . . . . On most calls during the day we only have one or two volunteers responding, as most of the volunteers are working and can only get time off for a major fire," he said.

The fire department's rescue boat is also being operated by one man, Mr. Ellis reports, explaining that "this man must do the impossible, operate the boat and effect a rescue at the same time."

He says the department's boat has saved 20 lives in three years but warns "the time will come when we are not going to be 100 per cent successful".

"I hope that if we fail in the saving of a life that our department will not be held responsible or unjustly criticized," he added.

Chief Ellis also asks that a walkie - talkie radio be purchased for use on the boat so that if a doctor or ambulance is required "we could have one at the dock when he returns.

"Most important is that this boat responds regardless of how rough the river or bay is, and if the man should get into trouble and require assistance we have no way of knowing," he contends.

A new generator to operate smoke ejectors and flood lights is also needed by the department, the report says. "Our generator is used at the hospital as an emergency source of power when their generator is out of service."

In his report, Chief Ellis asks that a serviceman be brought in to check over the department's firefighting equipment.

He mentions that the newest pumper is seven years old and has never been checked and the other two have not been checked in more than 10 years.

IN MEMORIAM

HIBBARD — In loving memory of a dear mother, Blanche, who passed away February 24, 1968.

Gone, dear Mom, gone forever,
How we miss your smiling face,
But you left us to remember,
None on earth can take your place.
A happy home we once enjoyed,
How sweet the memory still,
But death has left a loneliness,
The world can never fill.

—Sadly missed by daughter Bonnie, son-in-law Denis and grandchildren.

Committee Canteens Profitable

Staff-operated canteens at the Belleville Arena and at the Ben Bleecker Auditorium both showed a profit last year.

Last week city council was told that the Recreation-Arena-Committee-operated canteen at the Belleville Arena showed a net profit of $4,800 to the end of December.

Yesterday members of the Recreation - Arena Committee were given an audited statement for the operation of the canteen at the Ben Bleecker Auditorium showing net profit for the seven-month period at $562.

Gross sales at the Bleecker Auditorium canteen were $2,418, from which $1,231 in sales costs and $624 in other expenditures were deducted leaving the $562 balance.

UIC Impost Is Opposed

School teachers may soon be required to pay unemployment insurance if changes in the Unemployment Insurance Act go through.

Last night the Hastings and Prince Edward separate school board went on record as opposing the change and will notify the proper authorities of their decision by letter.

Teachers are opposed to paying the premiums, and the board received a letter to that effect from the Ontario Teachers' Federation asking support for their stand.

Trustees were opposed as soon as they learned that paying the board's share of teachers' premiums would cost $10,000.

But Rev. Louis Casartelli asked trustees to consider the other side of the argument.

"What other recourse than Unemployment Insurance would teachers have if they were let go and no boards were hiring because of a surplus of teachers?" he asked. "A teacher surplus is developing across Ontario and some teachers may find themselves unemployed."

John Granville, a teacher at Prince Edward Collegiate in Picton told his fellow trustees that "it is almost impossible for a teacher to collect" if he becomes unemployed.

Because of this, he said, not one teacher at his school was in favor of paying unemployment insurance.

"It's just a gimmick to raise funds," he said.

Mr. Granville urged trustees to support the Teachers' Federation in its stand against unemployment insurance saying it would be a gesture in the interest of good board-staff relations.

Pane Unbroken in Cave-in

Alderman Gerald Joyce and Bob Hughes, demolition contractor, found this unbroken window pane lying in the snow in front of the local realtor's storage shed behind 68 Dundas Street East. The shed, valued at approximately $1,000 storage value, collapsed under the weight of more than two feet of snow at 11 p.m. last night. A small workshop, a couple of old cars and a supply of paint, together with summer lawn furniture, were contained in the completely deflated building. "It's a good thing I didn't decide to store my snowmobile in there," commented Mr. Joyce. He does not plan to rebuild.

Rotary Music Festival Opens

The third annual Rotary Music Festival, sponsored by the Belleville Rotary Club, got underway on two fronts this morning — at Belleville Collegiate and in the auditorium at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

The competitions, featuring both instrumental and vocal numbers continue all day Wednesday and Thursday with a Festival of Stars to be held Friday evening at Centennial Secondary School auditorium.

In general, instrumental competitions are being held at Belleville Collegiate, while the vocal numbers featuring solos, small groups, choirs and folk singers, will be heard at St. Andrew's.

Adjudicators for the festival are Kenneth Van Barthold, who has had a distinguished career in many branches of music, and is currently part time Head of Music at the City Literary Institute in London, England. Mr. Barthold, who recently won national acclaim for television appearances in documentaries on Chopin, Schumann and Rachmaninoff, is acting as adjudicator for instrumental numbers at Belleville Collegiate.

Adjudicator for the vocal numbers at St. Andrew's Church is Trevor Anthony, FR, AM, who won the bass competition at the National Eisteddfod of Wales at the age of 21. He has had long association with Sir Thomas Becham, singing opera and oratorios with him all over the world.

The two adjudicators will choose the numbers to be heard at Friday's Festival of Stars.

Committee Discusses Student Employment

Belleville city council will be asked to give budget consideration this year to allow for a possible make-work program to provide summer jobs for city students.

This is the proposal of the city recreation - arena committee which yesterday authorized its chairman Alderman Donald Soutter to make the request to council.

The proposal would be to find jobs for suudents through city public works and in the city parks system.

At the same time, committee member Alderman Mrs. Robin Jeffrey will contact county welfare administrator Reginald Tucker and Isidore Cooperman, United Community Services director in order to co-ordinate their thoughts on summer employment for students.

Discussion by recreation committee members on summer employment for students was a follow-up of an earlier meeting on Feb. 11 attended by the United Community Services director and representatives from Canada Manpower, Hastings county board of education and the county welfare director.

Under discussion at the earlier meeting was the number of city students who might be looking for jobs next summer and possible areas where employment might be provided.

An incomplete school survey showed that approximately 490 boys and 407 girls would be looking for summer employment.

Possible provision of an overnight hostel for transient youth is also under consideration.

Bata Workers To Hear Offer

BATAWA (Staff) — The 800 members of three area locals of the Boot and Shoe Workers Union will vote tomorrow on a new contract offer from Bata Shoe Company.

Terms of the agreement proposal will be revealed to members at a special meeting to be held in the Frankford Legion Hall tonight at 7:30.

A union negotiating team representing Frankford, Campbellford, and Picton locals arrived at tentative agreement with a Bata management board Monday and a was signed.

Matters of negotiation have included wages, shift premiums, seniority provisions and holiday allotments. The contract will be retroactive to October, 1970, when the last one terminated.

Trend to Regionalism Discussed by Potter

TRENTON (Staff) — At a meeting here last night sponsored by King St. United Church, Dr. Richard Potter, MPP Quinte, discussed the regionalism trend and its application in the Quinte area.

Planning and provision for water services are already being dealt with on a regional basis by boards comprising representatives of various Quinte municipalities, he said.

However, he mentioned that planning in the long run may be better handled on a province-wide basis.

Dr. Potter said attention might be directed eventually to the establishment of area assistance for garbage collection, police protection and even rapid transit.

However, he added that, like premier-elect William Davis, he does not support the idea of imposing regional government — instead it should be a decision for municipalities themselves.

If the regional government trend is to continue locally, Dr. Potter indicated it should not be at the expense of abolishing existing government fabric.

"You still have to have your local governments," he said.

He said he sees merit in the proposals made by Robert Welch at the recent party leadership convention in Toronto that industrial growth be shifted to marginal lands in the province, away from prime agricultural and recreational areas.

Under present circumstances, he explained, municipalities need the tax base provided by industrial development, contending that "we have to find a way to giving financial aid to municipalities so they won't have to bring in industries that will cause pollution".

The adequate financing of municipalities is a big problem, he said, mentioning that the Ontario Economic Council in a study paper has already reached the conclusion it is impossible to expect local government to fully finance itself from land taxes.

Fighting pollution will be an increasing concern in this area, he said, pledging that "we are going to be able to swim in our waters again".

Whatever course is taken in local government systems, the future of the Quinte area is sound. Dr. Potter said that in the last three years alone, $20 million had been invested locally and more than 1,500 new jobs created.

Wheat and Chaff

Through the immediacy of modern communications and the latter-day phenomenon of participatory democracy, Parliament and the affairs of our time are more than ever the concern of everyone. But what we see and hear makes it more and more imperative nowadays that we exercise good judgment and bend a discriminating ear to sift the wheat from the chaff.

And what chaff there is. The hypocrisy and the posturing can be painful. Britain has decided to sell . . . what is it, less than half a dozen helicopters to South Africa and Ottawa is up in arms, as if such a sale would have some profound, adverse, effect on Commonwealth relations, offending black Africa and all that sort of thing. Yet South Africa is Canada's fourth largest customer for manufactured goods, taking some $100 million's worth last year. In addition Canada trades extensively with the Communist world.

Then there is the continual baiting of the Prime Minister over what are little more than trifles. So Mr. Trudeau mouthed something which he has dismissed as "fuddle-duddle," but like the "Just Society" the Opposition is ensuring that the observation will go down in Canadian history and become part of our political folklore, while all the while Mr. Stanfield and a few others persist in attributing other words to the Prime Minister which he says, were never uttered.

However, Messrs Alexander and Lundrigan, PC members for Hamilton West and Gander-Twillingate respectively, insist that Mr. Trudeau mouthed certain words. "Fuddle-duddle," says Mr. Trudeau.

Good debater that he is, the Prime Minister omitted to give the answer that would have best countered his tormenters: Honi Soit Qui Mal Y Pense.

The House may be forgiven for its moments of mock levity, but when it, and some sections of the media, turn it into a kind of kangaroo court, or a trial of morals, then we realize that members are merely playing politics and that the serious business of the country is being sidetracked.

Divided They Stand

We have said it before — and now we see Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey coming up with the same thought. "There are a lot of economists and many schools of thought," Mr. Mackasey said in Vancouver recently.

The Minister was saying he thought the provinces could have shown more cooperation with Ottawa in fighting inflation and that they, as well as organized labor, have been responsible for inflationary wage settlements leading to unemployment. At the same time he agreed there has got to be a better method of combating inflation "than putting people out of work."

What then is the answer? Cutting taxes, as the Opposition suggests, would cost the Government money it needs to finance its projects. The Opposition says the employment thus created would compensate for this. And so the argument goes on — and the economists, as Mr. Mackasey says, are divided. The trouble is, they always have been, and that is one reason the unemployment situation is worse than it has been for years.

Music Festival

The third annual Rotary Festival is under way today. St. Andrews Presbyterian Church and Belleville Collegiate are the two locations, with mainly vocal events at the former and instrumental at BCI. The Festival is a highlight of the winter season here and we can look forward to some good compotition. For the young people it is a unique opportunity to show the fruits of their musical training, culminating with the Festival of Stars at Centennial on Friday night.

Imports From Afar

As everyone knows trade with potentially mortal enemies and with countries whose policies are at odds with our own is one of the paradoxes of life. The Communist world, we note increasingly, is featuring quite prominently among Canadian imports. Here are some examples from our own experience: items of clothing and bedding from Poland and Romania, gloves from Czechoslovakia — and a new discovery in recent days, jams from a firm in Sofia, capital of Bulgaria.

A Little Help From...

A letter on this page today explains one startling aspect of the subsidization thing in society today. Of course Belleville alone will not have to come up with such a huge sum of money for the Spadina Expressway, but it will be a contributor, along with the rest of Ontario. Or rather its citizens will contribute, through taxation, direct and indirect.

Jap Textile Competition Threatens Free Trade Policy

By ROD CURRIE

WASHINGTON (CP) — Devious though the connection may seem, one of the best things that could happen in United States-Canada trade relations in the approaching Capitol Hill battle would be for Japan to knuckle under to American pressure on textile imports.

For it is textiles, and to a lesser extent Japanese steel, that is the cork in the bottle, behind which is building up a head of congressional steam for the renewed debate over trade legislation.

On the table will be a virtual carbon copy of the sweeping trade legislation talked to death in the last Congress.

Again it is being presented by Chairman Wilbur Mills (Dem. Ark.) of the House ways and means committee, author of the bill that passed the last House of Representatives but was stalled in the Senate until time ran out on it.

Critics charge it is the most protectionist trade measure ever offered since the disastrous Smoot-Hawley Act of 1920, a restrictionist bill that many blame as the forerunner to the great Depression. But one reason opponents are not as emotional about the bill this time is that Mills, and President Nixon, seem less enthusiastic about the legislation than they were a year ago.

Still, among the things that could change the country's mood is the Japanese situation. Continued unemployment, particularly in the already hard-hit shoe-making, cotton-growing, steel-processing areas, could revive public support for harsh import restrictions.

If so, and the Japanese continue stubborn, the result could eventually be broad support to protectionist legislation in general and new hope for Mills' bill, which includes a number of specifics distasteful to Ottawa.

Nixon has always been pretty much of a free-trader and the Mills bill in total is far too restrictive for his taste. Indeed, he opposed much of it. But the White House sees the bill as a useful bargaining weapon in its so-far-unsuccessful effort to get the Japanese to accept "voluntary" textile quotas.

If the Japanese don't soften their stance, it may be that the administration will consider the bill as a weapon to be fired, not simply brandished.

From Canada's point of view, the bill is severely critical of the operation of the Canada-U.S. auto pact and urges that Nixon either renegotiate better terms for the U.S. or exercise his authority to quit the pact. Either country may terminate with one year's notice.

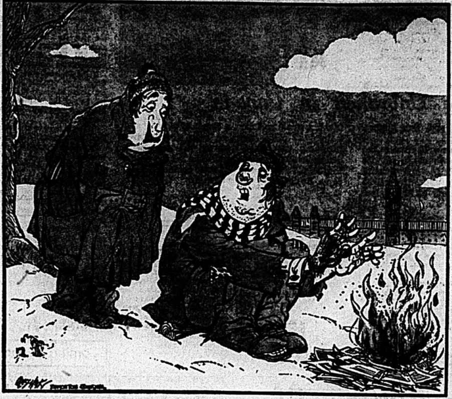
Also, the bill included provision for an animal known as DISC—domestic international sales corporations. Any firm qualifying as a DISC, by virtue of the fact most of its business is for the export trade, would get substantial tax benefits. The idea is that U.S. firms would be encouraged to stay at home and manufacture for the export market rather than open subsidiaries in Canada and other countries.

Another dangerous element from the point of view of Canada and other trading partners is a sort of triggering mechanism that would slap import quotas on a whole list of goods once they reach a certain level.

Passage of the bill would represent a turnabout in U.S. policy that for 35 years has been increasingly toward freer trade.

In essence, the argument is that if the U.S. can persuade the Japanese to hold off on textiles, all well and good. If not, and the government is forced to resort to quotas, it will open a whole Pandora's Box of demands from other industries seeking similar protection.

As for now, the U.S.-Japanese textile talks are frozen solid. Heat generated when the trade debate opens may have a thawing effect.



"Found them in a trash can . . . Some old speeches on the Just Society!"

Another Publishing Firm In Financial Difficulties

Peterborough Examiner

"Even my detractors would find it hard to deny that just 10 years ago conventional wisdom held that Canada was an underdeveloped country . . . that foreign capital was needed to supplement domestic savings for economic growth . . . and that the potential political implications were not serious, because the major lender was the U.S., our friendly cousins to the south." So said Stanley J. Randall, minister of trade and development for Ontario, to the Rotary Club of Toronto last week.

"Today," the minister went on, "the conventional wisdom preached by some economic nationalists holds that the U.S. is a racist and imperialist nation bent on subverting Canada by controlling its economy . . . that U.S. corporations are being used as instruments of U.S. imperialism . . . and that Canada is a developed country that doesn't need foreign capital."

Mr. Randall spoke these words roughly 24 hours after one of Canada's most ardent economic nationalists, Jack McClelland, announced that his company, McClelland and Stewart Ltd., one of the country's best known publishers, was in bad financial shape and would have to be sold—perhaps to foreigners, if Canadian investors could not be found.

Publisher McClelland's announcement came as quite a shock to many people, partly because McClelland's name has, during the past years, become synonymous with Canadian publishing and partly because Mr. McClelland had built up quite a reputation as a Canadian nationalist, economic and otherwise.

Only last fall, when Ryerson Press was sold to American interests, Jack McClelland stated that there were no circumstances under which his company would be sold to U.S. interests and that "I would go bankrupt first."

The man who was a founding member of the Committee for an Independent Canada was forced to announce that the company was in debt to the tune of about $2 million and that he would try to "keep on operating on a painful basis, and if that doesn't work it will have to go foreign."

Has Jack McClelland become less nationalistic, a lesser Canadian since last fall, or has he changed his mind about keeping Canadian culture in Canadian hands? Obviously, the answer to those questions is "No."

It's just that, today, Jack McClelland is faced with cold facts, economic necessity and that in the fall, when he made those brave statements while somebody else went under, he was not. Idealism and realism never mix; and idealists have a tendency to have a [illegible] mouth.

If Jack McClelland is forced out of the business, it will be a tremendous loss to the Canadian publishing industry. There are few men in this country who have contributed as much as he and his company have to our cultural life. Canadian literature owes a great debt to McClelland and Stewart Ltd.

But this did not change economic facts.

There are only so many Canadian readers in Canadian literature. For a publishing company to survive, so many books have to be sold. Every reader who shudders at the thought of McClelland and Stewart Ltd. becoming an American subsidiary should think of how many Canadian - written, published and printed books he has bought lately. Every time we buy, say, Truman Capote [illegible] stead of, say, Hugh Garner, [illegible] contribute to the demise of Canadian publishing industry.

Moonlighting and the Work Situation

Editor,

There are many causes of unemployment.

In our opinion one cause is the colossal amount of "moonlighting" that exists in Canada. (We are judging by this area.)

The majority of these moonlighters hold steady well - paid jobs. They deprive men and students from obtaining employment.

We know of ex-RCAF men in good jobs, receiving a service pension, moonlighting in a large shopping centre, hotels, gas stations, LCBO, etc.

There will be two large shopping Malls opening in the near future, what an opportunity for moonlighters!

Financial circumstances force many a man to look for a part time job, but for most of them it's just greed.

It is not only a large percentage of the nearby Air Base personnel that moonlight, but men employed in well - established companies who have had years of steady employment. They have moonlighted for years.

Partly to blame are the companies who employ moonlighters. Are they getting cheap labor? Do they pay minimum rates?

Partly to blame is their full-time employers, allowing them to moonlight. Should be in company rules-- One man, one job.

Can moonlighters give their employers a fair day's work, I have not found it so. These men when filing their income tax forms must include their sources of income, so, therefore the government must know who holds two jobs.

If the rule of "One Man—One Job" were to prevail, there would be more work available, and less people on welfare, etc.

A Pox on Women's Lib Says A Wife and Mother Who Tells It Like It Is

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

The male employers and coworkers I have known since entering the working world 23 years ago have not been fair to me! The males I dated in my youth and the men friends of my adult years have been unfair too! But, most crushing of all — my husband has been downright cruel to me! They have accepted me as being female and have treated me as such. But no more!

The Women's Liberation Movement has made it very clear that, while I was not aware of it, I have been suppressed, repressed, used and abused.

As a full-time employee I have had to "read, write, spell and remember" — but I didn't know I was not supposed to enjoy being literate and dependable!

As a wife and mother I have been "counsellor, disciplinarian, bookkeeper, cook, chauffeur, nurse, defender of the family name, do - it - myselfer and a good (I hope) listener". And in my sheer ignorance I have been unaware that I should not enjoy the many roles I chose (voluntarily) when I became a wife and mother. The deceitful men in my life never enlightened me and there I have been complacently accepting the many indignities listed above — and, to my abject shame — finding satisfaction from it!

But Women's Lib has opened a whole new world to me. No more tending sick children; no more teaching my girls to knit, sew, cook and budget to run a household. No more mother-son talks; no more tolerating kisses or compliments from my husband, or listening to his chatter or praise.

I am no longer a mother and wife — I am a woman! Women's Lib has made my whole prior existence meaningless and bereft of any pride in accomplishment. I am a failure—I have gained nothing from my years of effort except children, husband, home and deep (but now I find, false) satisfaction in my ability to cope with family life and work outside my home.

Mr. Hockley has taken up the cudgel on behalf of poor exploited womanhood. But hold off a minute — the point of Women's Lib is to do it themselves — how dare a mere man fight our battles for us?

Contrary to popular beliefs, women are not different from men! Women's Lib hopes to prove the accuracy of that statement. We actually enjoy opening our own doors, buying our own flowers, sending ourselves gifts of love on anniversaries, and holding our own coats.

We may even ask for a government subsidy to build our own shrines where we can worship our new free images while our husbands are in hospital giving birth to our new offspring.

Vive Les Femmes Libres!

Subsidizing The Spadina Expressway

An open letter to the Citizens of Belleville, in care of The Intelligencer.

• • •

Were you asked?

The Ontario Municipal Board today, on a split decision, decided to approve the Spadina Expressway for Metro Toronto at an estimated cost of $237,000,000. You, as a citizen of Ontario, will pay 50 per cent of this amount — i.e. $118,500,000. Will it benefit you? You have every right to ask.

Meanwhile, thank you for your gift (even though some of us are looking the gift-horse in the mouth).

Who do you ask? Your Member in the Provincial house.

City's Road Network Needs Streamlining

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

Canadian National Railways are asking the City for a dumping site in north-eastern Belleville, and this seems to me to be an excellent opportunity for one of those good, old-fashioned dickers that many people enjoy.

If the council approves a dumping site, why not have something in return; another railway crossing east of Cannifton Road?

This morning I drove directly, by the shortest route possible, from the Haig Road crossing to the Cannifton Road crossing and what mileage do you think the car registered? Maybe I won't be believed, but my speedometer said five point eight five miles — 5.85 miles.

Only those who constantly drive miles out of their way, only to be funnelled through our notorious Cannifton Road Bottleneck, have any idea of the absurdity of the present set-up.

India has indicated it is likely to withdraw from the committee following the Nigerian move.

The main African opponent at Singapore to British sale of armaments to South Africa was not Nigeria.

The most criticism came from Zambia and Tanzania, which are not members of the committee.

Prime Minister Trudeau at Singapore said Britain had a perfect right to act in what it considered its own self-interest. But he added that a British arms sale might result in breakup of the Commonwealth and that Canada would not remain as a member of any exclusive white club.

QUESTION: Please name some of the main tourist attractions along the east coast of Florida for adults and children, and also the admission charges if possible.

ANSWER: You can tour the Space Centre at Cape Kennedy for $2.50 adults, $1.25 youth or 50 cents for children.

Pirates World is south of Fort Lauderdale, at Dania. It costs $3.75 for adults and $2.75 for children but there are 110 acres of exhibits and rides and they are all free.

Cypress Gardens is a great attraction if you like water skiing. Then there are the Parrot Jungle, Seaquarium, Monkey Jungle, Wax Museum. Hialeah Race Tract at Miami Beach.

The Lion Country Safari is a 640 acre park near West Palm Beach. This is interesting for children; admission for adults $2.50, children, $1.25. Here you can drive through the park and observe lions, chimps, elephants, rhinos and giraffes.

At Fort Lauderdale you can take a three-hour sightseeing cruise on the Jungle Queen. This costs $3 for adults and $1.50 for children. They have two trips a day from the Bahia Mar Yacht Centre. There are 290 miles of palm-lined lagoons, canals and rivers. As the Jungle Queen sails along, a guide will point out the well known mansions of the famous and identify the local plant life.
